Poetry.

HELP THE POOR.

Now this is the season
When those who believe
'Tis surely more blessed
To give than receive,
(Whose blessings will follow
Through life we are sure,)
Are ready and generous
In aiding the poor.

A BOOK HUNTER.

A cup of coffee, eggs and rolls
Sustain him on his morning strolls;
Unconscious of the passer-by,
He trudges on with downcast eye;
He wears a queer old hat and coat,
Suggestive of a style remote;
His manner is preoccupied—
A shambling gait from side to side,
For him the stock, bright window shop
Is all in vain; he doth not stop.
His thoughts are fixed on dusty shelves,
Where musty volumes hide themselves—
Rare prints of poetry and prose,
And quaintly lettered folios,
Perchance a parchment manuscript,
In some forgotten corner slipped,
Or monk-illumined missal, bound
In vellum, with brass clasps around—
These are the picture things that throng
His mind the while he walks along.

A dingy street, a cellar dim,
With book-lined walls, suffices him.
The dust is white upon his sleeves;
He turns the yellow, dog-eared leaves
With just the same religious look
That priests give to the Holy Book.
He does not need the stifling air
If so he finds a treasure there.
He knows rare books, like precious wines,
Are hidden where the sun ne'er shines;
For him delicious flavors dwell
In books as in old Muscatel;
He finds in features of the type
A clue to prove the grape was ripe.
And when he leaves the dismal place,
Behold, a smile lights up his face!
Upon his cheeks a genial glow—
Within his hand Boccaccio,
A first edition worn with age,

GIRLS, DON'T MARRY IN HASTE.

Though you may love fondly
With heart and with soul,
Keep well the affections
Within your control;
And, while you are anxious
No minutes to waste,
This maxim remember:
"Don't marry in haste!"

In coming and going
Abroad in the land,
One meets with love's ruins,
Like beacons they stand!
They say to the thoughtless
In many a clime:
"Don't be in a hurry;
Give love ample time."

"My lover may change, then,"
The maidens reply.
"Well, better beforehand
Than after," we cry.
True love's like a diamond,
Mere fancy is paste,
Then, girls, this remember:
"Don't marry in haste."

If you tarry awhile
In your prudence and pride
Ere you enter life's garden
As bridegroom and bride,
You'll learn of each other,
And if both prove true,
You'll love him forever,
As he will love you.

Sweet girls, in your beauty,
Shy maiden or belle,
From the lords of creation
Choose wisely and well.
There are sweethearts in plenty,
And some to your taste:
But, dears, when you've chosen,
"Don't marry in haste."

A SERMON IN RHYME.

If you have a friend, worth loving,
Love him. Yes, and let him know
That you love him, ere life's evening
Tinge his brow with sunset glow,
Why should good words ne'er be said
Of a friend—till he is dead?

If you hear a song that thrills you,
Sung by any child of song,
Praise it. Do not let the singer
Wait deserved praises long.
Why should one who thrills your heart
Lack the joy you may impart?

If you hear a prayer that moves you,
By its humble, pleading tone
Join it. Do not let the seeker
Bow before his God alone.
Why should not your brother share
The strength of "two or three" in prayer?

If you see the hot tears falling
From a brother's weeping eyes,
Share them. And by kindly sharing
Own your kinship with the skies,
Why should any one be glad
When a brother's heart is sad?

If a silvery laugh goes rippling
Through the sunshine on his face,
Share it. 'Tis the wise man's saying—
For both grief and joy a place.
There's health and goodness in the mirth
In which an honest laugh has birth.

If your work is made more easy
By a friendly, helping hand,
Say so. Speak out brave and truly,
Ere the darkness veil the land.
Should a brother workman dear
Falter for a word of cheer?

Scatter thus your seeds of kindness,
All enriching as you go—
Leave them. Trust the harvest Giver,
He will make each seed to grow.
So until its happy end,
Your life shall never lack a friend.

THE SEWING GIRL.

There was a cheerless fire in an empty room,
On a cold December day,
And the biting wind, through a broken pane,
Had cruelly forced its way;
The chill of coming death was without,
The sky looked gloomy and drear,
The feathery snow-flakes fell thick to earth,
Meet shroud for the dying year.

And ladies wrapped in warm furs went past,
And men muffled up to the chin,
And the heart of the city beat quick and fast,
And louder grew the din;
And children went up and down the street,
And tiny snow-balls tossed,
And delicate women and gray-haired men
Rejoiced in the coming frost.

Still by the cheerless fire in that empty room,
On that cold December day,
There sat and sewed from morn to night,
One prematurely gray;
She rises some hours before the dawn,
From a short and troubled doze,
And through winter's cold and summer's heat,
She sits in that room and sews.

She hears the sound of no friendly voice,
She meets no loving smile,
More lone in that peopled solitude
Than Crusoe in his isle.
She sees the gay and the happy pass,
And she hears the ceaseless stir,
And she knows not one in those laughing groups
Bestows a thought on her.

And there, from morn to eve, she plies
That lot of [illegible],
And grudges the few short moments she gives
To snatch a scanty meal.
To make up lost time more rapidly move
Those fingers, shriveled and thin,
For she measures her life by the yards she sews,
Her eyes are [illegible] in.

And her thoughts; oh, who can tell her thoughts,
As the needle goes out and in;
Though calm and motionless, there she sits,
Her mind is busy within;
For many a bitter question then,
Her overcharged heart will ask,
As with aching head, and dimmed eyes,
She plods at her weary task:

"If Joy and Pain, in this nether world,
Must fairly balanced be,
Oh why not some of the pain to them,
And some of the joy to me?"
But she [illegible] bending down,
And knelt, and I heard her say:
"The night cometh when no man can work,
Let me work while it is day."

MISCELLANEOUS READING

AUNT BECKY'S BEAU.

A NEW YEAR'S SKETCH.

Aunt Becky, who has not a nephew or niece in the world, but is aunt to everybody, pressed me so hard that I remained over New Year's day at her house. Aunt Becky was the woman who was present on salary the morning I was born, and who blew in my face and helped me to catch the breath that I didn't know how to catch alone; so I feel that there was some truth in the yarns that they used to tell me about Aunt Becky being my "other mother." She remained at our house so long that I had begun to toddle and knew how to feel deeply grieved when she went away to be married to Duncan Boggs, the well to do Tamarack farmer, who was killed by a threshing machine the next summer.

Yesterday, as we sat by her warm fire eating doughnuts and drinking tea, there came a rap at the side door. Bobby, a bright lad whom Aunt Becky adopted from a foundlings' home some seven or eight years ago, ran to the window and peeped out.

"It's Deacon Podson," said the boy, loud enough, I am sure, for the deacon to hear it his ears had not been muffled in a long, crocheted tippet that went around his neck and over his head nobody dare guess how many times.

When Aunt Becky went to the door to let the deacon in, Bobby ran up to me and whispered, "That's ma's beau."

I had met the deacon before. He has been Aunt Becky's beau for some ten years now, and I have met him at her house on the occasion of each of my annual visits. Moreover I have often thought Aunt Becky would like to marry him if he only had spunk enough to ask her about it.

Deacon Podson is a tall man, with shoulders as round as Atlas', and perhaps from a somewhat similar cause, since the affairs of Tamarack, which amount in his estimation to a whole world of affairs, rest mainly on him. He is chairman of the village board, one of the school directors, chief pillar of the church, and master of ceremonies at all times and in all places. I don't wonder that he is round shouldered. For five years, to my knowledge, he has been "nigh onto sixty," which leads me to believe that he is not far from that age, either one side or the other of it. As he came into the room he began to unroll and unravel and untwist the long tippet from his neck, speaking not a word. Then he took off his outside coat and laid it, all snowy, over the coal box in the corner. Presently he happened to think to take off his hat, and he held it in his hand as he said:

"How d' you do?"

"How d' you do?" said Aunt Becky.

"Uncle Ben is here," said little Bobby, calling the deacon's attention to me.

"How d'y do!" said the deacon, standing with his hat in his hand, and looking like a great hulk of a boy about to speak a piece to his first audience.

"Won't you take a cheer," asked Aunt Becky, pushing a big rocker near the stove.

"No, I can sit here just as well," replied the deacon confusedly, as he let himself down on the corner of the coal box.

"You'd better take the cheer," urged Aunt Becky.

"Wal, I don't care if I do."

Aunt Becky drew up her old-fashioned sewing chair, and the two put their feet on the stove hearth, pretty near each other. A long, embarrassing silence followed, during which Deacon Podson warmed his hands by the stove and rubbed them together, with a few grunts and phews, as if he were very cold.

"Is it so cold out?" I asked.

"Tol'able cold," said the deacon.

Another long silence.

"How hev you been?" asked Aunt Becky.

"Oh, tol'able."

After more oppressive silence, the deacon arose from his chair and said: "Wal, I just come over to say, 'Wish you happy New Year.'"

"Wal, wal, you hain't a goin yit," said Aunt Becky. "Law sakes! you hain't but just come."

The deacon sat down again. He hadn't intended to go, but the poor man had to say something.

I began to think it was an occasion when two are company and three or four are none, so I told Bobby if he would come out in the kitchen I would play checkers with him.

"I guess you don't remember it's New Year's day, do you, Benny?" said Aunt Becky.

"Well," said I, with a pretty good imitation of surprise and shame, "that's so: I declare I came near playing checkers, never once thinking it was New Year's day." How I lied! Only I didn't know that checkers were tabooed on such occasions in Tamarack or I should never have suggested the game.

"We can play dominoes, though, can't we, Uncle Ben?"

I wasn't dead sure whether dominoes were in the prescribed list, so I pretended not to hear Bobby.

"Ma, dominoes are all right, ain't they?"

"Dominoes!" I echoed, as if I had just caught Bobby's question. Oh, yes; dominoes are all right."

So Bobby and I went to the kitchen, and as I passed through the door I left it open a little, for I was resolved to see how a widower of sixty and a widow of fifty odd would make love after ten years of courtship. I drew the table near the door where I could hear and see what was going on in the sitting room, and Bobby brought out the harmless dominoes. I made so many errors that the little fellow had no trouble in beating me, which made him happy to continue, and so served my purpose.

Deacon Podson sat there twirling his hat and looking into the fire. Aunt Becky leaned back comfortably in her chair and looked at the ceiling. Not a word was spoken for a long, long time. Presently Aunt Becky began to rock back and forth and hum good old "Coronation" softly and slowly and, after a few measures, Deacon Podson broke in with his cracked bass, out of tune and out of time, but somehow, after all, in pleasing harmony. For a long time they sat and hummed that simple old tune, the thumping of Aunt Becky's loose rocker marking the time, her voice creaking and scraping over the highest notes, but her heart full of the sweet, peaceful music. I thought she ought to be married, and that Deacon Podson ought always to stay right there and blunder his bass notes in, rough though they were, to give tonic to Aunt Beck's weaker tones.

Time sped along as the two old lovers sat and sang, yet the deacon, who had come only to wish a happy New Year, made no sign of going. The sun had traveled quarter round the house just to get a peep in at the little west window and see this comfortable old couple, and the sight was worth all the trouble of subduing the snow storm for the purpose. Then, when the sun had dodged behind the leafless orchard and finally hidden his big, red face behind the little knoll where sleep the dead of Tamarack, the scene became even more peaceful. The warm glow of the fire filled the room with lovers' light, and I saw Deacon Podson's hand steal over and close upon the long, slender fingers of his satisfied old sweetheart. This was all. No rapturous embraces, no lingering kisses spoiled the peaceful scene. Aunt Becky's face, touched by the gleam from the window in the stove, seemed so full of tender love and gentle satisfaction that I said to myself we young people do not know what real, comfortable love is. Never again can I believe that true love does not run smoothly. It is the heyday passion of youth that finds obstructions in its course, but the steady current of Becky's love as she sat there hand in hand with Deacon Podson, flowed on as grandly and serenely as a mighty river out of torrent time.

At last the darkness closed in upon them and with Bobby fast asleep in his chair I had only to listen. Was it wicked thus to play the eavesdropper? Perhaps so. I thought so; and I doubt not that was my prevailing reason for doing so.

"How long is it since Sister Podson passed away?" asked Becky, with quivering tenderness of tone.

"It's nigh on sixteen years now," replied the deacon, with a heavy sigh, which was echoed by Aunt Becky.

"Sister Podson was such a dear, good soul," said Aunt Becky, softly. "It seemed a pity we couldn't a' kept her always. But God's will be done."

"Yes; God's will be done," repeated Deacon Podson, with a deep-drawn sigh. "She was so lovin'-like and good!" said the dear old woman, without a shade of that jealousy which shriveled the heartless compliments of younger women under such conditions.

"Yes, Sister Boggs, she was——"

"Call me Becky, Deacon Podson."

"An' you'll call me Josh?"

"Yes, J-J-Joshua," and I know Aunt Becky put her gingham apron up to her face. Ten years of courtship, and I doubt not this was the first time she had addressed him by his Christian name. I thought surely the deacon would see his chance and throw both arms around her neck, fold her to his big breast and say: "My Becky, my own, my own Becky." That is about what I should have done, but Deacon Podson is older than I, and has passed the gushing point of life.

"I hev been a-thinkin' about somethin' a big, long time, Sister Bo—that is B-Becky. I've been thinkin' thet——"

What on earth could the man be waiting for? Had he fainted? Had his tongue been paralyzed by the burden thrown upon it? I strained my ear, but could catch no sound. Long, long, how provokingly long the silence dragged. At last I heard a kiss—yes, I could not have been mistaken, it must have been a kiss—and then a few soft sobs that told of tears of joy in Aunt Becky's eyes. Had their souls read each other in the darkness, and flowed together in eloquent silence as their cheeks lay close against each other? It must have been so, for after Deacon Podson had gone away, Aunt Becky stood and looked out of the window a long time; and when she turned back and lighted the lamp to put Bobby to bed there were tears in her eyes and a happy smile on her lips that plainly said a blessing from the god of love had fallen on her heart.

NEW YEAR'S CALLS.

WELCOME CALLS.

A call made by a friend who owes you thirty dollars and desires to pay up.

A call made by another ditto with a present of a gold watch or forty dollar ulster.

A call made by your rich uncle from whom you have expectations, who never leaves without "remembering" you.

A call made by your ditto aunt who hopes you keep good hours, etc., and leaves you plus a fat check.

A call made by your other aunt with your pretty female cousin with her.

UNWELCOME CALLS.

A call made by your tailor regarding that little account.

A call made by your best girl's father, who is of strong temperance proclivities, and, of course, surprises you in a Bacchanalian orgie with your friends.

A call made by your landlady to inform you that she intends to raise your rent.

A call made by your best friend, the bore, who talks you half wild and never leaves inside of two hours.

HOW THEY GET THERE.

Did you ever listen to a young couple working up to that point of affectionate intimacy by which they call one another by their Christian names?

"It has been a lovely party, hasn't it, Miss Jackson?"

"Lovely, Mr. Wilkins."

"I have known you a long time, Miss Jackson?"

"And I have known you quite a while."

"I've often heard my sister speak of you."

"And my brother is always talking about you."

"Is he? I hear so much about you that I feel quite at home with you."

"It's a lovely night, isn't it, Mr. Wilkins?"

"Beautiful. I think Edith's such a pretty name."

"Do you. I don't like it."

"Edith."

"What did you say?"

"Oh, nothing. I was merely repeating the name."

"I don't like all men's names. I like some. I like Philip and Ferdinand and—"

"What do you think of George?"

"That's your name. George!"

"I beg your pardon."

"Oh, nothing. I was only repeating the name."

"What a lovely night it is, isn't it, Miss Edith?"

"Oh, there! George Wilkins, what did you let me slip on that cobble-stone for?"

"'Pon my word, I didn't do it, Miss Edith."

"Well, we are at home, or I am Mr. George!"

"I am very sorry."

"So am I. I'm so much obliged for your escort; I've had such a lovely time."

"And so have I."

"Good night, Mr. Wilkins."

"Good night, Miss Jackson."

"Good night."

"Good night."

"Good night—Edith."

"Good night—G-e-o-r-g-e."

Full soon will urchin childhood
Upon the sidewalk go,
And with its hands as they
Make snowy balls of snow;
Then to and fro will hurl them
In pretty merrie play,
Until they break a window,
And wisely run away.

A CHRISTMAS SYMBOL.

As birds to sun-land wing their way in blithesome bevies and with song, so from the gift-land, Christmas-day, flow tokens that life's joys prolong. The season's symbol, like a charm, with and delight is intoxicating; and plainest gifts the heart will warm be they but found within a stocking!  Time can destroy the dearest whim; the sweetest joy age can bedim; but on life's way all love to pause each year a day with Santa Claus. Tho' heads be bowed with weight of years, and onward crowd life's saddening cares, the mem'ry turns at Christmas-tide in grooves of childhood joys to glide.  Then hang the stockings—great and small—for chimney sprite will know them all! He reads the wish in every mind, and tries the wished-for aye to find. Yes! hang the stocking — young and old! Let Saint Nick's legends be re-told! Let old heads play the Christmas parts, which prove that naughty can age young hearts!

THE JEALOUS MAN.

"All women profess to hate men who are jealous," writes a noble belle, "but in this they belie themselves extravagantly. No woman ever loved a man violently whom she was unable to affect with a sting of the green eyed monster. It is true that some women are fond of complacent, easy-going and impassionate men, but as a rule such fellows can never inspire the genuine emotion. It is your hot headed, passionate and impulsive men who can drive a woman to distraction. All women are more or less sentimental, and so are all good men, for that matter. Sentiment has nothing to do with complacency. A man must be more or less hot-headed, he must be more or less jealous, and more or less passionate, to inspire a woman with the love that burns. The man who wouldn't kiss a woman when she tells him with her eyes that her lips are yearning is an idiot. I don't mean by this that kissing is at all necessary, or even proper, but it is certainly a part and parcel of the art of love making. I believe in the rough old verse that dear little Lotta used to sing about kissing:"

"Nobody is above it;
The old maids love it,
And the widows have a finger in the pie;
Some people are so haughty
That they say it's very naughty
But you bet your life they do it on the sly."

To live a life noble and true,
Does grander work than miracles do.

This is the season when a twenty-five-cent man pays three dollars in a raffle for a fifty-cent turkey.

Every man has a role in life,
And has had since time began,
But after all the baker's roll
Is the best for a hungry man.

"Name a clause in our national constitution," said a teacher just before Christmas. "Santa Claus!" shouted a happy-eyed urchin.

Oh, for a girl that will not flirt,
A woman kind and true;
A wife to sew buttons on your shirt,
When she's nothing else to do.

At this season of the year the longest and widest stocking is the most fashionable for children. It is called the chimney style, and is manufactured solely by Santa Claus.

Classical Anecdote.—Said Cicero to Atticus: "Shall you hang your stocking up to-night at your father's Lares?" Atticus pithily replied: "No, I have hung my summer toga at my uncle's."

The current "catch" is to ask your friend if Christmas and New Year's come in the same year. Not a few people will promptly answer, "No, of course they don't," and half a minute later they feel sick over their own mental weakness.

Delia had a little bonnet
Just as big as George's hand—
Horticultural fairs upon it,
Like rose gardens in the land.
Oh, it was so neat and little,
Jaunty, dainty, "made to kill"—
But that charming little bonnet
Cost a fifty dollar bill.

Johnny—"What is the matter, ma?"

Mrs. Clack—"That's what I'd like to know, Johnny. I've tried and tried and tried to get that old speckled hen to set, but she won't do it, but stands up when I tie her on the nest."

Johnny—"Well, ma, maybe she's got a boil?"

"John," said a Philadelphia wife, "I suppose we will have turkey for New Year's. "No, dear," was the reply; "we cannot afford it." "I thought not; but I'll make the neighbors believe we had. I'll open one of the bed-ticks, take out a few feathers and scatter them around the yard."

A Chicago young man, in a rash moment, told his girl that if she would hang up her stocking on Christmas Eve he would fill it to the brim with something nice. He has since seen her stocking, and is still undecided whether to get into it himself or to buy her a sewing machine.

The man who presented his wife last New Year's with a dinner-kettle in which to put up his dinner on work-day mornings, is puzzled to determine what gift would be most appropriate this year. He has almost decided on a briarwood pipe for his wife to fill for him during future hours of recreation at home.

A man telegraphed on Christmas eve to friends in a New England town: "Cannot be down until Saturday—foreman drunk." When he went down town he was astonished by the hilarious manner in which his friends received him. It came out that the telegram when received read: "Cannot come down before Thursday forenoon—drunk."

Charley wanted to give Clara a New Year's present, but couldn't make up his mind what it should be; so the next time he called he frankly told her the difficulty under which he was laboring. "Want to make me a present, Charley!" Clara exclaimed, in well-disguised astonishment. "Why, Charley, you forget yourself." Charley took the hint and offered himself on the spot.

The Constitutionalist.

W. L. FORCE & A. L. FORCE,
EDITORS AND PROPRIETORS.

HALE AND HEARTY.

It has often been proclaimed by Republican editors and speakers that the Democratic party was dead.

Dead, did they gladly shout? Yes, dead, and that its opponents would rule the realm for a hundred years to come.

Jeffersonian Democracy dead!

Shades of prophetic evil!

Doubtless such prophets desired and still ardently desire to follow to the grave the grand old party of popular rights, but sad for them, yet happy for the people, the funeral procession stubbornly refuses to move.

Democracy dead.

If so, the liveliest corpse this world ever witnessed is abroad in the land, causing political sinners to quake with fear.

Suppose the party of Jefferson and Jackson had actually expired.

What a carnival of joy would be inaugurated by aristocrats, monopolists and corruptionists from one end of the country to the other, and how Kings, Queens and Emperors of liberty crushed Europe would dance with delight!

Democracy was not born to die.

Mark that and be sedate!

Our party has had repeated falls on treacherous political ice, but never fractured a bone. It may have been slightly affected with malaria, produced by undue exposure to the cold, but to-day it is hale and hearty, and as strong to battle for correct principles and honest government as it was three score years ago.

Under the wise leadership of President Cleveland the Democratic party was never in a more healthy condition than now. It not only enjoys sound Constitutional health, but with sincerity and intelligence of aim is busily engaged scattering the blessings of peace and prosperity among all the people.

Eighteen hundred and eighty-six dawns, and Democracy, with smiling face and kindly heart, wishes every American, high or low, rich or poor, native born or naturalized, white or colored, Democratic, Republican, Greenbacker or Prohibitionist, a happy, HAPPY, HAPPY NEW YEAR!

NEW JERSEY'S SCHOOLS.

The annual report of State Superintendent Chapman is nearly finished. The following interesting statistics are taken from it; State school tax appropriated by the State, $1,424,244; additional State appropriation, $100,000; township school tax, $30,870 84; interest of surplus revenue, $37,324 25; district and city tax for teachers' salaries, $296,187 84; district and city tax for building school houses, $568,388 68; total amount for maintaining the schools, $1,880,626 93; total amount including that raised for building, $2,449,015 61; value of school property, $6,832,926.

Cost of Education—the average cost of each pupil, calculated in the school census, is $5 46; average cost for pupils calculated on average attendance, $13 21. There are 837 male teachers in New Jersey, and 2,850 female teachers. The average monthly salary of males is $63 56, and of females $36 30. There are 531 school buildings in the State, valued at from $1,000 to $5,000; 91 are worth from $5,000 to $10,000; 69 are worth from $10,000 to $20,000; 52 are worth from $20,000 to $40,000, and 26 are worth more than $40,000 each. There are 366,312 school children in the State.

LAST YEAR'S PROMINENT DEAD.

Among the distinguished dead last year were ex-President General Grant, Vice President Hendricks, ex-Senators Gwinn, Fenton, Sharon and Toombs, ex-Secretary Thompson, ex-Governor B. Gratz Brown, Cardinal McCloskey, Dr. Stephen H. Tyng, Dr. S. I. Prime, Dr. Benjamin F. Tefft, Sir Moses Montefiore, Dr. Nachtigal, the African explorer; Franz Abt, the composer; Generals McClellan, McDowell and McDougal, John McCullough, the tragedian; Colonel Burnaby, Dr. Jos. Alden, Schuyler Colfax, Richard Grant White, F. J. Fargus, ("Hugh Conway") Mrs. Helen Hunt Jackson, Hinton Rowan Helper, H. W. Shaw, ("Josh Billings") William H. Vanderbilt and Dr. John C. Draper.

Congressman Green's first vote was on the adoption of the new rules. He voted right—in favor of economy and reform.

Preparations for the National Convention of third and fourth-class postmasters in Chicago February 15th, 1886, are almost complete. The organizers are out in an elaborate circular in which the importance of the convention is urged and the needs of the postmaster outlined. It will be impressed upon Congress to pay rent, light and fuel for third and fourth-class offices. The circular declares that the press of the country have generally pronounced in favor of the movement.

The declination of Mr. John Bigelow to accept the appointment of Assistant Treasurer of the United States at New York is a surprise as well as a disappointment. Mr. Bigelow is so eminently qualified for the place that the excellence of the appointment was universally commended. No reason for the declination is given, save that the appointee considers the risks connected with the administration of the office as too great. It is not unlikely that Mr. Bigelow's literary habits and tastes would have considered that close surveillance so necessary to the proper performance of the trust, as irksome, and as he has not full liberty under the civil service and tenure of office laws to choose his own subordinates, he is not willing to assume the responsibility for the acts of the agents of others.

The Coming Legislative Session Promises to be one of the most interesting since the inauguration of general legislation. The Daily True American, published at the Capital, has fairly earned a reputation for full and impartial reports, which will be continued, accompanied by carefully prepared summaries of all bills introduced on the day previous, and fearless criticism of all important measures, thus affording an opportunity for ascertaining the position of all matters before the Legislature. We will send the daily paper during the session to any address, postage prepaid, for One Dollar and Fifty Cents. Address, NAAR, DAY & NAAR, Trenton, N. J.

The bang is a Turkish invention.

The newest imported dresses are notable for the plainness and simplicity of their designs.

Paradise nets and edgings come in wool and the Angora styles, in the colors of Persian shawls or scarfs.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

The subject for study next week is, "The Prophecies Concerning Christ found in the Old Testament."

Commencing next Tuesday evening, a new course of study will be taken up that will be of great benefit to the members.

The quarterly examination of the training class was held on Tuesday evening last and was of much interest to all present.

There will be no meeting of the Junior Society Boys Branch to-day (Friday) but all are urged to be present next week, particularly the choir.

Mr. F. J. Miller was the recipient of a beautiful and costly lamp on Wednesday evening of last week, presented by his educational class as a slight token of their esteem and appreciation of his faithful work. It is unnecessary to state that Mr. Miller was much gratified and greatly pleased with the gift.

The semi-annual election of the Senior Society Boys' Branch, was held on Monday evening last; the officers are as follows: President, Fred Cuthbert; Vice President, Frank Searles; Chaplain, F. L. Willis; Secretary, Edward Perine; Treasurer, Frank Hubbard; Sergeant-at-arms, Frank Smith. The society decided that officers should be exempt from all dues. It was also decided to give an entertainment at a near date for the purpose of replenishing the treasury.

The library committee have recently added the following to the Library Reading Room: N. Y. Daily Herald and Sunday School Times; and to the library; "In His Name," by E. E. Hale; "Sunrise," by Wm. Black; "Boots and Saddles," by Mrs. Custer; Vol. 1, "Twenty Years of Congress," by J. G. Blaine; Vol. 1, "Personal Memoirs," by U. S. Grant; "Self Help," by S. Smiles; "Old and New Testament History," by Dr. Smith; "Natural Law in the Spiritual World," by H. Drummond. A number of books have been ordered and will soon be ready for use.

The publications found in the reading room are as follows: N. Y. World, N. Y. Tribune, N. Y. Herald, N. From Washington.

The President will receive on New Year's Day, according to the usual programme, the public being admitted from one to two o'clock. He will be assisted by Miss Cleveland and the ladies of the Cabinet. Miss Cleveland's weekly Saturday afternoon receptions, from three until five o'clock, will begin on Saturday, January 9, and continue through the season. She will be home to her friends on Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays, from three until four o'clock.

President Cleveland, like President Arthur, disregards the rule which many Presidents have observed, not to accept invitations outside the White House. On Christmas night he was the guest of Secretary Manning.

The vacancy at West Point created by the resignation of Allan D. Raymond, cadet at-large, has been filled by the appointment of William F. Sicard, a son of Commodore Sicard, Chief of Ordnance of the Navy.

The Commissioner of Indian Affairs says the Government has no official information of an attack upon an Indian camp near El Paso, Texas, in which eleven Indians are reported to have been killed. The Commissioner doubts the truth of the reports.

The thirty days of mourning for the late Vice President Hendricks have expired, and the departments and other public buildings in Washington have been divested of their mourning draping. The hook and ladder force was required to remove the black cloth from the tall pillars of the White House portico.

The President has approved the bills granting a pension to Mrs. Grant, and for the removal of the political disabilities of Gen. Lawton, of Georgia.

The Second Comptroller has decided that soldiers honorably discharged for promotion are entitled to the bounty provided for in the act of July 22, 1861.

Hackensack has three residents over one hundred years old—Miss Sophia Earl, who resides with Mr. H. Adams, Main street; Mrs. Thornton, mother of the wife of Mr. J. M. Gamewell, patentee of the Gamewell fire-alarm system, who was one hundred and two last Spring; and Mr. Aaron Bogert, of State street, who celebrated his hundredth birthday last Summer. All are in the enjoyment of comparative good health.

FANWOOD.

Town Committee of Fanwood Township met Dec. 23, 1885, at 4 p. m., at Excelsior Hall. All of the members were present. Minutes of last meeting approved as read. Treasurer reported as follows: Balance stated at meeting Dec. 5, 1885, $55.43; paid out by order of Committee, $30.21, leaving a balance of $25.22; received from E. C. F. Carter, $130.00; from William Hetfield, Collector of taxes, $1,400; total, $1,555.22. Settlements were made with overseers of the various road districts, and the following bills were ordered paid: F. Hosinger, overseer road district No. 1, $61.70; Hezekiah Hand, road district No. 2, $103.85; Frederick Happel, road district No. 3, $63.80; George Kyte, road district No. 4, balance due $156.50; J. D. French, road district No. 5, $18.05; Isaac Lambert, road district No. 6, $22.20; Dr. A. Scheirenbeck, road district No. 7, $36.26; Lambert DeCamp, road district No. 8, $57.50, and bill for Board approved by Overseer of Poor, $25.20; Henry Cook, Commissioner of Appeals, $3; Thomas Cleaver, Commissioner of Appeals, three dollars; John Robison, balance due for assessing taxes 1885, $105.39; Wm. D. Johnson, on account services as Township Committee, $15; F. W. Westcott, M. D., for medicine and attendance on family of Stewart France, by order of Board of Health, $25. The Township Clerk was instructed to obtain copies of the dedication of all roads that are in Fanwood Township, that are on file among the records of Westfield Township. L. W. Miller, Treasurer of the Committee, was authorized to purchase necessary stationery. On motion, adjourned to the call of the Chairman.

Fanwood Council, No. 744, Royal Arcanum, held their annual meeting on Tuesday, Dec. 22, 1885, at 8 p. m., and elected officers for the ensuing year as follows: John Robison, Regent; F. W. Westcott, Vice Regent; Thos. W. Franklin, Orator; Chas. Haberly, Past Regent; Norman Dunn, Secretary; Rev. J. H. Parks, Collector; Thomas E. Mead, Treasurer; Roland C. Treadwell, Chaplain; Wm. H. Cory, Guide; J. A. F. Simpson, Warden; Jas. E. Fancher, Sentry. Chas. A. Smith, George Kyte, F. Westcott, Trustees, and Charles Haberly, Representative. The Council was instituted in March 1885, with eleven charter members, just enough to fill the offices required by the laws of the order. Since that time it has had a moderate but steady growth; has now twenty-eight members, and has become self-sustaining.

State Items.

Jersey City collected $83,730.21 in taxes last week. The water rates and assessments for the same period were $10,774 22.

The proprietors of the Boonton iron works, which have been idle for twelve years, have announced their intention to start the works again this week.

The railroad company has notified the city fathers of Perth Amboy that if the city insist upon gates being erected at the crossings they will run many of their trains direct to South Amboy.

Twenty-two prisoners serving terms in the State Prison were released last week by the Court of Pardons, in time to enjoy their Christmas dinners among friends. Among the number thus pardoned was James Lynch of Union county.

Mr. William K. Gaston, for forty years a resident of Somerville, died on Friday morning. The deceased was eighty years of age and was highly esteemed for his excellent qualities. He was buried in the cemetery along the banks of the Raritan River, at Somerville. He leaves a widow and a son and daughter to mourn his loss.

Thomas and Susan Francisco, the negro couple who plundered and burned Frederick Morris' house near New Brunswick, about a week ago, were on Monday handcuffed together and taken to State Prison for ten and five years respectively. As he was leading the prisoners to the depot, Sheriff Convery jokingly pointed to the man and wife and their handcuffs and remarked to a friend: "Those whom God has joined together let no man put asunder."

James E. Kinsey, a butcher of Somerville, has recently inherited $25,000 from the estate of Elisha Ruttman, who died some three years ago in Rockland county, N. Y., and left an estate valued at $900,000. He also left a wife, but no children. He had made three wills, the first one favoring Mr. Kinsey, who is a cousin of the testator. Another will favored a niece of Ruttman's wife, Sadie Dorn. The third will, which is the one just admitted to probate, divides the property more evenly, and it is by this one that Mr. Kinsey becomes quite wealthy. Besides Mr. Kinsey, Mrs. Watson Bird of Mt. Bethel comes in for a small share of the property, and Daniel Cory of Warrenville is also a possible heir. John Boylen of Newark receives a much larger heritage than Mr. Kinsey.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

It is now illegal to kill or have in possession any ruffed grouse, quail or rabbit. The season closed Dec. 31st. Fine, $15.

Mr. W. W. Stearns, of Elizabeth, the owner of the fast trotter Billy Button, it is rumored has been offered $7,000 for the horse.

Interesting pigeon sweepstake matches were shot off at Campbell's Club House on Christmas Day. There will be shooting there on New Year's Day.

There was a large gathering of sportsmen at Dunellen on Christmas Day to witness and participate in the pigeon shooting under the auspices of the Middlesex Gun Club. It is proposed by the Club to erect a comfortable building on the grounds to shelter the shooters. On New Year's Day there will be matches at live and clay pigeons and glass balls.

The Middlesex Gun Club will hold a meeting on Saturday evening at 7:30 p. m., at the office of Suydam & Stillman, Front street, Plainfield, to fill such vacancies as may exist, to appoint such committees as necessary, and for the collection of initiation fees and to receive the report of committee on constitution, by-laws and shooting rules; also to transact such other business as may come before the meeting.

DEATHS.

BOICE—In this city, Dec. 26, 1885, of neuralgia of the heart, David J. Boice, aged 71 years, 2 months, 27 days.

CHRISTMAS!

We wish our large and constantly increasing number of patrons a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year, and trust it will prove to all of them a season of great happiness and enjoyment. One of the requisites to this frame of mind is the absence of regret. We can't guarantee you immunity from regret in all your undertakings, but if you contemplate the purchase of any article of clothing either for personal use or to present to friends, we feel sure that, if you favor us with your patronage, you will have no present regrets as to price and no future ones as to serviceability. Although, taking in the whole country, it has not been a very prosperous year for business, yet with us the year closes on the most successful and satisfactory of any in our business career. We do not stop to seek reasons why this is so; the bare fact is an indorsement of our business methods both flattering and encouraging. The general condition of business would seem to indicate that useful presents would be most appreciated. Our stock of Clothing affords an assortment from which an elegant and useful present may be selected for Man, Youth or Boy, a present that will not only please the eye, but come in right handy during the cold winter upon which we have but just entered. Young Men should look at our nobby, stylish Overcoats in which to make New Year's Calls. True, we offer no special inducements in the way of picture cards, books, toys, etc. We find people will buy our Clothing without the offer of such baits for their patronage. It savors too much of the Tea Store Gift-racket—"A Chromo with every pound of tea." The natural pleasure of getting something for nothing, so common to us all is soon eclipsed when the customer finds that he has been sold as well as the Clothes. He is sure to discover in time that he has paid for the supposed present, and paid a big price for it. Good, reliable Clothing, at such prices as leave our patrons enough surplus to buy their own presents, has always been our motto, and is the secret of our success. We do not want your custom for the Holiday Season alone, but for 1886, and as long as you need Clothing and we remain in business to supply it. We appeal not to your credulity, but to your sound judgment as buyers of genuine bargains.

Executors Sale of REAL ESTATE!

The Executors of the estate of Larrison Hoppock, deceased will expose for sale, at public auction, to the highest bidder, on the premises, on Tuesday, February 16, 1886,

at 2 o'clock, p. m., all that certain farm and premises, belonging to the estate of Larrison Hoppock, deceased, situated in the Borough of North Plainfield about a mile from the City of Plainfield.

Said farm is composed of about sixty-six acres of land and is bounded by the Green Brook Road and Rock View Avenue and adjoins the farm of Jeremiah R. Van Deventer and has thereon a dwelling house and a number of new outbuildings, all in good condition, consisting of a large barn with 5 stalls for horse and ten stalls for cattle, cow sheds, hen house, smoke house, etc.

Also a certain other piece of land or wood lot, situate on the top of First Mountain, on the west side of the road, leading from Chapon's tannery to James Hennessey's and adjacent to the properties of Creamer, John B. Beck and Lewis Titus, and containing about nine acres of land.

For particulars apply to CHARLES BOICE, Dunellen, New Jersey.

COSTIVENESS
affects seriously all the digestive and assimilative organs, including the Kidneys. When these organs are so affected, they fail to extract from the blood the uric acid, which, carried through the circulation, causes Rheumatism and Neuralgia.
The functions of the Liver are also affected by costiveness, causing Billous Disorders.
Among the warning symptoms of Biliousness are Nausea, Dizziness, Headache, Weakness, Fever, Dimness of Vision, Yellowness of Skin, Pains in the Side, Back and Shoulders, Foul Mouth, Furred Tongue, Irregularity in the action of the Bowels, Vomiting, etc.
The Stomach suffers when the bowels are constipated, and Indigestion or Dyspepsia,
follows. Fetid Breath, Gastric Pains, Headache, Acidity of the Stomach, Waterbrash, Nervousness, and Depression, are all evidences of the presence of this distressing malady. A Sure Relief for irregularities of the Stomach and all consequent diseases, will be found in the use of
AYER'S PILLS.
They stimulate the stomach, free the bowels, healthfully invigorate the torpid liver and kidneys, and by their cleansing, healing and tonic properties, strengthen and purify the whole system, and restore it to a salutary and normal condition.

Now write it 1886.

NEW moon next Tuesday.

COUNCIL meeting, Saturday evening.

THE days and coal bills are lengthening.

Now make new resolutions—and keep them.

THE horn of the small boy will be heard to-night.

LIVERYMEN would appreciate a little snow just now.

THE State Legislature will convene at Trenton, Tuesday, Jan. 12.

MIKADO music may be procured at Rand's, No. 24 West Front street.

So far the prediction of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST as to a year without a winter, is fulfilled.

TIER'S Lake was frozen over sufficiently to admit of skating by the small boy on Monday last.

THE Board of Managers of what is left of the Fire Department, meet in regular meeting on the 12th inst.

NAVIGATION has closed for the winter on the Delaware and Raritan Canal. The waters were drawn off last week.

IT is generally conceded that Councilman Tell A. Beguelin will be selected as President of the Council of 1886.

WITH this number THE CONSTITUTIONALIST enters upon its nineteenth year of existence. A Happy New Year to all its patrons.

THE foot-ball match at The Crescent between the clubs of this city and those of Montclair, has been postponed until some future date.

THERE was plenty of dirt left on our streets, requiring the attention of the Street Commissioner, after the high winds of Saturday.

THE Union County Democratic Executive Committee will meet for organization for the year 1886, at Library Hall, Elizabeth, Monday, Jan. 4th.

THE Marshal drew a turkey at a recent raffle, but "By Harry," they attempted to steal it from the boy that was taking it home for the lucky thrower.

THE Master's sale of real estate situate on Second street, above Washington street, advertised to be sold Dec. 28th, has been adjourned until Jan. 28th.

WHEN I. W. Sangborn takes in hand a piece of work it moves right along, and that's what's the matter with the new building at Park avenue and Second street.

MR. E. P. THOMAS contributed to a merry Christmas for all his friends by presenting each with an elegant "pocket-pistol" loaded with choice ammunition. Long may he wave.

THE walls of William Moore's new building corner of Second street and Park avenue are rapidly mounting skyward under the skillful hands of contractor Pangborn's workmen.

MR. JOHN SMITH has the contract for carting the brick from the railroad station to the new building in course of erection by Wm Moore, corner Second street and Park avenue.

THE city's many churches all show the labor of willing hands, and the good taste of the ladies of their congregations, in the Christmas decorations that are alike extensive and beautiful in all.

MR. JOHN STRATS, the new proprietor of the City Hotel, is re-furnishing the house from top to bottom, from Green's furniture warerooms. He expects to open the doors to the public the present month.

No. 1 Engine, after undergoing repairs by having some of the tubes in her boiler expanded, was taken out for a wash on Christmas Day. The trial proved a decided success, everything working satisfactory.

WE understand that Chris. Van Arsdale, the genial landlord of the Commercial Hotel, Somerville, has sent to Virginia for a bald eagle, which is a good thing to have in the family. Somerville papers please copy.

THE opportunity offered to-morrow afternoon and evening to hear Mikado at Music Hall, is a fortunate one for which the management should be thanked and patronized accordingly. "It never should be missed." And we're sure it won't be missed."

THERE are a number of dogs in this city against which the Mayor should issue a proclamation of extermination. Two of the kind seemingly belong to residents of Front street above Richmond, in front of whose houses they spring out on every horse that is driven by. There are other and surer ways that dogs may madden people, than by biting them.

THE thanks of the community are due Mr. Johnson, contractor for the carpenter work on the Moore building, for his kind consideration of the public accommodation in piling the lumber to be used, on Second street instead of Park avenue, as he had a right to do. As the latter thoroughfare is narrow it would have seriously interfered with travel to have stored his lumber there.

THE underbrush on the mountain side near Seeley's mills above Scotch Plains, took fire Sunday evening last. At one time the flames threatened to destroy buildings in its path, and the steam gongs on Seeley's mill and the bar mill sounded an alarm which speedily brought out the fire department. The alarm was heard in this city. The services of the department happily, were not needed.

LIKE the gas man, your tax bill and death, Christmas comes regularly, and with it the same round of exercises, services and festivities. All the churches and Sunday schools have had their appropriate celebrations, and every scholar and child of the missions has had its fill of the sweets of the day and other eatables. To give an account of the exercises of any one school would not be fair to the others, and to publish all would be merely a repetition of "singing," "address," "distribution of gifts," etc.

THE Mikado at Music Hall Jan. 1st, matinee and evening.

THE post office will be closed after 10 a. m., New Year's Day.

THE January term of Union county courts commence next Tuesday.

A DIVIDEND of four per cent, on the earnings of the current six months has been declared by the Directors of the First National Bank.

GO to Peck's before seven o'clock in the evening after this, if you want to purchase any of his bargains. Hereafter Peck will close his store at that hour.

MR JOSEPH MCBRIDE of Somerville, has been duly appointed Internal-Revenue Storekeeper at the distillery in East Millstone, and entered into bonds for $10,000.

THE Misses Nellie and Florence and Masters Allen and James Taylor, will give a party to their little friends, at their residence on Seventh street, West, this (Thursday) afternoon at 4 o'clock.

SAMUEL WEBSTER, half-brother to the late Zachariah Webster, a resident of Second street, died on Tuesday last after a few week's illness, aged 77 years. His mental faculties have been impaired for years. He leaves two sons and a daughter.

REV. Paul Sutphen, of the Third Presbyterian church, Elizabeth, has received a call from a church in Cleveland and will preach in that city next Sunday. He has not yet accepted and intends taking a look over the field of operations before giving a decided answer.

A REVISED list of subscribers to the N. Y. & N. J. Telephone Company will be found in our advertising columns. Under the supervision of Mr. Charles M. Root, General Manager for this District, this Company is rapidly increasing their list of subscribers. The service is of great benefit to the public and is well and efficiently managed at the Central Office in this city.

WE have before us a copy of "The History of the 48th Regt., N. Y. S. Vols., in the War for the Union," from 1861 to 1865, by Abraham J. Palmer, D. D., (formerly private, Co. D,) illustrated. It is a book of much interest to the surviving members of that gallant regiment. Comrades and others may procure a copy of the book at the publisher's price, of Corporal Joseph B. Hurlburt, at THE CONSTITUTIONALIST office.

A BROKEN axle was the cause of a disastrous smashup to freight train No. 703, on the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad, near the Middlebrook crossing Wednesday afternoon. Twelve or fifteen cars, loaded with grain, were piled one upon the other in great confusion. All four tracks were blocked for several hours. Passengers were transferred around the scene of the wreck and hurried to their destination by special trains.

THE District Messenger Service continues to meet with popular favor, under the supervision of the new General Manager, Mr. H. B. Ingram. On Tuesday a trial was given the new electric fire alarm signal, which worked very satisfactory. When an alarm of fire is sent into the Central Office, an operator presses a small button, and instantly the alarm is struck on the bell in the fire alarm tower. A large number of call boxes are now in use by our citizens, who find the service of great benefit. The public are invited to call at the Central Office, on Front street, opposite Park avenue, and witness the modus operandi of receiving messages and their delivery.

First Baptist's Christmas Services.

The Christmas services in the First Baptist church were held last Sunday—beginning in the morning and continued in the afternoon at three o'clock. There was an organ voluntary, singing of appropriate music, an address by the pastor and a carol by the choir.

The Music Hall Matinee

Was arranged for and prices for children made nominal at the request of the Music Hall stockholders. Adults are required to pay the same prices as in the evening. The Templeton Company, which by the way, is second to none on the road, accede to the arrangement because satisfied that all adults who attend the matinee will be bound to attend again at night. This they say has been their universal experience.

A Grand and Deserved Success.

The joint detail of arrangements of the G. A. R. Bazaar held in Reform Hall during the past week, report the net earnings at about $600, and at their meeting held at the Out Post Tuesday evening, they by unanimous consent set apart two-thirds of said earnings as the share properly belonging to their auxiliary, Winfield Scott Relief Corps, No. 10, Women's Relief Corps, Dept. of N. J.

Miners in Luck.

It is said that George and Matthew Firstbrook, who went from Port Oram sometime ago to work and prospect in Nevada, were so fortunate as to secure with others a silver property, in which the two brothers recently sold their interests for $20,000. Matthew, however, did not live long to enjoy his good fortune having died in San Francisco two or three weeks ago. George, who is now in Port Oram, contemplates locating in Plainfield, N. J., where he has recently purchased some property.—Iron Era.

This Is Libellous.

The Bound Brook local paper says: "The Pope Manufacturing Company (which makes bicycles and not popes, as the name might infer,) wants the Chronicle to keep straight in the matter of dates during 1886, and has sent to this office a handsome calendar, which will make a little work for the office "devil," in tearing off a leaf every day. On the left of the calendar block is a picture of a handsome man riding his wheel beside a lake, and at the same time taking a horn. Upon a close inspection of the face we are satisfied that it is a faithful representation of editor Demarest, of the Plainfield CONSTITUTIONALIST."

Casino Carnival.

The old year is about gone. We look back and perhaps regret its passing away, but only pleasant feelings and joyous anticipations attend the advent of the infant '86. Young and old, rich and poor alike vie with each other in greeting the new born year with a happy greeting. At the Casino they propose to add to and, aid in, this jollification by giving a Grand Fancy Dress and Floral Carnival, where all can unite in the last services to the Old Year and then join in a joyous acclaim at the birth of the New. The Casino has been handsomely decorated for the occasion and skating will be kept up until midnight when, with the departure of old '85 and the birth of '86, one can wish another a Happy New Year.

Arcanum Officers.

At the regular annual meeting for the election of officers of the Royal Arcanum, held Monday evening, the following were chosen:

Regent—E. E. Anthony.
Vice Regent—W. J. Leonard.
Orator—W. L. Titsworth.
Secretary—H. A. Thorn.
Collector—L. M. Stover.
Treasurer—T. R. Coon.
Guide—W. B. Remsen.
Chaplain—A. V. V. Raymond.
Warden—Winton Randolph.
Sentry—E. C. A. Woltman.
Trustees—John H. Cuthbert, Albertus Swaim, E. W. Conklin.
Delegate to the Grand Council—S. C. Baker.
Alternate—W. H. Lyon, Jr.
Organist—Karl T. Polak.

Seventh-Day's Christmas.

The usual Christmas entertainment of the Seventh-Day Baptist Sabbath School took place Thursday evening of last week, and was an enjoyable Christmas Eve for young and old. The programme included tableaux, illustrated reading, class recitations and singing preceded by organ music.

Much Obliged.

The ladies of Winfield Scott Corps, No. 10, desire to express their gratitude to all who so kindly aided and generously donated money, fancy articles, refreshments, etc., to the bazaar which has proved a financial success. To all the helpers of the various departments, for they were many, we tender our thanks and trust you have received your reward as you have bestowed for a worthy cause. By order of the Corps.

MRS. D. C. DRAKE, Sec.

Changed Hands Again.

Some time ago, Mr. A. Warnock, the baker of Front street, and Mr. J. Vochl, the baker of Somerset street, traded, whereby the former became possessed of a house and lot on Manning avenue, and the latter received in exchange therefor, the old established bakery where "Aleck" has raised many a loaf of bread and a large family of children in the years that are past. Now by another trade Mr. Vochl gets his house back and Mr. Warnock, to-morrow, takes possession of the temperance billiard parlor at No 20 West Front street.

The Casino Rink.

Parker's dog and cat circus gave very pleasing exhibitions at the Casino rink during Christmas and the following Saturday, that drew large audiences. There is no better combination of the kind on the road to-day, and the many that were entertained by the show gave Mr. Miller much praise for his enterprise. During Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday the rink has been closed preparatory to the New Year's Eve Carnival that is to take place this (Thursday) evening. Full particulars of this grand affair are to be found set forth in the small bills so thoroughly circulated through the city. A costly toilet set will be presented to the lady wearing the handsomest costume, and a valuable silk umbrella to the gentleman wearing the most original.

Personals.

Mr. L. B. Boice, of North Plainfield, is confined to his bed by serious sickness.

Ex-Mayor L. V. F. Randolph has returned from a business trip to Texas to spend the New Year with his family.

Rev. D. K. Smith and family, of Fort Edward, N. Y., are visiting at brother-in-law Seymour G. Smith's hospitable residence, on Plainfield avenue.

The Senior returns thanks to his young friend George Gordon, of, Lake Hopatcong, for the New Year's gift of an enormous "snapper" turtle, weighing twenty-eight pounds, which we presume was taken from the waters of the above mentioned beautiful lake.

Many of the school-mates of Everett S. Young, will be sorry to learn of his death from typhoid fever at Keokuk, Ia., at the early age of twenty-six years. He was a son of Mr. T. W. Young who formerly resided at the head of Water street, North Plainfield. His death occurred on Friday, Dec. 18th.

Mikado At Music Hall.

Only the big cities—and but few of them—have as yet been favored with a presentation of "Mikado;" the latest and best of the operatic fantasies by the authors of "Pinafore." The cast secured includes most of the original vocalists that took part in the very first rendition of the opera in New York city. Mr. Chas. S. L. Harris has a congenial part as the Mikado, in which he is excessively droll. Mr. George H. Broderick uses his magnificent bass voice with grand effect as Pooh-Bah. Mr. Jay C. Taylor, the Nanki-Pooh, is one of the few really first-class tenors on the stage of light opera. Mr. W. H. Seymour, the Ko-Ko, is a comedian of great ability in his line. Miss Lucille Meredith has but recently returned from England, where she scored a big success as Yum-Yum, and Miss Hattie Starr and Miss Selina Rough as Pitti-Sing and Peep-Boo are highly spoken of as actresses and artists. Miss Emma Mabella Baker, the Katisha, possesses a fine contralto voice. The Music Hall management has thus got a really good company "on the list" and they "should not be missed." The orchestra is large and well trained, and the chorus numbers twenty-seven voices.

At The Crescent.

The features of Christmas day at The Crescent proved so attractive that large attendances were present during both the afternoon and evening. In the morning the foot-ball match resulted in a victory for Mr. Fred Yates team—that player making, individually, a total of 12 points against none for the opposing side. The players were Messrs. F. Yates, C. Hyde, G. Vincent, F. Walz and H. Stover; against Messrs. R. Murray, S. Fox, F. Heyninger, Bert Illney, W. Kirk and L. Walz.

During the afternoon The Midgets—Edna and Ethel Taber—gave most pleasing and expert exhibitions. They show great advancement since last year. An amusing entertainment was an orange race, won by Fred Stover after a hard struggle. The prize was a commutation ticket. In the evening the backward race of one mile for the Crescent medal of solid silver, was secured by Mr. Wesley Palmateer in three minutes and forty seconds. His competitors were Mr. Bert Ayers and a well-known Newark racer. The latter was distanced early in the race, but Ayers, in spite of a bad fall that lost him much ground, held his own till the finish. Palmateer took the lead at the start, and it was impossible for Ayers to find a chance to pass him. Another race for the same trophy between these two is to take place this (Thursday) evening, but the same result is expected.

Systematic Lying About New Jersey Matters

The average New Jersey reader of the New York daily newspapers is unable to comprehend why such gross exaggerations of the commonest occurrences in our State, and so many downright lies about New Jersey affairs and happenings, appear daily in the columns of these papers. It may be well to enlighten the average reader. The New Jersey reporters of the New York daily press are paid by the space. That is, they get so much per column. The more sensational their contributions are the better chance there is of getting the matter in type and getting pay for it. The local scribbler, therefore, is compelled for ignoble pecuniary reasons to invest his reports with the most fanciful or lurid colors. Under the inspiration of a dollar or two of extra compensation, an ordinary suicide becomes a murder, a trifling quarrel assumes the dimensions of a riot, and a simple case in the police court is distorted into a society sensation. The barroom talk of some political loafer or a haphazard remark on the street furnishes the basis for a half column libel on a municipal government. The blame for all this lies not so much with the purveyor, who is only doing his best, in a doubtful way, to eke out a livelihood, but with the newspapers that exercise so little supervision over New Jersey news and hold out such temptation to the purveyor by offering a premium for falsehood. The worst sinners in this respect are the Herald and World. Perhaps New Jersey readers might convince the managers of these journals, by refusing to buy the papers that prints lies and slanders about New Jersey, that the best paying policy is to print nothing but the truth.—Newark Press.

An Amateur Skater.

Miss Lulu Romaine, of Harlem, whose father is a prominent merchant of New York city, claims the title of the champion amateur roller skater of the country. Her right to this dignity was proven by her exhibition at The Crescent, last Monday evening, when from over 160 different steps that she has mastered, a number of the most difficult were displayed for the entertainment of the large audience that had gathered on what has come to be called "Quality Night." The deserved applause she received was remarkably extensive for a Plainfield gathering. Miss Romaine was presented with an elegant lace pin, manufactured by Tiffany & Co.

Death of an Old Resident.

The demise of Mr. David J. Boice, during Saturday morning of last week, adds another to the long list of sudden deaths that have occurred very recently. Although not feeling well during Christmas day, yet the probability of any fatal termination of his illness was not apprehended by his family and was entirely unexpected and unprepared for. The deceased has lived almost all his life in this city—coming here a poor man and dying worth possibly over $100,000. His uprightness in the church, his honesty in business and his sterling character and reputation are known to all who have ever met, dealt with or heard of him. He was in his 72d year, and the cause of his death was neuralgia of the heart. The funeral services at the First Baptist church, of which the deceased was probably its most prominent member, took place Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, and was attended by hundreds.

Week of Prayer.

The World's Evangelical Alliance has issued a programme for the Week of Prayer, which begins on the first Monday of the New Year. The United States branch of the Alliance will in all probability adopt the same programme. The following are the subjects suggested:

Sunday, January 3—Sermons. "Occupy Till I Come."

Monday, January 4—Praise and Thanksgiving.

Tuesday, January 5—Humiliation and Confession.

Wednesday, January 6—Home and Foreign Missions.

Thursday, January 7—The Church and the Family.

Friday, January 8—Nations and Governments.

Saturday, January 9—The Christian Life.

Sunday, January 10—Sermons. "Let your loins be girded about, and your lights burning; and be yourselves like unto men that wait for their Lord."

Tuesday Evening's Vocal Concert.

The first of this year's Subscription Concerts of Plainfield Vocal Society, was held in Music Hall on Tuesday evening. The stage had been enlarged so that the chorus was seated in front of the lowered curtain and the whole body of sound was thrown into the auditorium instead of being partly lost in the flies. In consequence of this the effect was much better than last year, and the chorus though smaller in numbers, apparently produced much more sound. The concert was as a whole very pleasing. As to the rendition of Dudley Buck's "Hymn to Music" there seemed but one opinion. It is a beautiful composition, and was sung as if the hearts of the performers were in it. It secured for the chorus its only encore, although "The Sands of Dee," one of Plainfield's old favorites, was also very well sung, but being the first selection of the evening it received only more enthusiastic applause than is usual before the audience can catch the spirit of an entertainment. The remainder of the shorter selections were very pleasing, but the "The Erl King's Daughter," with the exception of the prologue, the choral and possibly one or two choruses, was not generally liked. The desire of the people seems to be for more light music, and less of such as this which is seldom pleasing when heard for the first time and is only appreciated by those who have studied it and know its merits. The solos of this particular piece were very tiresome and were not sung exactly, as they should. Mrs. Chapman did not enter into the spirit of her part although her voice was very pleasing. This may have been due to her being somewhat of a novice in singing with a chorus, and not having the usual privileges of a soloist open to her. Mr. Morawski has been known to do much better.

Mme. Dossert had little work in "The Erl King's Daughter," but her solo "The Prayer" from "Der Freischutz," was artistically sung and received an encore.

Sad Case of Suicide.

About half-past seven o'clock Monday morning last, two young lads named Warren Church and Bordie Drake visited Green Brook, at the Grove street crossing, for the purpose of testing the strength of the ice for skating purposes. Looking over the parapet of the upper side of the bridge, they were horrified to see the lower limbs of a female sticking out of a broken hole in the ice. They immediately gave the alarm, and soon a large crowd collected. Captain of Police Dodd raised the body out of the water, and found that life was extinct. It soon became noised about that the wife of Mr. John Shepherd, residing at No. 15 Linden avenue, North Plainfield, was missing from her home, and that active search was being made for her by members of the family and Marshal Weaver. Upon hearing of the finding of the body, the remains were at once identified as those of Lizzie, wife of Mr. Shepherd. From evidence adduced later, it was made plain that the unfortunate woman had deliberately committed suicide. She had arisen from her bed at her usual time in the morning, and prepared the breakfast table, purchasing a loaf of bread from Vochl's baker wagon and laying it on the table. About half-past six o'clock she was heard to go out. She must have gone direct to the stream, broke the ice, which was only about an inch and a half thick, and thrust her head beneath the water, which at this point was only about one and a half feet deep. When found, she was lying face upward, the lower part of her body being perfectly dry. When her husband arose he found the following note lying on the breakfast table along side the loaf of bread:

> My Dear Husband & Mother, forgive me if you can; these gloomy feelings have again taken possession of me and I cannot put them off. My last request is to always be kind to little Freddie. I prefer death to going insane.
> From your Broken-hearted Lizzie.

Mrs. Shepherd's mother has been confined to her bed for several weeks by severe illness, and it is thought the care and anxiety in ministering to her wants, together with the fear of losing her mother by death, unsettled the unfortunate woman's mind. On Christmas Day she remarked to her mother that she would be happy if that was to be her last day on earth. She complained often of severe pains in her head, and at times was despondent and dejected. Mr. and Mrs. Shepherd have been married about six years, and had one child, the Freddie alluded to in the letter, who is about four years old. Their domestic relations were of the most happy kind. Mr. Shepherd is an industrious and temperate employee of the Weaver Bros. Mrs. Shepherd was about 30 years of age. The remains were taken to Ford & Stiles morgue, and Coroner A. P. Sutphen, of Somerville, notified, who deemed an inquest unnecessary and granted the usual burial permit that is needful in such cases.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

MONDAY EVENING, Dec. 28th.

The Council met in regular adjourned meeting.

Present—President Coriell and Messrs. Beguelin, Dumont, Dunham, Goddard, Livingston, Marsh and Wadsworth—8.

Absent—Messrs. Cotter, Gallup and Simpson—3.

The minutes of the last regular and special meetings were approved as read.

President Coriell had just discovered that Mr. Dunham had been elected a member of the Council, and therefore welcomed him into that body.

A petition from the District Messenger Co., asking the Council to secure for the benefit of their company the right to run over the poles of another company (and a competitor at that) was referred to the proper committee.

The following bills were presented, read and referred—with the exception of the police and salary claims which were tabled until the next meeting.

The statement of the City Judge for the past fourth months, was read and ordered filed.

To the Honorable The Common Council of the City of Plainfield,

GENTLEMEN:—I herewith desire to present my final report to your honorable body as City Judge from September 1, 1885, to December 28, 1885, inclusive.

During the aforesaid time 46 persons were brought before the City Court for violation of the city's ordinances, 36 of these were males, and 10 were females.

The judgments of the Court was executed as follows:

One person was acquitted.

In 7 cases sentence was suspended.

12 persons were committed to the county jail, and fines were imposed upon the rest.

I have collected fines and costs to the amount of two hundred and eighty-six dollars and seventy cents. ($286.70).

I have paid out to persons making informations one-half fines imposed in such cases, as provided by ordinance—$75 00.

The expenses of the City Court since the aforesaid time have been, for subpœna fees for city and county court, commitment fees and general expenses, $38 85.

Paid city treasurer on December 26, 1885, $150 00.

I would state to your honorable body that I have adhered to the custom of my predecessors, and retain a sufficient amount on hand to insure such expenses as may accrue for subpœna fees, trial expenses, appeal costs, commitment fees, &c., &c., and for causes that may arise.

One cause was appealed from the verdict of the jury, who decided in favor of the City vs. Rafferty, which verdict was reversed by the Union County Court of Common Pleas.

Pursuant to law, I filed the appeal bonds which were approved, in the cases of "The City vs. Maurice Daly" and "Edward Kelly," respectively. These cases did not come off for trial at the last term of the Court and are still unsettled. I would respectfully suggest that your honorable body request and empower the Counsel to the Corporation to take some action toward the recovery of the amount due the city by reason of unsettled causes.

Respectfully submitted.

JOHN ULRICH,
Dated Dec. 28, '85. City Judge.

The opinion of Corporation Counsel Marsh as to the legality of a purchase by the city of certain apparatus belonging to another corporation, was read and filed, as follows:

To the Honorable the Common Council of the City of Plainfield.

GENTLEMEN:—Pursuant to your resolution calling for my opinion respecting the validity of a proposed ordinance introduced December 7th instant and entitled "An ordinance to provide means for the prevention and suppression of fires," I submit the following:

My opinion is founded on the assumption that the following premises, gathered from the papers in the case, are true; if any is untrue, a different question would be presented.

1st—That the city is in sufficient funds.

2d—That the measure is, in the judgment of the Common Council, meet and necessary.

3d—That the steamer in the present condition is unavailable for the work of the Fire Department, and the Fire Department are not in a position to make it available.

4th—That the steamer is fairly worth the sum of $1 500.

The first inquiry suggested is the broad one; has the city power to purchase apparatus for the suppression of fires? This question finds an affirmative answer in the unequivocal language of the charter. Express power is thereby conferred upon the Common Council "to pass such ordinances or by-laws as to them shall seem meet and necessary for the prevention and suppression of fires" (The City Charter is of later date than the charter of the Fire Department). This carries with it by necessary implication power to purchase all such property as may be necessary to the proper exercise of the power specifically granted.

Have the Fire Department the right to sell the apparatus in question? "The Plainfield Fire Department" is an independent corporation, distinct in organization, control and extent of territory governed from the corporation, "Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield." The power of municipal corporations to dispose of personal property, when essential to the proper discharge of corporate functions, is a well recognized power, and is constantly exercised by cities throughout the United States. That under such circumstances as set forth above, such a power exists, can admit of no question. To hold the contrary would be to hold that apparatus once purchased must be forever retained; that municipal officers must needs stand idly by while apparatus utterly unavailable to them rusts away and becomes so much old iron, in the face of opportunity to convert the useless encumbrance into money wherewith to carry out the purpose of the corporate existence.

Do the clauses in the proposition reserving the right to the Fire Department to repurchase for the selling price plus the cost of repairs that may have been made by the city, and agreeing to purchase on such terms, when in funds lawfully applicable to that purpose, render the proposed purchase an illegal transaction? Such reservations and agreements are of frequent occurrence in private business and their validity has been sustained. No valid reason appears why a different rule should be applied in the present case. If the ordinance is adopted, the city becomes the owner of the steamer and entitled to its custody and control. The city may avail of the willingness expressed by the Fire Department to use and care for the steamer for the city, or may decline to avail of it as may be thought the wiser course. The Fire Department agree to purchase only upon a contingency which may never arise. If it does arise the department may insist upon the right reserved, or the city may insist upon the agreement, but in either event it would be a case of sale by the city. There appears nothing in the proposed ordinance contravening the object expressed in its title of providing means for the prevention and suppression of fires.

What bearing on the question has the probability that the steamer would be used across the city line in North Plainfield? If the steamer should be so used after being purchased by the city, it would be solely by courtesy of the city government analogous to the courtesy recently extended to this city by Somerville and Elizabeth. The city authorities could restrict or prohibit such use except indeed in cases of fires near the city line as to endanger city property. The proposed ordinance proceeds on the assumption that its adoption is necessary for the protection of the city of Plainfield; the fact that incidentally North Plainfield or any other place may be benefitted, by municipal comity, has no possible bearing upon the question of the legality of the proposed ordinance.

Questions as to the wisdom and policy of the proposed ordinance, are matters resting solely with your Honorable body; concerning its legality, I am of opinion, assuming the facts as stated at the outset, that it is within the power of the Common Council to enact the ordinance as proposed.

I have been directed to add my opinion as to whether the Common Council have power to pass the ordinance, if in their judgment the steamer is not worth the proposed purchase price. The answer is self-evident. As much scrutiny is required by the laws of the State from your body in contracts for the purchase of property as in the auditing and payment of claims. It is not within your power to adopt the ordinance, unless you are satisfied of the truth of the fourth premise stated at the outset, namely, that the steamer is fairly worth the sum of $1,500.

Respectfully submitted,
CRAIG A. MARSH.

Dated December 28th, 1885.

The Rooms, Printing, Election and Street Committees reported as correct the claims referred to them. Referred to the Auditing Com., subsequently reported by it as correct and warrants ordered drawn in payment.

Upon an unfavorable report by the Fire &c., Committee, the petition of Mr. Peebles for permission to erect an awning over the sidewalk under the windows of the Council rooms, was refused.

Mr. Marsh, from the Laws Committee, reported in relation to an alleged trespass on Third street and Madison avenue, and recommended that the matter be left for the consideration and action of the incoming Council. Tabled accordingly.

The bonds of Amos Moffett and G. P. Smith as Constables were referred for examination.

The ordinance providing for the purchase of the No. 2 steamer was not taken up for action, but the committee on Fire &c, was directed to ascertain the worth of the apparatus and to secure an expert for such purpose if necessary.

The Council then adjourned to Saturday evening, January 2d, 1886.

More Truth On The Subject.

"There is so much truth, and that, too, of an application to this city in the following extracts from the press on the functions of a local paper that we quote them entire:

'The local papers are a nuisance when they print what you don't want them to, and right smart lively paper when they print it about the other fellows.'—THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

'There is too much truth in the four lines above quoted to allow it to pass for a joke. An experience of many years in the newspaper business has resulted in teaching us that those men who are always "working" the newspaper offices to get in a "shot" at some erring brother, squeal like stuck pigs when by chance they come in for a taste of the same "funny" medicine that they were always so eager to have administered to others, and thought such capital sport; and if they do not stop the paper that all at once becomes too personal for them, and cut the acquaintance of the editors and even the printers in the office, it is a rare exhibition of good nature that we seldom find. 'Punch the other fellow; that's all right. But don't hit me!'—Flemington Democrat.

We may add that a newspaper is 'cowardly' that does not take the responsibility of everybody's anonymous abuse of everybody else, that does not run the risk of indiscriminate libel suits to satisfy personal vengeance, and generally, allow itself to be used to pick other people's chestnuts, with which it has no concern, out of the fire. It has no courage if it does not grossly insult everybody that disagrees with its critic, and no party fealty unless it calls the other fellows, by names, swindlers and ruffians. If it is temperate and sober, sees the two sides to a question, treats its adversaries in the same gentlemanly way in which it hopes to be treated itself, does not work into the hands of special cliques, does not ignorantly assert one thing one day to take it back the next, it has no spirit. If it consults its business interests so that it can pay its hands and bills at the end of the week, it is 'mercenary.' According to this theory, the only man who is not allowed to edit the paper is the editor. But if he follows rash counsels, sees a diminishing subscription list, a batch of libel suits and slim advertising columns, those whose cat's paw he has been will be the last to rescue him from the fatal clutch of the sheriff."—Elizabeth Journal.

MARTHY'S WAY.

"It's only Marthy's way," he said, "only Marthy's way," and the poor old man moved his chair out of the corner of the great farm kitchen. Marthy, as Deacon Warner called her, was his son John's wife.

It was Saturday morning, and she was mopping the floor with the same energy and vim with which she did all her work.

"Here, pa," she said, "move around. I've got to your chair and can't be hindered a minute. I'm just drove this morning. I wish men folks didn't have to sit around in the house. I always did hate it."

The silver-haired father rose slowly from his chair—every movement he made caused a groan of pain to escape his lips. "You've got the rheumatism bad again, haven't you, pa? If you stirred around more maybe you would be better."

While Martha Warner was talking, she had been diligently applying her mop over the place where the deacon's chair stood. She splashed the water around and wiped it up three or four times, and then she moved the chair back to its place and the tired, suffering man sat down.

"It won't hurt you none, I guess, if the floor is some damp," his son's wife said. "It will dry off in a few minutes, the sun is hot and the doors and windows are wide open."

Martha had an energetic, commanding way of talking, and a neighbor coming in that moment, stepping toward the chair to speak to the deacon, saw the expression of pain upon his face.

While Mrs. Warner passed out of the kitchen to empty her pail, the old man said, by way of apology, "It's only Marthy's way, Marthy's way."

"But it is too damp for your rheumatism," she ventured to remark. "Why don't you go into the sitting-room?"

"Oh, Marthy's just swept that out and put it to rights and darkened it all up. You know flies are very troublesome this time of year, and Marthy's so particular."

The neighbor was not a meddling woman, so she only pushed the chair on to a drier spot in the floor and where the sunshine came in brighter.

The deacon loved to have his neighbor come in—she was an old friend, and he enjoyed so much talking with her about "mother." He always called his wife "mother." "Mother was such a good housekeeper too—but the work was done without any fuss and flourish, and she always spoke so kindly and in such sweet tones." But she was gone. "The old folks ought to go together," he said, "it's so lonesome for the one that's left. The world is a busy, driving one, and the young folks want clear sailing; old folks are quite apt to be in the way." The deacon leaned his head upon his hand, while he repeated:

"I'm kneeling at the threshold, weary, faint and sore,
Waiting for the dawning, for the opening of the door.
Waiting till the Master shall bid me rise and come,
To the glory of His presence, to the gladness of His home."

"Do you think your father is as well as usual to-day?" the neighbor asked as Mrs. Warner followed her out to the gate, busily talking of her many duties, complaining of the care she had in keeping "pa," and wound up her talk by saying "that she hoped when she had outlived her usefulness the Lord would see fit to take her out of the world so she wouldn't bother other folks."

"It may be His will," the neighbor replied, "to make you a dependent, helpless old woman. Who will take care of you? I trust if this should be the case that the Lord will temper, His affliction with mercy, and that there will be some one very tender, very patient and loving to minister unto you."

It was a new thought to Martha Warner, and after the neighbor passed out of the gate she rested her busy hand on the mop handle. She was a strong, healthy, energetic, resolute woman. It was hard for her to take in such a situation as the deacon's.

She was so very practical, that imagination could not bring before her even the possibility of being overcome by weakness or old age. She was a model housekeeper, but not a homekeeper. To leave a track upon the kitchen floor was as great an offense as a stain upon a soul. There was nothing soothing, quieting or peaceful about Martha Warner's home. Her husband always walked about as if he were treading on eggs; her children never came into the house when they could stay outside, and her neighbors always had to hear her complaints about the thousand and one duties she had to perform in her household.

She spoke more kindly to her father-in-law when she went into the house to get dinner. "I guess when I get my dishes out of the way this afternoon, I'll run down to Mrs. Green's and get some of her liniment. It's awful good for rheumatism they say—"

But in another moment the old nature asserted itself. She made a great clatter among the pots, pans, knives and forks, and when her husband came in began to fret and fume over her being drove all the time.

The poor old deacon wondered whether his son John ever mentally contrasted Marthy's ways with his mother's way. But John was sort of falling into his wife's way of thinking, thoughtless, perhaps, but he scarcely ever consulted his father about the farm matters, or told him about its interests. Fifty years, thought the deacon, I've worked on this old farm, I could tell John some things that he might do better in, but young folks think they know it all. Well, they will have to learn about it by experience, and he took his comforter, the old family Bible, from the stand at his side, and turned to the Psalms for a refuge.

"Where's grandpa?" asked the children the next morning, as he did not appear at the breakfast table as early as usual.

"You'd better go and see," their father replied.

"Grandpa's sick; he says he doesn't want any breakfast," the oldest boy said, "he only want's a drink of cold water."

John Warner immediately left his seat at the table and went into his father's room.

"I'm very sick, John," he said, "very sick; but I hope 'twill only be short. It will be hard for Marthy, just in haying time, too."

When John's wife found how very ill her father was, she felt reproached, especially as she had forgotten to go for the liniment, and she applied herself assiduously to caring for him. The all important "clearing up" in the morning became a minor consideration. The physician was sent for and everything done to alleviate disease, but the deacon's time had come to go home and he knew it. It was only a short time, two days, and then the old man's chair in the kitchen was empty forever. Martha was the last one to minister to his wants, and as she shook up his pillows and made him more comfortable, he said, "I always knew it was only your way, Marthy, only your way; you didn't mean nothing by it." The conscious-smitten woman leaned over the dying man and said, "Forgive me father."

The deacon's usefulness did not pass away with his infirmities. Martha Warner's housekeeping is so different now, since he passed away. The bustling has changed to quietness and fretfulness to cheering words. She is just as good a housekeeper, but love and patient serving is given to all.

Her husband often thinks if father were only here now, how pleased he would be with Marthy's way—such a changed way. And Marthy looks out of the west window and thinks, if "pa" was only here now, how differently I would treat him.

Orange Marmalade.

Score the oranges in quarters and peel them. Carefully remove all the white skin and leave only the yellow rind, which put on the fire with plenty of cold water and boil till soft. Squeeze the juice and pulp, keeping out the white skin and seeds. Put on the fire with as many pounds of loaf sugar as you have oranges weighed before they are cut. When boiled half an hour add the yellow rinds, which must be cut into chips, boil until it jellies and the chips are cooked through and all is transparent and tender. Put into glasses to cool. This is the genuine rule for the imported Scotch marmalade.

A Favorable Verdict.

The suit of David Thompson against the New York and Greenwood Lake Railway Company was the first case tried in the Circuit Court of Newark on Wednesday. Mr. Thompson, who is a well-known resident of the Sixth Ward, claims that on July 3, 1883, he purchased an excursion ticket to Greenwood Lake at the North Newark depot of the New York and Greenwood Lake Railroad. He claims that the company advertised that excursion tickets would be good till July 5. On the morning of July 4 he started to return to Newark. When he offered his ticket the conductor refused to take it, and when the train reached Hewitt, Mr. Thompson was put off, but without violence. The jury rendered a verdict of $75 for the plaintiff.

The Loss of Our Game.

In a country where every man and boy may carry a gun and keep a dog if he wishes to, and where people generally little heed who shoots, or what is shot, whether the laws are obeyed or broken, what wonder is it that wild birds and beasts disappear, and that our markets are almost bare of game, in seasons when it should be cheap and plenty? Game of all kinds is plentier and cheaper, all over England, France, and Germany, than it is here. The time may possibly come, when the right to carry a fowling-piece will be obtained by paying a high license fee, when the privilege of shooting over certain districts, will be sold for a term of years to the highest bidder, or disposed of at an annual rental. Should that time come, game will be abundant again. Many townships or school districts, if they had the right and the will to enforce it, might in this way secure an income sufficient to pay all school expenses, and very likely a good part of the highway tax. As it is, farmers might do a great deal if they would, towards suppressing this irresponsible, general shooting, which is going on every autumn. It will be necessary for them first to become familiar with the game laws, and then aid in enforcing them by every means in their power. Neighbors' boys are the worst. Nobody wants to do anything to get the ill will of his neighbor, so the boys are not hindered. They blaze away at robins and quail, yellow hammers and rabbits, in or out of season, until they think they have a perfect right to do it. In the woods of Maine, in the Adirondacks, and in similar regions, one would think the woodsmen, and those who live by hunting and fishing, and act as guides to the hundreds of sportsmen who visit these places, would take some pains, law or no law, to preserve their principal attraction. But no, they will shoot deer indiscriminately, in or out of season, and what is worse, they will shoot a doe as quickly as a buck. There are thousands of acres of land in almost every township, certainly in every rural county, where the ground is so rough as to be unfit for any agricultural purpose, and where even sheep cannot range, on account of the exposure to the attacks of the fly. These are just adapted to deer, and if they could be protected for a few years, would multiply rapidly. At the same time, wild turkeys, partridges, and lesser game birds, would increase.—Mason C. Weld in American Agriculturist for January.

Mr. JOHN H. STEVENS, Horse-shoer gives particular attention to shoeing, Forging, Stumbling, and Interfering Horses. Speedy Cutters stopped in an incredible short space of time. Horses with diseased feet treated in a particular manner by experienced workmen.

Surface Indications

What a miner would very properly term "surface indications" of what is beneath, are the Pimples, Sties, Sore Eyes, Boils, and Cutaneous Eruptions with which people are annoyed in spring and early summer. The effete matter accumulated during the winter months, now makes its presence felt, through Nature's endeavors to expel it from the system. While it remains, it is a poison that festers in the blood and may develop into Scrofula. This condition causes derangement of the digestive and assimilatory organs, with a feeling of enervation, languor, and weariness—often lightly spoken of as "only spring fever." These are evidences that Nature is not able, unaided, to throw off the corrupt atoms which weaken the vital force. To regain health, Nature must be aided by a thorough blood-purifying medicine; and nothing else is so effective as

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

which is sufficiently powerful to expel from the system even the taint of Hereditary Scrofula.

The medical profession indorse AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, and many attestations of the cures effected by it come from all parts of the world. It is, in the language of the Hon. Francis Jewett, ex-State Senator of Massachusetts and ex-Mayor of Lowell, "the only preparation that does real, lasting good."

THE CENTURY

FOR 1885-6.

The remarkable interest in the War Papers and in the many timely articles and strong serial features published recently in THE CENTURY has given that magazine a regular circulation of

More than 200,000 Copies Monthly.

Among the features for the coming volume, which begins with the November number, are:

THE WAR PAPERS

BY GEN. GRANT AND OTHERS.

These will be continued (most of them illustrated) until the chief events of the Civil War have been described by leading participants on both sides. General Grant's papers include descriptions of the battles of Chattanooga and the Wilderness. Gen. McClellan will write of Antietam, Gen. D. C. Buell of Shiloh, Generals Pope, Longstreet and others of the Second Bull Run, etc., etc. Naval combats, including the fight between the Kearsarge and the Alabama, by officers of both ships, will be described.

The "Recollections of a Private" and special war papers of an anecdotal or humorous character will be features of the year.

Serial Stories by

W. D. Howells, Mary Hallock Foote and George W. Cable.

Mr. Howells' serial will be in lighter vein than "The Rise of Silas Lapham." Mrs. Foote's is a story of mining life, and Mr. Cable's a novel of the Acadians of Louisiana. Mr. Cable will also contribute a series of papers on Slave songs and dances, including negro serpent-worship, etc.

SPECIAL FEATURES

Include "A Tricycle Pilgrimage to Rome," illustrated by Pennell; Historical Papers by Edward Eggleston, and others; Papers on Persia, by S. G. W. Benjamin, lately U. S. Minister, with numerous illustrations; Astronomical Articles, practical and popular, on "Sidereal Astronomy;" Papers on Christian Unity by representatives of various religious denominations; Papers on Manual Education, by various experts, etc., etc.

SHORT STORIES

By Frank R. Stockton, Mrs. Helen Jackson (H. H.), Mrs. Mary Hallock Foote, Joel Chandler Harris, H. H. Boyesen, T. A. Janvier, Julia Hawthorne, Richard M. Johnston, and others; and poems by leading poets. The Departments,—"Open Letters," "Bric-a-Brac," etc., will be fully sustained.

THE ILLUSTRATIONS

Will be kept up to the standard which has made THE CENTURY engravings famous the world over.

PRICES. A SPECIAL OFFER.

Regular subscription price, $4 a year. To enable new readers to get all the War Papers, with contributions from Generals Grant, Beauregard, McClellan, J. E. Johnston, Lew Wallace, Admiral Porter and others, we will send the 12 back numbers, November, 1884, to October, 1885, with a year's subscription beginning with November, 1885, for $6.00 for the whole. A subscription, with the 12 numbers bound in two handsome volumes, $7.50 for the whole. Back numbers only supplied at these prices with subscriptions.

A free specimen copy (back number) will be sent on request. Mention this paper.

All dealers and postmasters take subscriptions and supply numbers according to our special offer, or remittance may be made directly to

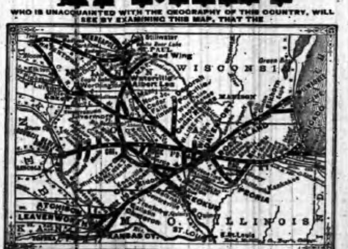
A MAN

WHO IS UNACQUAINTED WITH THE GEOGRAPHY OF THIS COUNTRY, WILL SEE BY EXAMINING THIS MAP, THAT THE



CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND & PACIFIC RAILWAY

By reason of its central position and close relation to all principal lines East and West, at initial and terminal points, constitutes the most important mid-continental link in that system of through transportation which invites and facilitates travel and traffic between cities of the Atlantic and Pacific Coasts. It is also the favorite and best route to and from points East, Northeast and Southeast, and corresponding points West, Northwest and Southwest.

The Rock Island system includes in its main line and branches, Chicago, Joliet, Ottawa, La Salle, Peoria, Geneseo, Moline and Rock Island, in Illinois; Davenport, Muscatine, Washington, Fairfield, Ottumwa, Oskaloosa, West Liberty, Iowa City, Des Moines, Indianola, Winterset, Atlantic, Knoxville, Audubon, Harlan, Guthrie Centre and Council Bluffs, in Iowa; Gallatin, Trenton, Cameron and Kansas City, in Missouri; Leavenworth and Atchison, in Kansas; Albert Lea, Minneapolis and St. Paul, in Minnesota; Watertown in Dakota, and hundreds of intermediate cities, towns, villages and stations.

THE GREAT ROCK ISLAND ROUTE

Guarantees its patrons that sense of personal security afforded by a solid, thoroughly ballasted road-bed; smooth tracks of continuous steel rail; substantially built culverts and bridges; rolling stock as near perfection as human skill can make it; the safety appliances of patent buffers, platforms and air-brakes; and that exacting discipline which governs the practical operation of all its trains. Other specialties of this route are Transfers at all connecting points in Union Depots, and the unsurpassed comforts and luxuries of its Passenger Equipment.

The Fast Express Trains between Chicago and the Missouri River are composed of well ventilated, finely upholstered Day Coaches, Magnificent Pullman Palace Sleepers of the latest design, and sumptuous Dining Cars, in which elaborately cooked meals are leisurely eaten. "good Digestion waiting on Appetite, and Health on both." Between Chicago and Kansas City and Atchison, are also run the Celebrated Reclining Chair Cars.

THE FAMOUS ALBERT LEA ROUTE

Is the direct and favorite line between Chicago and Minneapolis and St. Paul, where connections are made in Union Depots for all points in the Territories and British Provinces. Over this route, Fast Express Trains are run to the watering places, summer resorts, picturesque localities, and hunting and fishing grounds of Iowa and Minnesota. It is also the most desirable route to the rich wheat fields and pastoral lands of interior Dakota.

Still another DIRECT LINE, via Seneca and Kankakee, has been opened between Newport News, Richmond, Cincinnati, Indianapolis and Lafayette, and Council Bluffs, Kansas City, Minneapolis and St. Paul and intermediate points.

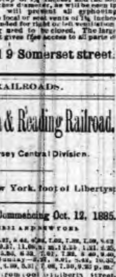
The "PERFECTION," All Porcelain.



WE TAKE pleasure in calling attention of our customers and all interested in sanitary matters to the all porcelain "Perfection," the only square top Hopper, with trap, made.— For perfect cleanliness and simplicity of construction we invite comparison with any Cistern Closet ever manufactured, either home or foreign. It combines, with the utmost simplicity, all the points of a strictly first-class water-closet. The square top will make itself apparent to all users, in doing away with drip tray, the wash at all times thoroughly scouring all parts, whereas in the drip tray it cannot help but become foul underneath. It has a seal in Trap of 1½ inches, and the soil pipe vent of 2 inches diameter, as will be seen by the above cut, will prevent all syphoning of Trap. The two local or seat vents of 1½ inches diameter are intended for right or left ventilation, the one not being used to be closed. The large handhole in front gives free access to all parts of trap.

Poetry.

THE SNOW STORM.

BY GRACE DENIO LITCHFIELD.

Lightly and whitely
As wheat from the grain,
Thickly and quickly
As thoughts through the brain,
So fast and so dumb
Do the snow flakes come;—
Swift, swift as the lays drop
From glad poet-lips,
Soft, soft as the days drip
From Time's finger-tips.
Oh, so many, so many!
Yet no sound from any.
Oh, so fast, oh, so fast!
Yet no track where they passed.
Oh, so fragile, so frail!
Yet no force can prevail
To speed them or stay them.
No prayer can outweigh them.
They fall where they must.
Through the fathomless gray,
And bring to earth's dust
What of heaven they may

ON HIS TRACK.

"Over twenty years ago," said Mr. Whitmire, a detective, with whom I recently had an interview, "I was on the police force of New York. One Summer night, a few minutes past 12, I was pacing my beat in a quiet part of C—— street, when a man called from a second story window:"

"I say, sir, are you a policeman?"

"Yes," I said. "What's the matter?"

"I heard a heavy fall in Mr. Bradley's house, next door, and he may have fallen and hurt himself. He just came in a few minutes ago. If I were you I'd ring the bell."

Mr. Bradley was a wealthy old bachelor who had lived entirely alone for years in an old-fashioned brick house. His riches were a subject for frequent gossip, and it was said that in his house, to which no outsider was ever admitted, he kept a lot of silverware and money. I rang the bell but there was no response.

"Are you sure you saw him go in?" I inquired.

"Yes, sure of it. He hadn't been in more than half a minute before I heard a heavy fall. I have heard nothing since."

"There must be something wrong," I said, after ringing the bell a second time and receiving no response. I tried the door, but it was locked.

"If I were you I would force the door," suggested the man at the window.

"I don't like to do that. Is there no other entrance?"

"Yes, that alley just beyond the steps leads to a back yard, but the gate is probably locked, as well as the rear door."

"I will go and see," said I; and walking up the narrow alley I discovered by the dim light of the street lamp nearly opposite, that the gate was wide open. I looked in and perceived that the rear door was also open, and a faint light shone out. All was perfectly quiet. I returned to the street and said to the man:

"The gate and back door are open. Come down and we'll go in."

In half a minute he joined me on the sidewalk, when I recognized him as an acquaintance named Henry Collins.

"Ah, is that you? I didn't know you lived here," I said.

"Yes, and I didn't recognize you when I first addressed you."

"Well, there may have been foul work here," said I; "so we'll go in."

We went into the yard and entered the house. The rear room had evidently been used as a kitchen; and guided by a dim light we passed into a narrow hall with a stairway. Near the street door was an old table, upon which was a lighted candle that had burned to within an inch of the candlestick. At the foot of the stairs lay Mr. Bradley, quite dead, and a frightful wound upon his head convinced us that he was murdered.

At my request Mr. Collins hurried away to the police station to notify the captain; while I made an examination of the premises. A number of drawers in the second story back room had been broken open and ransacked, and on the floor lay half of a fresh looking newspaper. Knowing that the old bachelor was not in the habit of spending money for newspaper, it struck me that the robber might have had it in his pocket, and probably used the other half to wrap up his plunder, leaving behind him, in his hurry, what might prove a most valuable clew. I therefore folded up the fragment and put it in my pocket. A moment later Mr. Collins returned, accompanied by several officers and a surgeon.

To make this part of my story brief, I will state that the usual formalities followed, the body being handed to the coroner, and the case was put in the hands of detectives. I at first intended to give up the bit of newspaper I had picked up, but I had some ambition to be a detective myself, and concluded to keep it at least a day or two, to see if I could find a clew from it. It was lucky I did.

On the following afternoon, while off duty, and walking around in my ordinary dress, I paused opposite a well-known hotel to watch some painters who were at work on the scaffold under the eaves, and my eyes happened to light upon a man who sat by a third story window, apparently packing a valise. The window was open, and, as he lifted some article to store it away, a piece of newspaper on which it had lain came fluttering into the gutter near my feet.

I might not have noticed this trifling circumstance but for the manner in which the paper had been torn—that is not in a straight line, but almost in the form of a letter V, as though it had been torn in a hurry. This corresponded with the piece I had found in the murdered man's house and I snatched it up and ran into an alley to compare them. What a leap my heart gave when I found the two parts of paper fitted exactly—there was no doubt about it.

"On his track," I muttered. "He must not get off with that valise."

Being familiar with the hotel, I crossed the street, went in, and was soon rapping at the door of room 21, from whose window the paper had just blown.

"Come in," said a voice.

I opened the door and recognized, still seated by the window, the man I had seen packing the valise, a task he had completed. He was a muscular man of forty, with a clean-shaven face that wore an expression of craftiness. He seemed confused when I entered, and said:

"Ah, I thought it was the porter. Haven't you made a mistake?"

Without replying I deliberately locked the door, and I put the key in my pocket, while he stared amazedly.

"I see you are getting ready to leave," said I, sarcastically.

"Yes."

"Suppose you stay in New York a little longer," I said.

"Why, what do you mean?" he exclaimed, rising from his chair.

"Oh, nothing of consequence," I replied, coolly. "Perhaps you wouldn't object to my taking a look into that valise, eh?"

"Perhaps you will do me the kindness to get out of my room," he retorted.

He had taken the valise from the floor, and I quickly snatched it from him. I had hardly done so when he dealt me a blow near the temple, sending me reeling across the room, when I brought up against the door. He then threw the valise on the bed, and angrily said:

"Look here, sir, are you drunk or crazy? Now hand me that key and get out of my room, or I'll throw you out of the window."

"Not so fast," said I, drawing my revolver. "I am an officer, and here to arrest you for the murder you committed last night."

He stared a moment, then a change came over his countenance, and he sat down and fairly roared with laughter.

"Come, you can't play that," said I. "This is no laughing matter. Where is the money and silverware you took from Bradley's?"

"Are you really an officer," he asked, growing serious again.

"Certainly I am. Perhaps you never saw this bit of paper, sir," said I, displaying the piece that had blown from the window.

"My friend," he replied. "I admire the earnestness with which you go about your business as a detective, but you have got on the wrong track. I am sorry I struck you in a moment of anger, and I hope you will pardon me. I am Charley M——, a Boston detective; of whom you have probably heard. I arrived at daylight this morning, and have been taking a good sleep before attending to some business in Brooklyn. I registered as J. Brown, for a reason you will readily comprehend. Here is my card, and here are some slight evidences of my occupation." Here he took two pairs of handcuffs out of his pocket and jingled them before my astonished gaze. "By the way, if that is the piece of newspaper that fell from my window, and you think it has any connection with the affair you speak of, it will probably afford you an important clue. I found it here, where it was probably left by a former lodger. I think you will find a name on the margin."

I examined the margin over the title of the paper, and to my astonishment found written in pencil the name and residence of Henry Collins. It was a weekly paper which I observed was published in a city he had formerly lived in, and its date was so recent that he must have received it on the day preceding the murder. I immediately took leave of Mr. M——, saying I thought I knew where the paper had come from, and, begging his pardon for having been so rude to him, I hastened down to the office of the hotel, where I examined the register, finding the name J. Brown, with room 21 as signed. I knew the clerk, and I inquired.

"When did Mr. Brown take room 21?"

"Early this morning, when I was not on duty."

"Did any one occupy the room during the evening?"

"No—yes—let me see," he replied, glancing over the register—"Here is the name of Harvey Elton. I remember now. He was without baggage and paid for the room in advance, saying that he wanted to be called at 3 o'clock. The porter went up at that hour, but the door was open and the bed had not been slept in. The other clerk told me he gave the same room to Mr Brown because he wanted a front room."

"Do you remember the appearance of Elton?"

"Yes—rather a small man, with a very full black beard."

Henry Collins was a small man, but had no beard. Of course, my suspicions were fixed on him as soon as I discovered his name on the margin of the newspaper, yet I never dreamed that he was capable of committing a crime.

It was about midnight that Henry Collins told me that Mr. Bradley had been in but a very few minutes. I now remembered that the body was cold and rigid when I first went in, and I hastened away to meet the surgeon who had made the examination five minutes later.

I had the luck to find him soon, and in reply to my inquiry he stated that Bradley must have been dead two hours when he was called.

"Have the detectives found any clue?" he asked.

"Not that I am aware of," I replied, and took my leave.

My first step now was to go to an establishment in which Collins was employed and inquire for him. I did so, and was told that he had asked and obtained leave of absence to visit Trenton. I next started for his house, which was half a mile distant, carefully looking up and down every street I crossed. I had made half the distance when I caught a glimpse of the very man I was looking for. He was coming toward me on one of the cross streets, showing that he had come directly from his house. He carried a valise, and by his side walked a small, rough looking man whom I did not know, and with him he was conversing earnestly. I went a few steps to meet them, and was within a few yards of them before Collins saw me.

"Ah, how are you, Mr. Collins?" I said.

He started visibly, but on recognizing me seemed to regain his composure and answered my salutation. He would have passed on, but I detained him by passing in front of him and opening a conversation.

"Going traveling," said I.

"Yes; to New Haven."

"Wouldn't it be just as well to go to Trenton?" I asked significantly.

He turned pale and in a voice that quivered perceptibly said:

"Great Heaven, Mr. Whitmire, what do you mean now?"

"I mean that you and your friend must go to the station with me."

With a look of despair on his face that I shall never forget he dropped his valise and staggered a few steps to an awning post, which he held to for support.

At the same moment his companion turned to dart away, but, luckily, two men, who had just stepped on the sidewalk to talk, stood directly in his path, and his movements became confused. I reached him in one bound and seized him by the collar, warning him not to resist. He was thoroughly cowed, while Collins had too little strength left in him to escape.

In five minutes I marched them into the station, together with the valise, and had them locked up in different cells. I then told the captain the whole story. He was disposed to think, at first, that I had made a blunder; but on questioning the two prisoners, and especially on examining the valise and finding a large sum of money in it, he concluded that I had caught the right men, and so distanced the regular detectives.

It proved to be so, and the two men were duly convicted of murder on evidence that was beyond all dispute. Indeed, when Collins lost all hope of escaping the gallows, he was so broken down that he made a full confession, giving substantially the following account of the crime.

The stories of Bradley's great wealth had first put it into his head to rob him. By watching for a long time from a back window he had discovered the nature of the fastenings by which the back door and gates were secured. He was not bold enough to undertake the task alone, but he knew a certain bad character named Kevern, to whom he confided his scheme, describing the fastenings on Bradley's gate and door and asking him if he thought he could force them.

Kevern said he could, and readily entered into the plot. They went to work a little after dark one night, when they knew that Bradley had gone out; but the fastenings of the rear door resisted much longer than they expected, and they had but fairly succeeded in entering when Bradley came in at the front door, locked it, and lighted his candle.

Determined not to be foiled now, they rushed upon the old man and struck him down with the tools they had been using. This, it seems, was between nine and ten o'clock.

They then ransacked the house, finding considerable money, chiefly in bank notes. The latter were in a disordered condition, and to make a compact bundle of them, Collins hastily tore in two the fatal newspaper, which he chanced to have in his pocket, using one-half to wrap his spoils in, and in his nervous haste leaving the other on the floor.

In order to examine their plunder at leisure they went to the hotel alluded to where one of them engaged a room to which he repaired, and in which he was soon joined by the other. Both of them were disguised, a portion of Collins' being a false beard.

Collins felt so nervous over the awful affair that night that he would not take any of the plunder home with him, and so, after counting the money, he intrusted it to Kevern, for the night, with the understanding that they should meet next day, take a trip to New Haven, and there deposit his share in the bank in his own name, or any name he might wish to assume.

When Kevern made a package of the money again, he picked up a fragment of another newspaper he found in the room, leaving that bearing Collins' name lying upon the floor. It was shortly after Collins' return home that night he called my attention to poor Bradley's house, foolishly thinking that by so doing he would not come within the range of suspicion.

Collins died before the day appointed for his execution, but Kevern paid the extreme penalty of the law.

It was in this case which I was largely assisted by mere chance, that gave me a place on the detective force, and I have been pretty successful ever since. Many a man has worked harder and displayed more sagacity than I did on the occasion without accomplishing so great an end.

A MAN IN A FIX.

It takes a deal of courage for me to write this, for I am a bashful man; and, indeed, if I were not, one could not wonder at my disinclination to make public such peculiarly trying events as occurred to me at the time of which I am about to write.

It was in the summer of 18—, Ned Nixon and myself were enjoying a trip to the White Hills and enjoying it most heartily, too.

I shall never regret that ride through the Notch. The only persons in the stage besides ourselves were a jolly old gent and two lovely girls—one his daughter, the other his niece. Although strangers to us when we left Conway, we were soon good friends, for who can resist the sociability of a stage ride? And when did two good-looking young men and two pretty girls pass two or three hours together without scraping acquaintance?

But I hurry over all this, for the perspiration is already oozing from every pore at the thought of what befell me, and of what I have to record; if I do not hurry, I shall not have strength to proceed.

We dined at the Mount Crawford, of course, and late in the afternoon drew up before Gibbs' Hotel, which every one remembers as lying at the foot of Mount Washington.

The only drawback to the pleasure of our ride had been the dust, and when we were all dressed alike in gray suits.

We were in haste to have rooms assigned us and make ourselves presentable. The young ladies were told by their chaperon to wait for him in the reception room while he attended to the luggage, etc., etc.

Ned was marched off to the apartments allotted him.

I hailed a green looking son of Erin, and begging him to dispose of me in the same way, and was about to follow him up stairs, when I thought to look after my trunk, that he might take that with him.

Judge of my feelings when I found that it had been left behind! Here was a pretty go! The driver could not tell whether it was the Mount Crawford or at Conway; in either case, I could not get it until the next day.

Swearing was useless, so with a melancholy gesture, I bade Pat go ahead, and following him up two pair of stairs, was ushered into a very well furnished and good sized apartment. The next thing was how to make myself presentable at the tea table without the aid of the toilet appurtenances contained in my trunk.

As I surveyed myself in the glass a more deplorable figure could not well be imagined. I took off coat and pants and gave them to Pat, with orders to give them a thorough beating and brushing, out of doors, and then bring them up to me.

Before further disrobing for bathing purposes, I looked around my room, and saw a door, apparently a closet door. I opened it, and, sure enough, there was a marvelously spacious closet, which in a hotel is a rarity. I think some malignant fairy was behind me at that time, for what did possess me to explore that closet so leisurely? and what else would have caused the door to be nearly close behind me?

Suffice it to say, these things did take place, and hearing a noise in the room, I turned, thinking to see Pat with my coat and pants when through the crack where the closet door stood ajar I beheld entertaining my apartment the young ladies who were our travelling companions in the stage. I had the presence of mind to draw the closet door to before they had turned toward it, and with faculties benumbed at the turn of my situation, heard them coolly tell the waiter that the room would suit them very well he might go down and bring up their trunks. I shook in every limb. What was I to do? Speak and make known the plight I was in, thus making myself ridiculous, and lose all chance of winning favor in the eyes of Fanny, for whom I had already received a tender passion? No, never!

What should be done? Would the waiter returning with my clothes, make search for me, and finding, expose me to the gaze of——. Oh, horrors! My blood ran cold at the thought. I found myself unable to think clearly. The perspiration was pouring down my body, that is, if slowly trickling can be called pouring, for, mingling with the dust, it became about the consistency of good sugar house molasses.

Meantime the young ladies were throwing off their outer garments, and expressing themselves well pleased with their quarters.

"This savors of romance, Fan," said Mabel.

Ugh! I inwardly groaned. "I think so, decidedly.

"It certainly does," continued Miss Mabel; "to fall in with two such elegant young men, and so early in our journey; but Ned is my favorite."

"Theodore is mine, May," said Fanny. "I'm in love with him already."

(I begin to think life had not lost all its charms.)

"Well then we're both suited."

Here came a knock at the door, and I heard:

"The gentleman's clothes, ma'am."

"Gentleman's clothes! there's no gentleman here," said Fanny.

Wasn't there? Oh, heavens! what should I do? There were my clothes going off before my very eyes, and no knowing whether I should ever see them again. There was no help for it, and I heard Pat's bewildered tones as he turned away from the door to look elsewhere for the "gintleman."

This episode over, Fanny and Mabel commenced what appeared to be a disrobing process, and I was roused from my apathetic state of despair by hearing the former remark:

"I declare, my bones are nearly all broken, May? What shall I do?"

A vision of my dear one with her beautiful limbs fractured so tortured me that I was on the point of rushing to her assistance when I was horrified by hearing her cousin reply:

"Never mind, dear. I have a skeleton in my trunk that I will lend you."

Goodness gracious, was I dreaming? What sort of people were these that broke their bones and inserted new (or old) skeletons, at their pleasure? My blood grew cold and hot by turns. I lost all thought of my own predicament in my horror; still the disrobing of the maidens proceeded. Then I heard the refreshing sound of splashing water. I imagined—well, no matter what. I do not think I am accountable for all that passed through my bewildered brain at that time.

All this while it had seemed to me that I could bathe and dress a regiment in less time than it had taken these two young women. I had grown so nervous that I was in imminent danger of either laughing or crying aloud—it seemed quite uncertain which.

What would Ned think had become of me? How was I ever to get out of this place? How get my wearing apparel?

"Where under the sun are my rats?" demanded Fanny.

Here was new food for thought. Were they Chinese? Were the rats to be cooked for their supper? Are these specimens of women as a class?

"Theodore," said I to myself, "in what a state of ignorance have you lived, my boy! How innocently you have always regarded the sex!"

The rats seemed to have been captured without difficulty, though, in spite of my sufferings. I listened for squeals.

"Are the irons hot, Fan?"

Horrors heaped upon horrors. Could those two lovely girls be about to put rats to death in that inhuman fashion? I must protest against it; and yet, the disgrace of being found. No; the rats might die before I would venture a word in their behalf.

I find myself utterly unable to give any adequate idea of my feelings during that terrible time, and occasionally the thought of the ridiculous figure I should present, could anyone have seen me, overcome all other emotions, and I came near laughing aloud.

At last (as near as I could judge) the young ladies had completed their toilets. The rustling of silk told me that, if I was ever to get out of my prison, I should soon have the opportunity.

The tea gong sounded, and I felt like shouting for joy. The old gentleman knocked at the door of the room, and as the young ladies opened it, I heard the voice of my friend Ned. How cheery it sounded, how refreshed he seemed to feel, and how I wanted to throttle him, as he had been the cause of my misfortunes. At last their retreating voices and footsteps assured me that I was safe, and with a bound I sprang from my hiding place, making at once for the bell rope and door key. Just as I reached the latter, the door opened, and Ned stood before me. Never shall I forget his expression. Surprise, horror, incredulity, dismay, everything that a man's face could convey, was there.

"Thode Marston——"

"Stop for Heaven's sake, Ned, and help me," I exclaimed, piteously, and in as few words as possible I told my dismal tale.

In return he burst into a fit of laughter so protracted that I at first grew enraged, then alarmed, lest serious consequences should ensue.

Finally, after taking Miss Mabel her fan, for which he had returned to the room, he succeeded in finding the waiter who had an extra suite of clothes in his hands, and who had so stupidly allotted another's room to me without giving any notice at the office; and by the time the ladies returned from the supper room I was presentable, though feeling rather weak in the joints, I must confess.

Ned has promised secrecy upon his honor, but his black eyes did twinkle when Miss Fanny asked how I had enjoyed myself since our arrival, at which I blushed so excessively that I knew she thought me a fool. I confess that it took me some days to recover from the effects of that afternoon; but Fanny's sweet face, and my ardent love for her, drove all unpleasant impressions away at last.

She is my wife now; and for the benefit of my bachelor friends, and lest they should feel alarmed at some parts of my story, I will say that all that about the bones, skeletons, rats, etc., wasn't what I thought at all; in fact, it was nothing terrible, and if they want to feel sure of it, I would advise them to get just such a wife as I have and they will understand all about it.

The Board of Trade of Rahway held a meeting in the office of Vail & Ward, in the Exchange Building, and effected a permanent organization by electing the following officers: President, Mayor J. J. Daly, M. D.; Vice Presidents, Judge L. S. Hyer and B. A. Vail; Secretary, ex-Major Linus High; Directors, Assemblyman William Chamberlin, ex-Assemblyman F. L. Sheldon, Councilman J. J. SUNSHINE.

Never did a New Year open more beautifully than 1886. A day of balmy atmosphere and golden sunshine ushered with gladness its first appearance.

May such be prognostic of the good it has in store for us as a people—the sweetness of unity and the joy of prosperity.

We are at peace within our own widely expanded borders and at peace with all other nationalities.

May that blessed condition forever continue, and herald the glorious era when the last battle flag on earth shall be furled.

The ire of partisan bitterness is fast melting away before the patriotic fervor of justice and truth, and instead of narrow-minded political bigotry and denunciation, American freemen are becoming more and more devoted to the sensible and benign doctrine of mutual respect, liberalizing thought, and intelligent judgment.

We dwell in a realm of matchless grandeur. Stretching from almost polar cold to tropic heat, our Country embraces within that mighty territorial expanse every imaginable resource of material wealth and the means of happy existence, while beneath the protecting wing of a governmental system, the wisest and best ever designed for the welfare of mankind, fifty millions of people rest secure.

Such we are at the advent of the New Year.

May national peace and good will strengthen as the months pass away.

Sectional animosity entirely cease.

Political effort be for the general public benefit, in lieu of selfish personal interests.

Laws be impartially and promptly enforced.

Rigid justice exert its sway.

Honesty and morality rise into dominion.

Industry find adequate reward.

Right be the sole aim of action.

Then will the latter days of 1886 be, in effect, even brighter and better than the first.

THE OLD AND NEW.

From the report of Council proceedings to be found in the columns of this issue, will be learned the last acts of the Council of 1885 and the first of that of 1886. The Council of 1885 passes out of existence with credit to themselves and the city. They were good officials and have served the public faithfully and honestly. We have no desire to individualize, where all performed their onerous duties so well. The Council of 1886 comes into power under somewhat different auspices. For years the affairs of the City of Plainfield have been managed under Republican rule. The Council of 1886 come before the public under a different administration. Six of the eleven members are Democrats, and consequently have a majority on all questions coming before them. We are not inclined to boast of the fact that Republican Plainfield has a Democratic Council. That circumstance came in the natural order of things, and the people are now watching to see how the result of their votes will terminate, and how their hopes are to be rewarded. The Council of 1886 is composed of gentlemen of worth and ability, and we have not the least doubt but that they will minister the affairs of our fair city with wisdom and judgment, so that at the close of their term of office, the people can say—"well done, good and faithful servants, enter thou again into the Councilmanic fold." In the selection of Mr. Tell A. Beguelin, as President, the new Council have acted wisely. Mr. Beguelin has had long experience in the affairs of our city, and is capable and efficient for the position. He needs no fulsome praises. He will do that which is honest and right in all his dealings as presiding officer. In the selection of Mr. Richard F. Merritt for Clerk, the new Council again made a good and wise choice. Mr. Merritt is well qualified for such an important position and cannot fail to give satisfaction in the discharge of his duties. He is a representative of the young Democracy of the city, and his appointment as Clerk is a credit to the party. The new Council starts off on its eventful career with good hands at the helm. Success to it.

Sheriff Sikes on Monday last levied on locomotive and tender No. 807, of the Pennsylvania Railroad, to satisfy a judgment of between three and four thousand dollars, obtained by the executor of the estate against the company for the killing of a man named Van Ness, of Middlesex county, some time ago. The suit was tried in this county, and a verdict against the company obtained by the plaintiff. The damage awarded was not paid, however, and the levy was accordingly made. This caused the company to make very prompt settlement, and Tuesday morning the levy was raised.

The new City Council of Elizabeth organized on Friday evening last, by re-electing most of the old officers as follows—President, Mr. Rankin; City Clerk, W. R. C. Coleman; City Attorney, Frank Bergen; City Surveyor, Ernest L. Meyer; City Physician of Upper Wards, Dr. E. K. Morton; City Physician of Lower Ward, Dr. N. L. Wilson; Overseer of Poor, Samuel L. Moore; Sealer of Weights and Measures, Thomas Seymour; Police Justice, Nicholas Dabb, Street Commissioner, Morris M. Matson.

John G. Stevens, a prominent citizen of Trenton, and President of the United New Jersey Railroad Companies, was found dead in his office in the above city on Wednesday last, with a bullet hole in the right side of his head and a discharged pistol by his side. It is supposed he committed suicide.

The fun commences at Trenton next Tuesday. The Republican Legislature then convenes. There is much bitterness of feeling already engendered over the selection of a President of the Senate and Speaker of the House. Keep the quarrel up, brethren. It is none of our fight.

Mr. A. V. D. Honeyman, editor of the Somerville Unionist-Gazette, is a prominent candidate for the secretaryship of the Republican Senate. Should he be so fortunate as to secure the position, that body will have a capable and efficient Secretary.

The Republicans of the New York Legislature have selected James W. Husted, Speaker of the House of Assembly, and Edmund L. Pitts, President pro tem of the Senate.

Great snow blockades are reported out West and immense damage done in the Southwest by the recent floods.

LOCAL ANNEX.

Hymeneal.

Miss McMurtrie of North Plainfield was married last Tuesday evening, as also were Miss Anna Montgomery, of Central avenue, and Mr. Clair Derby. Next Tuesday evening is the date set for the marriage of Miss Anna Balen and Mr Abram Hooley, "all of this city."

Seats for Dr. Talmage's Lecture.

The ladies of the W. C. T. U. have arranged to have the holders of course tickets select reserved seats for Dr. Talmage's lecture in Music Hall, without extra charge, at Reynolds' pharmacy, on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, Jan. 12th, 13th and 14th. Course tickets must be presented. General sales commence on Friday. General admission tickets, 50 cents; reserved seats, 75 cents.

In Most Competent Hands.

The extensive and successful business that has been built up by years of fair dealing and care for the interests of their numerous patrons by D. Boehm & Bro., has passed into the competent hands of Mr. Ignatz Boehm, the young and popular member of the firm. The new manager has scores of friends that will wish him the best of fortune in his business relations as well as in the change of domestic arrangements he is contemplating.

Appropriate Action.

The Board of Education on Monday evening last resolved that the Public School Buildings in the city of Plainfield shall be designated by name as follows:

Building Fifth and Union streets—"Stillman."

Building Fourth and Union streets—"Franklin."

Building Fifth and Liberty streets—"Washington."

Building Sixth street, (new) "Bryant."

Masonic Installation.

At a regular communication of Jerusalem Lodge No. 26, F. and A. M., held in Masonic Hall, Tuesday evening, the following elective and appointed officers were installed for the ensuing year. Past Master Wm. B. Maxson acted as Installing officer, and S. C. Peck of Anchor Lodge as Marshal of the evening:

John Utrich, P. M., W. M.
W. L. Titsworth, S. W.
Karl Polak, J. W.
J. G. Miller, Treasurer.
B. F. Coriell, P. M., Secretary.
H. Woodland, S. D.
T. O. Doane, J. D.
E. D. Moffett, S. M. C.
John Vetterlein, J. M. C.
G. Hanson, } Stewards.
T. Beeching, }
W. H. Sebring, P. M. Marshal.
C. P. Leggett, Organist.
R. J. Swackhammer, P. M., Chaplain.
W. V. Mundy, Tyler.

A Surprise and a Success.

The excellence of the Templeton opera company, which rendered "Mikado" at Music Hall, New Year's Day, with such satisfaction and success, was a genuine surprise and an unexpected treat to all. That it might be a "good company" as companies go that play one-night towns, was considered possible, but to find yourself really enjoying the chorus, able to endure the orchestra, and discovering certain little particulars wherein some of the cast and some of the voices excelled those of either the Fifth avenue or Standard companies, was an emphatic surprise. We have heard them all, but never so good a "Nanki-Pooh" in voice as Mr. Jay C. Taylor, nor so good a "Pitti-Sing" in action as Miss Hattie Starr. The "Yum-Yum" of Miss Meridith was far ahead of Jarbeau's, and Mr. Seymour's "Ko Ko" gratified his audience fully as well as another's. In fact, so apparent was the enthusiastic endorsement by the entire audience of the entire company, that a return date was made for "Easter Monday."

The January Term of Court.

The January term of court opened Tuesday morning last, at Elizabeth, with Judges Van Syckel, McCormick, Hyer and Harper on the bench. The court was called to order at 10.30 o'clock. After some preliminary business had been done the grand jury filed into the court-room and responded to their names, called by Clerk Crowell, as follows:

Elizabeth—Foreman William McKinlay, Edward P. Edwards, William McCormack, Francis J. Bisatz, James Oakes, William G. Ballantyne, Charles Ross, Samuel Murray.

Plainfield—Rudolphus McDonald, William B. Sterling, Jasper G. Cadmus, W. Wallace Coriell.

Union—John Kean, jr.

Rahway—Henry Howard, Daniel T. Hatfield, Joseph T. Mead, Sanford E. Roll.

Westfield—James D. Miller.

Fanwood—George Kyte.

Cranford—Gideon E. Ludlow.

Springfield—J. Martin Roll.

New Providence—John M. Wilcox.

Summit—Jonathan Bunnell.

Linden—George H. Masop.

Mr. Marion was excused, Judge Van Syckel stating that only twenty-three jurors could serve.

Judge Van Syckel's charge to the jurors was very brief. He merely stated what their duties were and how they should act. He notified them to choose what officers they liked to serve them, and Constable J. C. Jefferson and William M. Pangborn were chosen.

Teachers' Reading Circle.

During the last year or two there has been, throughout the whole country, a grand movement on the part of the teaching profession towards culture and more liberal professional education of its members. Teachers' Reading Circles have been established in about twenty states, with the avowed purpose of raising the profession to a higher educational standard. The means adopted to accomplish such purpose are after the well known plan of The Chautauqua and Dr. Vincent of the latter organization is deeply interested in the intents and purposes of the teachers.

The first meeting of the New Jersey Circle was held at Newark, Dec., 5th, and at a subsequent meeting in the same city on the 30th, the organization was perfected. Hon. E. O. Chapman, State Superintendent of Education, was elected President; Mr. C. E. Meleney of Paterson, Vice President, and the following a Board of Directors, taking one from each Congressional District of the State: Rev. F. R. Brace of Camden, Principal Hanson of Atlantic City, Prof. W. Eckersley of Long Branch, Prof. C. E. Boss of this city, Prof. P. E. Demarest of Dover, Hon. W. H. Barringer of Newark and Principal A. B. Gilford of Jersey City. There will be a meeting of the above Board at Trenton, tomorrow, at eleven o'clock, when a Secretary, Treasurer and a Board of City and County Managers for each District will be elected.

Appeal for a New Church.

The undersigned, pastor and consistory of the Reform German church of this city, take the liberty to come before the citizens of Plainfield and North Plainfield, and especially before the Germans, with a most urgent appeal to help us to build a new house of worship, so absolutely needed. To be able to begin as early as possible in Spring, we authorized our pastor, Rev. F. Koechli, to start a subscription and to collect for said purpose. Not hastily, but after a long consideration and preparation in every direction, and driven only by absolute want on the one hand, and on the other the desire to be useful to the Kingdom of our Lord, and for the benefit of our beloved German brethren we come with our request. It is our persuasion that the prosperity of the Kingdom of God among the Germans in this city, and the future of our congregation depends largely upon the realizing of our purpose. We have only one wish, that is, to glorify our Lord Jesus Christ and to become a strong and self-supporting congregation, and that was not possible under the past circumstances. But to realize our wishes we need absolutely a new church in just that place which we recently purchased and this church also should be without any debt, if possible. The German population in this city, which is increasing from year to year, and which will do so in time to come, is large enough to make a good congregation and wishes to do so. For that we are sure our German brethren are willing to support us with all their heart and in a most liberal way, to realize this glorious work as many of them promised us, but we are neither numerous nor wealthy enough to bear the whole burden, and that only is the reason why we request the support of our American friends. We know that Christian love and liberality are strained enough in the city of Plainfield, but at the same time we believe that neither will fail when needed, and therefore we come with our appellation. The majority of our Germans don't understand enough English to attend the services in an English church, and what should become of them if they could not have an opportunity to have the gospel preached in their own language, and so to find and receive contentedness for their hearts. "So then faith cometh by hearing. But how shall they believe if they cannot hear." Trusting to the Lord, whose promises we have, and believing that our appeal will not be a failure, we sign,

F. KOECHLI, Pastor.

And the consistory of the Reform German church. Julius Williams, M. Pieschinski, Pete Dieringer, Elders; Henry Strauch, V. Uhlinger, ——— Seligmann, Deacons.

Democratic County Executive Committee.

The first meeting of the County Democratic Executive committee, for the year 1886, was held at Elizabeth on Monday last.

The special object of the meeting was for the purpose of organization for the ensuing year.

The minutes of the last meeting of the former committee were read and adopted.

Mr. Davis, of Rahway, offered the following:

Resolved, That this committee tender to Thomas B. Budd, chairman; J. Williams Crane, treasurer, and Charles A. Ryan, secretary, its hearty and sincere thanks for the able, courteous and impartial manner in which they have discharged the duties of their respective offices for the past year; and be it

Resolved, That this resolution be spread upon the minutes.

The resolution was unanimously adopted. After which, the foregoing officers were re-elected:

A committee of three, consisting of Wm. McCloskey, R. M. Stover and George C. Tenney were appointed to draft suitable resolutions of respect for the memory of Mr. James S. Sandford, late member of the committee. After which, the meeting was adjourned.

5th Anniversary of Mr. Raymond's Pastorate.

We take pleasure in publishing the following words of the Rev. A. V. V. Raymond delivered last Sunday upon the occasion of the fifth anniversary of the beginning of his pastorate:

"You all know that this is the Fifth anniversary of my coming to Plainfield, and as I have been looking over the years which we have passed together, and the retrospect, it has warmed the heart and filled it with gratitude, and the spirit has been strengthened, and I believe my faith purpose has been strengthened, and the willingness which I think always characterized our coming together, and there is a something which has bound us together in close union. We have been sharing each other's lives, and there has been no great joy or great sorrow in the homes of any of the congregation but what has been felt in the Pastor's home; and there has not been a joy or a sorrow or an anxiety in our homes but what we have realized an awakening sympathy in every home throughout this congregation. Thus living together and sharing our sorrows and joys, has brought us into the closest union. I can not bear the thoughts of our being separated now; and there has been nothing to mar the absolute perfect union between pastor and people. This is an exception, and no church can have it any deeper or more heartfelt, and this is so because you have borne kindly with me in overlooking many failures and many faults. I think we have changed in the past five years, and have grown somewhat better, I trust, and I am conscious of an elevation in our thoughts, understanding and mind, and I preach the truth far differently now to what I did when I came here, and the truths themselves are somewhat different. They are less theoretical and arbitrary, and more real and practical. I feel this myself, and I can not but recognize that you have responded to every call in your broadened conceptions of the christian life, and when from time to time I have stated or re-stated our relations to the old doctrines handed down to us by our fathers, I have felt this distinction that they made, and I think we have grown in our understanding of the truth and a fuller appreciation of God's goodness to us. When the church took her stand in this community we, first of all, took our position against any entertainments that had an element of financial interest connected with them; it was a good thing for us to do, and God has given us grace to abide by that position. And I believe prosperity has come to us in a larger measure because of this spirit; and this spirit I believe to be absolutely right. We have always tried to live in the spirit of unselfishness. And in our infancy when the question of how the church was to be supported, we arranged an annual table of contributions to our church projects and the benevolent societies of our city, and it has been strictly adhered to. It has been in recognition of this eternal principle of "He that loseth his life for my sake shall find it," we have preached the gospel and God's blessing has rested upon us. Five years ago the church membership was but little more than half a hundred. During these years we have received into our membership 288, so that our membership to-day is 315. It seems almost incredible that a church in its infancy with such a small beginning should have gathered together such a large congregation of earnest worshippers. It seems almost incredible that we should have been able to raise nearly $30,000 for congregational purposes and $57,000 for benevolent purposes. This I have gathered from the annual tables. This is a record that we ought to be not only proud of but to be grateful for. Now, this is a new year and it ought to be the best year of our life. It began with many of us by looking after the things which are unseen and eternal, and having a regard to the great principle that underlies all general life and the feeling of individual responsibility. What a mighty change would be wrought if there should raise up men who would say "I can not be true to my God and my own soul without being true to my church and taking my share of the burden." We can make it the best year by having regard to this unseen and eternal principle, and the results will gradually unfold themselves before our own selves and others. We have thus entered the week of prayer; let us consecrate ourselves anew; it is the best way to begin the year anew by our giving ourselves anew to His service and leaving all things else in the hands of Him who alone can bless. Let us pray."

Plainfield Democratic Association.

The annual meeting of the above association was held in their rooms on Front street, Tuesday evening last. The following officers were re-elected to serve the ensuing year:—

President—James E. Martine.

Vice Presidents—John Simpson, Robert L. Livingston, James Clark, Nathan Harper.

Treasurer—James S. Vosseller.

Recording Secretary—Louis F. Wadsworth.

Corresponding Secretary—Louis M. Stover.

In accepting the re-nomination for President, which he has so ably filled for several years past, Mr. Martine addressed the assemblage at some length in good words of cheer and Democracy. The various Committees of the Association will be announced by the President at the next meeting in February.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

John J. Wahl was granted a license to keep a saloon at his present place of business on North avenue.

Mr. Godshalk of the Westfield Hotel, is having his billiard tables put in first-class order with new cloths and cushions.

Atlas Lodge, No. 124, of F. A. M., installed their newly elected officers on Monday evening, at their Lodge Room on Prospect street.

James L. Miller represents our town in the Grand Jury at the present term of court. Wm. C. Pierson and Joseph H. Clark are the petit jurors.

Mr. Cyrus P. Wilcox took five of his choice dogs from the Elm Kennel to New York on Wednesday evening last, to appear in a hunting scene at the Metropolitan Opera House. Mr. Wilcox has some very fine dogs at his kennel.

There was a public installation of Fireside Council, Royal Arcanum, at their hall on Monday evening last. Mr. Robt. R. Sinclair was installed as Regent. After the ceremony was over refreshments were partaken of by the Council and invited guests.

Mr. Charles A. Kimball, residing on Mountain avenue, was taken with a very severe attack of vertigo or apoplexy on Tuesday evening last at 8 p. m. He did not recover consciousness until 3 a. m., Wednesday morning. He is recovering slowly under the skillful care of Dr. Cooper.

Major E. T. Scott and wife are again among us after an extended lecturing tour in New York State. He is the guest of Judge Hodges, residing on South avenue. Mrs. Scott is to address the children of our town on Monday afternoon on temperance, at the hall on Broad street.

The representatives of the Westfield Fire Department held a meeting on Wednesday evening for the election of officers for the ensuing year. The following gentlemen were duly elected: Frank R. Pennington, President; A. Wilcox, Vice President; Frank Bronner, Treasurer; Ed. Hart, Collector; Isaac Seely, Secretary; Joseph B. Harrison, Trustee for 3 years; A. W. Burdick, Trustee for the unexpired term of A. Z. Chambers.

Early on Sunday morning last, Mrs. Sarah Williams, widow of William E. Williams, was missing from her home. It was feared she had committed suicide as she had threatened to do so several times during the past month. Search was made for her all the forenoon by her son, A. Williams, and several of the neighbors. During the afternoon Mr. Adams of Cranford brought her home. She had wandered to that village, and was caught by the track walker in an attempt to throw herself in front of a passing train.

SCOTCH PLAINS SCRATCHINGS.

Paff, the landlord of Hotel de Paff, has exchanged his old reliable horse, Dandy, for Dayton Baldwin's black mare, Electric Spark. Look out for her when you meet Tom on the McAdam.

Mr. Edward Finnesy, general assistant and baggage master at Fanwood depot, is confined to his bed with a lame back, caused by over exertion in lifting a large trunk on the car. The trunk was the property of Mr. Warren Ackerman.

Some miscreant either with malicious intent or carelessness, discharged a pistol, the ball taking effect in the thigh of a young girl, the daughter of a man in the employ of Mr. Brittin. The ball was extracted by Dr. Westcott. Every effort will be exercised to bring the rascal to account.

Unclaimed letters remaining in the Post Office, Scotch Plains, Jan. 1, 1886.

J. A. Whitney, G. Wahl, Mr. Wilson, Frank Wiley, W. L. Taylor, C. Redin, John H. Martin, M. F. Dobson, Ed. Mulleolaur, Mrs. C. Dooley, Mrs. Mary Carr, Mr. Ellison.

JAS. RITCHIE, Postmaster

Mr. Albert Harris, a retired gentleman, who is a resident of this place, had the misfortune to break his right arm, while alighting from his carriage; he made a misstep and fell. The injured limb was set by our village physician, Dr. Westcott. We are happy to state Mr. H. is doing as well as can be expected.

Great was the consternation of Edward Verity, when he came home from his daily labor to find the partner of his bosom flown, and the house stripped of its best furniture. He, immediately sought his best friend, Prince, to go and see how he had been "left." It being dark, Prince suggested lighting up to see what was left beside Ed. The light brought to view what they supposed was the missing spouse lying on the lounge, but upon examination proved to be an effigy of a woman, made up by stuffing an old shawl with rags and putting a bonnet on it. Then the air was blue for the space of ten minutes, with epithets not found in the revised edition of the Good Book.

NEW MARKET NOTES.

Mr. John Bergen has sold his house and lot in Academy street, for $400.

Invitations have been issued for a social at the residence of Mr. Z. Osmun for Wednesday evening next.

A pleasant party was held at the residence of Mr. Albert Drake last Thursday evening; about thirty persons being present.

The Union services for the Week of Prayer are being held in the Seventh Day Baptist church this year, and are well attended.

The heavy wind and rainstorm of Monday night, blew the boathouse belonging to the Vail property off its foundation into the water.

The Christmas entertainment of the Episcopal church was held in the Dunellen school hall, on New Year's Eve. It was largely attended, and the presents were something very fine.

The Isaac H. Dunn property (now occupied by Constable Pierce) has been rented to a party from New York for the coming year for $350. Mr. Pierce will move to a farm near Stelton, by the 1st of February.

The Mutual Life Assurance Company have sold the Westervelt property, consisting of forty-six acres, with barns and outhouses to Mr. Tabb, of Montreal, who intends to erect a dwelling upon the old foundation, which is to be completed by the 1st of April next.

A dangerous hole in the road exists at Todd's corner near Dunellen, and probably after some valuable animal breaks a leg, the road master will wake up to the fact that it requires attention, but a dollar laid out now might save the taxpayers a hundred more or less.

It is currently reported that Mr. H. V. Dunham contemplates the erection of a building on the lot at the foot of the New Brunswick road, adjoining the lake, to comprise a store for the occupancy of the Post Office, and a second story as a hall, adapted to public meetings and entertainments.

Surveyors have been busy the last few days making a new survey for the Baltimore & Ohio Railway, which if adopted will take the Rogers dwelling and barn, it being intended to strike the Queen City somewhere in the vicinity of Arlington avenue, which will be a boon to the residents of the Southern portion of Plainfield.

PYÆMIA

Is the most virulent form of blood-poisoning. Less speedily fatal, but not less certainly so, is the vitiation of the blood of which the first symptoms are Pimples, Sties, Boils, and Cutaneous Eruptions. When the taint of Scrofula gives warning of its presence by such indications, no time should be lost in using AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, the only perfect and reliable medicine for the purification of the blood.

SCROFULA

Is a foul corruption in the blood that rots out all the machinery of life. Nothing will eradicate it from the system and prevent its transmission to offspring but AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. This preparation is also the only one that will cleanse the blood of Mercurial poison and the taint of Contagious Diseases. Impoverished blood is productive of

ANÆMIA,

A wretched condition indicated by Pallid Skin, Flaccid Muscles, Shattered Nerves, and Melancholy. Its first symptoms are Weakness, Languor, Loss of Nerve Force, and Mental Dejection. Its course, unchecked, leads inevitably to insanity or death. Women frequently suffer from it. The only medicine that, while purifying the blood, enriches it with new vitality, and invigorates the whole system, is NOW call him City Clerk Merritt.

COUNCIL meeting next Monday evening.

DID you ever see such weather? Yes, lots of times.

THE State Legislature convenes at Trenton next Tuesday.

COUNCILMAN ROWLAND COX has a very attractive residence on Seventh street.

DR. E. TITSWORTH is now to be found at his new cottage, No. 109 Front street, East.

THE office of C. E. Johnson, builder, is now located on Second street, next to the City Hotel.

CITY CLERK MERRITT'S office will be with Wm. K. McClure, on North avenue, opposite the depot.

THE new proprietor of the City Hotel, Mr. John Staats, expects to open the house to the public about Jan. 15th.

THE regular monthly meeting of the Board of Managers of the Fire Department, is to be held next Tuesday evening.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Central Times justly complains of the inadequate street lights furnished. Oh! for electric lights.

STREET COMMISSIONER ANGLEMAN took advantage of the recent soft weather and thoroughly cleaned the principal thoroughfares of the city.

MR. GIDEON A. BARNES of Washington avenue, left on Monday for a Southern trip, intending to visit among other places, the old battle ground of Gettysburg.

THE collection at the Crescent avenue church "Hospital Sunday," amounted to $160. That of Grace church was $68 30, to which the Sunday School added $3 40.

THE actual amount paid for advertising by the Council of 1885, was $491 20. And yet you will hear some people say that the printers of Plainfield are getting rich.

WE are pleased to extend our congratulations to Mr. F. H. Burger, late of Plainfield, on his approaching marriage to a wealthy young lady of New York city.

THE finest piece of macadamized road bed in the city, is that on Seventh street, between Park avenue and Central avenue, put down by the Telford Pavement Company.

THE Casino rink which has been closed indefinitely, opens once more, next Monday evening, for the purpose of a calico carnival for the benefit of the late Floor Manager, Mr. Charles Frace.

THE 1.21 train to New York was delayed a few minutes at this station Monday afternoon, to give His Honor, the Mayor, time to pick up the overshoe he dropped as he ran along North avenue.

THE Council of 1886 so far in its organization, has made a "clean sweep." A Democratic chairman and a City Clerk. Now what will the Mayor do so far as his right to nominate is concerned?

ALTHOUGH it was the universal remark of the community that the warm weather of last week was "unusual and unseasonable," yet there was not a day that was not colder than the same day of the year before.

THE Messrs. Cook Bros. are furnishing coal and lumber as low in price as before their disastrous fire. This reliable firm can always be depended on to promptly fill all orders. Office at the old place on Park avenue.

AN elegant crazy-quilt, valued at $150, and now on exhibition at the millinery establishment of Mrs. L. Adams of East Front street, is to be sold by chances. The time and place of drawing will be announced later.

FINE weather and good workmen have had much to do with the rapid progress made in the construction of the new store building of Frank C. Green's. On Wednesday last the iron work for the front of the structure was placed in position by Mr. Newton Jenkins.

WE beg leave to correct the published statements regarding the past connection of Mr. Wm. H. Voorhees with the Common Council of this city: He was elected before in 1875 but served in the Council of '76. His record then was as enviable as his record for '86 will be satisfactory.

HANDSOME side-signs have been placed at the entrance of the driveway to Roberts' Livery Exchange on North avenue, which are a credit to the establishment and designer, J. Q. Miles. Mr. Roberts has one of the finest and commodious liveries in the State. Telephone call No. 10.

IT is a source of wonderment and regret among Democrats, why our Democratic Council should have rejected the nomination of Mr. Clacy for janitor of the Council Chamber, and elected instead a Republican to fill that position. Mr. Clacy is an honest, capable man and a Democrat. He ought to have had the position.

MR. PETER DURYEA has a model and beautiful place of residence on Seventh street. Adjoining is a neat and commodious stable building, which for elegance of appointments in the interior is not surpassed by any like building in the city. Among Mr. Duryea's large stock of horses is "Easy Billy," who has a record of 2 21¼

COUNCILMAN LUDLOW of the Borough of North Plainfield, has just purchased of Mr. John Dunning the latter's old established business as carriage and sign painter at No. 12 Somerset street. Mr. Dunning retires from a business that he has successfully carried on for the past 40 years; during the early part of which period not a brick building was to be seen in Plainfield.

THE price of admission to Mrs. Livermore's lecture, next Tuesday evening, for the benefit of the Children's Home, will be but 25 cents to any part of the house. The management of the affair appreciate the many calls that have already this season been made upon the generosity of the community, and so have placed the cost of hearing this great lecture for a great cause, within the economical reach of everybody.

WE wish to call the attention of our readers to the fact that Jas. E. White, of No. 6 East Front street, is offering the greatest of bargains in his line, prior to the removal of his establishment to the large and commodious store that the increasing demands of his patrons has compelled him to lease at No. 18 West Front street, now occupied by Mr. Frank C. Green. Read the list published in our advertising columns of this week.

MISTER. BOXY entered an unlicensed place in the Borough, New Year's day, and claiming to be a Marshal, attempted to interfere in a free exchange of blows and opinions that was transpiring. He was knocked silly without notice, and the aid of Marshal was weaker than sought. The latter, however, held that he was not authorized or empowered to enter a place that was not licensed and thus under the regulation and control of the corporation.

THE Executive Committee of the Reform Club has kindly given the ladies of the House the use of Reform Hall for next Tuesday evening, when Mrs. Mary A. Livermore will lecture on Wendell Phillips.

POPE BROS. are not depressed by the stagnation of business which usually follows the holidays. Their large stock of goods and low prices, advertised by them so that the public can be informed, attracts new customers to their establishment. The old customers seldom make a "change of base" after once dealing with them.

IN the retirement of Mr. O. B. Leonard as City Clerk, he should be accorded just praise for having proven a good and capable official. Thoroughly posted on city matters and always affable and courteous to those seeking information within his province to give, he has made many warm friends even among his political opponents during his official career.

LAST Saturday there was one of those so well to be remembered social gatherings at the residence of Mr. John W. Handren, Dunellen. The event was a dinner given in honor of Mr. George W. De Voe, of Old Bridge, Middlesex county, who was the foreman of the Grand Jury of that county of which Mr. H. was a member at its recent session. The occasion was a most enjoyable one. Among the invited guests present were Mr. and Mrs. C. Schepflin, of Dunellen.

FROM a recent number of the Capitol, published at Washington, D. C., we learn that our esteemed friend, Mr. Horace J. Drake, formerly connected with the Elizabeth Herald, and more recently holding a responsible position in the Government Printing Office, has been "caned," that is, presented with a handsome gold-headed walking stick, by the employees in his department. "Horry" has many friends in Washington, as well as "old Jersey" and we are pleased to chronicle this little episode in his life, knowing that the gift was deservedly bestowed and appreciated.

His Bond Forfeited.

The Hon. Alvah Clark was engaged on a case in the Union County Court, Wednesday, and, it is supposed, thought the matter of the indictment against Israel Coon of North Plainfield, for illegal liquor selling, would not be reached during that day in the Somerset County Court. Consequently, Mr. Coon was not present when his case was called and Judge Magie declared his bond (Mr. Isaac Brokaw) forfeited if no good and sufficient excuse could be given.

Doctors' Union.

Once every three months Plainfield's Doctors hold what is termed a "Doctors' Union," meeting at an appointed place during the evening, to enjoy themselves like other mortals, in feasting and social intercourse. Last Monday evening, the "Union" met at Force's Hotel, North avenue, where a substantial collation was served, and a delightful evening enjoyed among the members of the fraternity present, consisting of Drs. Endicott, (President) Fritts, Rushmore, Tomlinson, Boone, Hodges, Murray, Manning, Long and Burlingham.

Electric Lights.

Nearly all the newly elected Councilmen have visited the electric lights on exhibition in Grove street, North Plainfield. They will have the satisfaction of having seen what they may be called upon to vote for, in the form of a proposal to light the streets of Plainfield by the same system and method. We doubt if a citizen can be found who is not in favor of a light that is to burn all the dark hours of the night; and this is what the Plainfield Electric Light Co. propose to do if the city awards them a contract to light the streets by electricity.

One Duty of the New Council.

There are a number of duties that devolve upon the new Council regarding which it is not our business to instruct them, but one matter they may thank us for calling to their attention is this: The city will be saved much expense, the Assessor will be spared unnecessary labor, a more speedy, just and accurate distribution of the tax levy will be accomplished, and a greater percentage of the taxes collected if maps of the city correctly locating and designating the blocks by numbers and the owners thereof respectively, be ordered at once.

Quick Work by our Truckmen.

The members of Zephyr H. & L. Co. No. 1 went out for an exhibition drill, with their apparatus on New Year's Day. In the afternoon, at the tap of the fire alarm bell, which is now struck by electricity from the District Messenger Company's office, the truck was run to the Park House, where in an incredibly short space of time ladders were placed against the top of the building, and active firemen were running upward over the rungs. The quick time made by the Company from the house, and in getting ladders in position, was a subject of congratulation to them by all observers of the trial.

Drowned while Ice Skating.

The twelve-year old son of Mr. John Wilson, who works for Mr. John Wilson at the latter's stone quarry on the mountain back of North Plainfield, was skating on Mr. John Wilson's pond in Washington Valley near the Notch, New Year's Day, and was drowned by the breaking of the ice from under him. After ineffectual attempts to crawl out by himself, the poor lad became so numbed by the freezing waters that he sank out of sight to rise no more. Mr. Henry Bodenheimer gallantly entered the chilly waters, and finally found the body, bringing it ashore to the arms of its distracted mother.

Cheap Enough.

The first case tried in the Circuit Court at Elizabeth, Wednesday, was that of Charles De La Montanye against Sophia E. Mullen, both of this city. The suit was brought to recover damages for trespass. Montanye purchased the stock and fixtures of a cigar store on North avenue, renting the premises of an agent of Mrs. Mullen. In January of last year the agent told him he had been offered an advance on the rent, but subsequently ordered him out, saying the building was to be torn down. Montanye refused to go and his goods were set on the sidewalk by the agents of the defendant. The case was finished in the afternoon when the plaintiff was awarded damages to the amount of $250.

North Plainfield Ahead.

The exhibition of electric lights on Grove street, North Plainfield, has been so satisfactory that the residents of Washington Park are arranging to have 17 lamps which will be paid for by private subscription. There is every hope that the amount required will be subscribed for. The lights will be located as follows: Grove street, corner Prospect place; Grove street, corner Emily street; Grove street, corner Park place; Grove street, corner Rockview avenue; Washington avenue, cor. Prospect place; Washington avenue, cor. Mercer avenue; Washington avenue, corner Park place; Washington avenue, cor. Rockview ave.; Rockview avenue, cor. Sycamore avenue; Rockview avenue, opp. M. I. Cooley's; Rockview avenue, cor. Mercer avenue; Rockview avenue, cor. Orchard avenue; Willow avenue, corner Sycamore ave.; Willow ave., at intersection Myrtle ave.; Willow avenue, corner Crescent avenue; Crescent avenue, corner Myrtle avenue; Mercer avenue, corner Sycamore avenue. Somerset and Duer streets also expect to have lights.

Change of Base.

Mr. P. M. Demarest, the well-known and popular grocer of Front street, has leased of Mr. Frank C. Green, the middle store in Mr. Moore's new building, corner of Park avenue and Second street, to which he will remove as soon as the building is completed. Mr. Green will occupy the corner store and two upper floors as extensive furniture and upholster warerooms. Negotiations are pending for the third store.

The Crescent's Programme.

Monday mornings and afternoons are lawn tennis hours at The Crescent, and also during Friday evenings. This week's attendances have been large in spite of the customary reaction after the holidays have given all a fill of amusements and drained the pockets of many. The attractions for to-morrow are an "orange race" in the afternoon for the boys, and during the evening the postponed foot-ball match between Montclair and Plainfield is again promised.

Too Much New Years.

A resident of this city, recently removed from Brooklyn, was carried past the Plainfield station, last Friday evening, and getting off at Grant ave., started to walk back. Coming along the tramp path at the side of the track, he stepped off the first bridge abutment into the street below, and besides breaking some ribs, severely bruised other parts of his body. He crawled back to the Grant avenue station on his hands and knees, from whence he was taken to his home. Internal injuries are feared.

Interfering With Advancement.

The linemen of the Baltimore and Ohio Telegraph Company have recently experienced some difficulty in stretching their wires from the outskirts of our city to their objective point—the office of the District Messenger Company on Front street. Last Monday morning the wires stretching from the 4th street Public School corner to Park avenue, were cut by a property owner over whose grounds the wires ran. The Company, however, will obviate the difficulty, and in a short time our citizens may look for this cheap service to be in active operation.

A Deserved Benefit.

The Casino rink which has been closed for the past few days, will be opened for general skating during Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday evenings hereafter with the full band of music. Monday evening, the 11th, a calico carnival will be given for the benefit of the faithful and affable floor-manager, Mr. Charles E. Frace. Prizes for the best costumes of different kinds will be presented to those whom the judges shall decide are worthy of the honors. Mr. Frace has a host of friends that will be glad of this opportunity of testifying their good will towards him.

429 Did It.

As the 8.40 train for New York stood in the station, Tuesday evening, and the big express truck lay across the opposite track loaded with trunks and bundles and packages of all kinds, No. 429, a "coaler," came rushing by without a whistle of warning, scattered the people out of its way and tossed the truck load in every direction. It is the usual and required duty of the engineer of 429 to stop below the station until the passenger train has left; but Tuesday evening he was either asleep or full, and waited for nothing. Upon the arrival of his train at Dunellen, a box that the engine had picked from the truck was found on its pilot.

The Calico Carnival.

Mrs. Waters of this city, Miss Decker of Westfield and Messrs. Putnam and La Vere, were the winners of the generous prizes given by The Crescent upon the occasion of last Tuesday's Calico Carnival that entertained about 500 people at that resort. Dozens of handsomely dressed ladies, and scores of originally and amusingly costumed gentlemen, covered the skating surface, while the large audience of spectators present thoroughly enjoyed the novel scene. The march was formed just before the birth of the new year, and as '85 faded into '86, the band played Auld Lang Syne. The judges of award were Messrs. Charles Thiers, F. Brockway and A. L. Force, and their decisions were just and satisfactory.

Improvements to Come.

Various rumors have been circulated since the disastrous fire which destroyed Cook Bros. lumber yard, as to what the ultimate result would be in rebuilding the burned district, credence being given to a report that handsome store buildings would be erected on the Park avenue side of the former coal and lumber yard. In conversation with a member of the firm, a reporter of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST was recently informed that this desired improvement will not take place at present. It is the intention of the firm to soon commence active operations in roofing over the coal and lumber yard, build trestle works, etc., but they will not at present erect buildings on the Park ave. front. They will, however, reserve a depth of 70 feet for future improvement, such as that rumored.

New Market's New Postmaster.

For twenty-five years past, New Market's Postmaster's name has been Abner Coriell, and a very creditable Postmaster he has made, considering that he is a Republican. But time makes changes, and so does a Democratic Administration—in Postmasters. Therefore, under a recent decision of the Post Master General, Mr. Charles Ward of the thriving town of New Market has received a New Year's present—the Postmastership of New Market—and "Uncle Abner" will have to take a back seat—until the millenium comes, which in our mind means a change of administration. His successor is a young and ardent Democrat, and will, no doubt, attend to and perform the duties incidental to his new position, with credit alike to himself and the administration. While condoling with our esteemed friend Abner upon the change of base, we congratulate our young friend "Charlie" upon his appointment.

Bradford Recital.

Monday evening has in store a rare treat for the citizens of Plainfield. Mr. Bradford has been engaged by Perseverance Lodge, of this city, to give one of his illustrated recitals, on the different phases of life and nature in the far North. The mountains, Esquimaux settlements, fiords, icebergs and ice phenomena of Baffin's and Melville Bays. The recital has been given in various large cities throughout the country with immense success. The recital is illustrated on a canvas, twenty feet square, by the aid of a powerful light from photographic views taken on the spot. The photographs of Mr. Bradford's recital, are illustrative of expeditions which involved an expenditure of over one million five hundred thousand dollars. Mr. Bradford himself fitted out expeditions at a cost of over seventy-five thousand dollars. During the progress of and incidental to each recital, Eskimo and Old Norse songs and hymns will be sung in the native tongue by Miss Ruby Sinclair, who has been specially engaged and instructed for the purpose. This is the first time the music of Eskimos has been heard in this country, and it is an extremely interesting feature of these entertainments. The selections cover a wide range (of title at least) as will be seen from the following partial list: Kukoreaunguak, Okpisigpak [illegible], Aut [illegible], Ina [illegible], Kingorna [illegible].

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

SATURDAY EVENING, Jan. 2, 1886.

The Council of '85 met pursuant to adjournment.

Present—President Coriell and Messrs. Beguelin, Dumont, Dunham, Goddard, Marsh and Wadsworth—7.

Absent—Messrs. Cutter, Gallup, Livingston and Simpson—4.

Mr. Charles Giese presented his bond with the claim that he had been elected a constable at the late municipal election. Referred.

The following bills were read, referred to the proper committees, and after subsequent approval by the auditing committee, warrants were ordered drawn in payment, with the exception of a claim for transportation to insane asylum.

John Johnson, $796 86; F. A. Dunham, $10.92; John Johnson, $218 63; F. A. Dunham, $2.24; W. L. Force & Bro., $35 50; J. A. Hubbard, $7.50; A. M. Griffen, $33.78; J. Van Winkle, $29.93; Plainfield Gas Light Co., $224 07; G. W. Moore, $10; David Hand, $328.56; Relief Association, $68.75; Chas. Thorp, $30; J. O. Nodyne, $25; Mary A. Cooper, $12; Lucy Connett, $12; Kate Conway, $3; Mary Morae, $6; Mary Conway, $3; John Moynahan, $3.

The annual report of the Treasurer was presented and ordered printed in the official papers in compliance with the law.

The Collector's report for the past month was read and filed; as was also that of the Street Commissioner for the year as follows:

To the Honorable the Common Council of the City of Plainfield:

GENTLEMEN:—During the past six months a great deal of heavy work has been put upon the streets of this city, at an expenditure of about $2,000 for labor alone, most of which will not have to be repeated for several years. This was the case with the permanent improvements of the preceding half of the year, when some $3,800 were spent for work of a similar nature on other streets. Though the total amount for the whole twelve months is large, compared to the meagre outlay of former years, it is none too much for the increased travel and growing demands of the place. Since my last semi-annual report at your regular meeting in July, Seventh street has been macadamized from Park avenue to Central avenue, a distance of about 1,200 feet, thus completing a permanent stone driveway of 6,000 feet on that beautiful thoroughfare from Broadway on the northeast to Grant avenue on the southwest. The roadbed of East Front street has been leveled and spread with cracked stone from Netherwood avenue to Richmond street, being only 250 feet short of a mile. This, with similar work performed on the same street west of Central avenue the fore part of the year, and macadamizing done at a previous date, makes a continuous stone surface on Front street of 9,300 feet, terminating at Plainfield avenue. The improvement should be extended to Evona, if not to the extreme southwestern city limits as soon as possible. In the Spring and Fall, travel over this end of the oldest street in the place is very much impeded by the muddy condition of the roadbed, which can be remedied only by using cracked stone instead of gravel. A long needed improvement has also been completed in the thorough macadamizing of old Cherry street, which was paved with wood sixteen years ago. With this connecting block, one can drive entirely across the widest part of Plainfield, about two miles, on a good, solid stone avenue. The work of continuing the more thorough surface drainage of our graveled streets has been pushed forward with considerable success before cold weather, so that most of the gutters are now in good graded condition. Nearly all the old culverts at street crossings have been cleaned out and many that were buried out of sight, and filled up with debris and forgotten for several years, have been resurrected and reopened; besides, several new ones have been put down, thus improving the general drainage. The money expended for this work under the direction of your Street Committee during the six months ending this week, has amounted to $2,023 65, which may be divided as follows: First Ward—$525; being mostly for expense of spreading stone on East Front street from Richmond street to Farragut road, $300; grading Richmond street to railroad, and North avenue at intersection, $75, and one-half the labor bill of re-paving old Cherry street, $150. Second Ward—which includes our Netherwood taxpayers, has received attention in repairs to Terrell road $75; Belvidere avenue and Broadway, $300; Putnam avenue, $25; Richmond street east of railroad, $50, making a total of $450. Third Ward has been of very little expense the past half year. Only $125 have been spent here, mostly on Seventh street macadamizing at the intersections of the cross streets. The Fourth Ward has demanded and received more general repairs to its streets than any other section. Seven hundred dollars have been laid out in labor as follows: $250 on Plainfield avenue, from Second street to Seventh street, a distance of 1,800 feet, never before graded, to carry off surface water; $100 on Fourth street, south of New street; $75 on Third street, below Liberty street; $25 on short Second street; $25 on Fifth street; $75 on Grant avenue, near the railroad, and $150 for the half expense of labor macadamizing old Cherry street, (or Park avenue) division line between this and First Ward. On general work $225 have been expended in different parts of the City, not localized, such as cleaning out gutters, scraping roadbeds and taking up and relaying crosswalks. This statement does not include any claims for cracked stone, clearing out receiving basins, street implements or surveys, but simply the labor bills of workmen employed by me.

Respectfully submitted,
GEORGE M. ANGLEMAN.

The Committee on Rooms reported an arrangement with the Fire Board for the renting of the Council rooms. The committee was discharged.

Mr. Wadsworth made a report of progress in the matter of the claims between the city and the Martine estate. Laid over for the attention of the new Council.

Also the following report of the receipt and disposition of the finances of the year 1885:

To the Common Council of the City of Plainfield:

Your Finance Committee respectfully submit the following report:—It is very gratifying to your Committee in this their annual statement to be able to report the finances of the city to be in a most satisfactory condition and that your management of affairs during the past year has resulted in a condition for your successors much better than was left to you.

The expenses of the city chargeable to the General Fund have been $26,341.21. When the increased amount of money spent this year on improving the streets over that of last, is considered, the other expenses of the city show only a small increase. The difference in amounts of warrants left over from last year and those left over for your successors is too small for consideration and amounts in the General Fund to about $3,000, in both cases. The State and county tax of $37,493.72 was promptly paid. Nothing from the Poor Fund was advanced to make the payment and only $5,164.88 from the General Fund as against $7,918.14 from both accounts last year. The same tax last year was only $500 larger, and the payments to the county have left increased balances in both accounts for your successors.

Your Committee have found the vouchers of the City Treasurer and City Collector correct.

In the matter of collection of taxes we find there have been $8,500 more taxes collected this year than last, only $4,000 of which is due to the increased levy of 1885. The amount of 1885 taxes collected this year is 77 per cent, exactly the same as that of 1884, and in comparison with 74 per cent for 1883. From this regularity, it should be very safe to calculate in the future that at least 75 per cent of current year's tax will be paid in, before the year ends.

You will notice since property has been sold for taxes that the delinquent amounts for the different years, with 1879 excepted, are coming quite near each other and that 1881, 1882 and 1883 are almost the same. The conclusion from this must be that about 5 per cent of the tax levy is very hard to collect.

We would earnestly recommend the procuring of assessment maps for the proper assessment of property and for facilitating in the collection of taxes. In the opinion of your Committee these maps are an absolute necessity.

Respectfully submitted,
CHAS. D. WADSWORTH, Chairman.

Mr. Goddard from the Com. on Fire, etc., stated that the opinion of the expert that had examined the No. 2 steamer was to the effect that it was worth $1,200, and that $800 would fix it up as good as ever.

Mr. Marsh, from the Laws Com., reported that the Council had no power to enforce an ordinance restricting the distribution of circulars to a certain distance from the school buildings; and also referred back the petition of the District Messenger Company without action or report.

The following in relation to the matter it treats of, was presented and ordered filed.

Your committee in whose hands were placed the matters known as the Clark and Coward claims, would report, that being satisfied that Mr. Coward should be called upon to answer and was liable for, the two items amounting in all to a little over $2,200 on their face, for which both Mr. Clark and Mr. Coward claimed credit for payment to the county collector, though the amount was only paid once and Mr. Clark held the official voucher therefor, while Mr. Coward claims to have paid the money, they directed the corporation counsel to bring suit against Mr. Coward for said amount, which was accordingly done. To that suit Mr. Coward pleaded a general denial and payment, and also that more than six years had elapsed since the claim of the city against him arose and that therefore he could not be called upon to account at this day. He also pleaded that there was a full settlement made with the city some three years ago when he paid a balance of about $700 which his own showing made due the city. To all these pleas, a denial was put in by the city, except as to the lapse of time. As to that the city could not deny, and if Mr. Coward saw fit to interpose that, we were powerless to go any further in a court of law. The committee had hoped that Mr. Coward would not take that course, but would allow a full investigation, for his sake as well as the city's. Having taken that course, he prevents any further action of the city on that line.

Also the claim of above $1,100 admittedly due from Mr. Clark, he claims an offset on account of certain commissions. Leaving out of the case the disputed matter between Mr. Clark and Mr. Coward, above referred to, we presume that in a fair allowance of commissions to offset the amount of about $1,100 Mr. Clark admits to be due, the balance coming to the city would not be large. Whenever Mr. Clark offers to pay the city the difference between the amount he admits to be due and the amount that may be found justly due him for commissions, we think that branch of the case can be adjusted to the satisfaction of all; but until then the matter will have to stand in statu quo.

Your committee therefore beg to be discharged from any further action in the matter.

F. E. MARSH,
J. B. DUMONT,
C. M. GODDARD,
Jan. 2, 1886. L. & O. Com.

Regarding the action of the city against the Telephone Co. for an alleged violation of contract in removing certain 'phones from Fire Department houses, the Committee reported that it was impossible to find out just what the contract with the city was. Resolutions previously presented forbidding the Telephone Co. to string any more wires until the removed instruments were returned, were passed.

Mr. Giese's petition to be recognized as a constable was referred to the new Council, as was also the bond of Constable Moffett. The bond of Mr. G. P. Smith was returned for correction.

The petitions for certain and many cross-walks that had been in the Committee's hands for some time, were reported on by Mr. Dumont, recommending some and referring others to the mercy of the next Council.

The ordinance directing the purchase of No. 2 steamer, was taken from the table but subsequently put down again without action, and left thus for the consideration of the incoming members.

The bond of the Collector was reported as correct and ordered filed and recorded as required.

An interchange of courtesies was indulged in, and resolutions of praise of the President and City Clerk were adopted. The Council of '85 was then adjourned sine die.

MONDAY EVENING, Jan. 4, 1886.

The Council of '86 met in the Council chamber and pursuant to the provisions of the City Charter was called to order by the Clerk of the former Council, (Mr. O. B. Leonard).

Present—Messrs. Beguelin, Bowers, Cox, Cuthbert, Dumont, Dunham, Gallup, Goddard, Marsh, Simpson and Voorhees.

Absent—none.

Mr. Marsh moved to proceed to the election of a President and the same be by ballot. Carried.

Nominations being in order Mr. Gallup presented the name of Tell A. Beguelin and Mr. Dumont that of Mr. F. E. Marsh.

The Clerk appointed Messrs. Gallup and Goddard as tellers. The following is the result of the ballot:

Tell A. Beguelin	6
Frank E. Marsh	4
Blank	1

Mr. Beguelin was declared elected as President of the Council of '86 by the City Clerk. Upon taking the chair President-elect Beguelin said:

GENTLEMEN OF THE COUNCIL:—I heartily thank you for choosing me to preside over the deliberations of this Council and shall endeavor to judge all questions coming before me in a fair and impartial manner. The Council of 1885 has left a handsome balance in the treasury of over $6,000 and the fairest city in New Jersey in our control. Gentlemen, I again thank you.

After which Mr. Dumont moved that the Council proceed to the election of a City Clerk. Carried.

Mr. Cox nominated Richard F. Merritt; Mr. Voorhees, L. F. Wadsworth and Mr. Dumont, O. B. Leonard.

President Beguelin appointed Messrs. Dumont and Gallup as tellers.

Three ballots were taken as follows:

Oliver B. Leonard	5
Louis F. Wadsworth	5
Richard F. Merritt	1

Louis F. Wadsworth	5
Richard F. Merritt	4
Oliver B. Leonard	2

Richard F. Merritt	6
Louis F. Wadsworth	3
Oliver B. Leonard	2

President Beguelin thereupon declared Richard F. Merritt duly elected as Clerk of the Council of 1886, and authorized Oliver B. Leonard to act as Clerk for the remainder of this meeting.

Upon motion for proceeding to the election of a janitor, Mr. Goddard nominated the present officer, W. V. Mundy, and Mr. Voorhees nominated Thomas Clacy.

President Beguelin appointed Messrs. Cox and Cuthbert as tellers. Mr. Mundy was elected as the following vote shows:

W. V. Mundy	7
Thomas Clacy	4

Mr. Marsh moved that the rules of last Council be adopted as the rules of the present Council. Carried.

Mr. Goddard presented the following petition and suggested that it be referred to a special committee with power as the city would probably be afforded special franking privileges thereby:

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Jan. 4, 1886.

TO THE COMMON COUNCIL:—The Plainfield District and Fire Alarm Company respectfully petition your honorable body for the right to erect one telegraph pole on the station house property.

H. B. INGHAM, Gen'l. Manager.

Petition received and President Beguelin appointed Messrs. Goddard, Cox and Voorhees a committee with power to deal with the company.

Bill of W. V. Mundy, $18.50, for last quarter's services as janitor of last year read and laid on table.

Upon motion of Mr. Gallup Council adjourned to meet next Monday evening.

THE following will show the political status of the new Common Council:

Democrats.	Republicans.
Tell A. Beguelin,	J. B. Dumont,
B. O. Bowers,	C. M. Goddard,
Rowland Cox,	F. E. Marsh,
Arthur T. Gallup,	John H. Cuthbert*
John Simpson,	Marvin M. Dunham*
Wm. H. Voorhees*

The War Begun.

The outgoing Council passed a resolution to the effect that the Telephone Co., should string no more wires in this city until the 'phones that had been removed from the houses of Zephyr H. & L. Co., and Alert Hose Co., had been returned to their places. In pursuance of the provisions of such act, Officer Lynch, Wednesday, arrested some of the Company's men while engaged in stretching wires across Front street at the corner of Park avenue. They were taken before Judge Ulrich who warned them that they would suffer for any violation of the city's law, and then discharged them. The men at once proceeded with and finished their work.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

EARLY TRADITIONS.

The stories which circulate through our cities, or in a thickly inhabited neighborhood even in the country, or find their way into newspaper columns, have always in these days, be they ever so strange and startling, a touch of the realistic and prosaic about them.

If a ghost makes his or her appearance it is sure to be arrayed in a coat or dress of the most modern cut, and sitting in a railway carriage or hansom cab; if a young lady clop as she does it in the coolest, most matter-of-fact manner possible, and never forgets to pack up even her tooth brush; the very horrors in the penny dreadfuls have something that savors of the commonplace in their sensationalism, and generally have for their scene of action a scullery full of dirty dishes, and enlivened by the melodious dripping of a pump, or a market garden peopled with cabbages and gooseberry bushes.

The case is, however, very different in the region round about Exmoor, whither we want to conduct our readers.

There fairies still linger among the flowers and ferns in the deep lanes; there no respectable ghost would think of showing his nose except arrayed in a winding sheet; there lovers still keep moonlit trysts, and escape the vigilance of too busy parents and maiden aunts by stolen rambles through shadowy woodland paths, where there are none save the birds and the squirrels to peep and watch.

Here romance has not yet died out beneath the rule of the convenient or the useful.

Here fancy and poetry have not, as yet quite fled from the land, before the scream of the steam whistle.

In a narrow valley among the hills round about Exmoor there stands a quaintly built old house, some hundred years ago the home of the most ancient and respectable yeoman families of the district, which ghosts are well known by every one within ten miles of it to frequent in the most orthodox manner possible.

They rustle up and down the passages in robes of such stiff brocade and whalebone that it is utterly useless for anyone to try and repose in their beds between midnight and dawn; they tramp about the attics in high heeled shoes and refuse to depart, though there is a bookcase hard by filled with the most racy French novels and the rarest blossoms of German scepticism.

They dance in the large kitchen till the stone floor rings again and the whole house is filled with weird, mysterious harmony that seems to come from a fiddle, playing, no one knows where, the merriest strains, yet strains that, with all their airy mirth, were never played by any barrel organ of to-day.

Not far from the British Channel there stands a handsome old church which has a singular legend connected with its erection.

It is said that long ago an ancient hostelry stood where the church now stands, and that one night a funeral party who were conveying the body of a lady for burial in a family vault, she having died far from home, came here to rest on their journey.

On their dead lady's hand there was a ring of great value, which had been given her by her husband in the days when they were lovers, and which she desired might not be removed from her finger even after death.

This fact was known to her husband's confidential servant, who had been intrusted with the whole of the funeral arrangements—his master not intending to meet the sad procession until it got to the place of interment.

The man's dishonest greed was excited by the thought of the diamonds in the ring; he stole to the chamber where the body had been deposited, and opened the coffin with some tools he brought with him, hoping at once to get possession of the coveted treasure; but the ring could not be got off the cold, stiff finger, so he used a knife to try to remove it.

What was his terror when blood began to flow from the supposed dead hand, and the lady sat up and gazed around her.

No record tells what was the ultimate fate of the would-be robber and unintentional preserver, but legendary lore says the lady, as a token of thanksgiving for her restoration to her husband and children, built the church on the site of the old hostelry.

LORD BROUGHAM AND DANIEL WEBSTER.

When Daniel Webster, the celebrated statesman and lawyer, visited England after he had attained fame enough to precede him, an English gentleman took him one day to see Lord Brougham. That eminent Briton received Daniel with such coolness that he was glad to get away and back to his rooms.

The friend who had taken him at once returned in haste and anger to Lord Brougham.

"My lord, how could you behave with such unseemly rudeness and discourtesy to so great a lawyer and statesman? It was insulting to him, and has filled me with mortification."

"Why, what on earth have I done, and whom have I been rude to?"

"To Daniel Webster, of the Senate of the United States."

"Great Jupiter, what a blunder! I thought it was that fellow Webster who made a dictionary and nearly ruined the English language."

And then the great Chancellor quickly hunted up the American Senator, and, having other tastes in common besides law and politics, they made a royal night of it.

NEW JERSEY PENSIONERS.

The House Committee on Pensions has received from Pension Commissioner Black a statement showing the number of pension claims filed since 1861, and the number of pensions granted during that period. The State of New Jersey stands well up on the list with its quota of maimed veterans and widows and orphans of its dead heroes. The statement shows that applications were filed by the following number of soldiers and soldier wards in New Jersey, from 1861 to the close of the last fiscal year: Invalids, 10,196; widows, 3,246; minor children, 1,101; mothers, 1,201; fathers, 238; total number of applications, 15,982. Number of pensions granted: Invalids, 6,006; widows, 2,264; minor children, 904; mothers, 803; fathers, 72. Total number of pensions granted, 10,059. The statement also shows that New Jersey furnished 76,814 men to the United States armies from April 15, 1861, to the close of the war. The total number of applications received from all parts of the United States during the above period was 922,878, of which 490,798 were granted.

NEW JERSEY'S WATERS.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—The Chief of Engineers, in the estimates for the improvement of rivers and harbors, asks for New Jersey this year the following appropriations: Channel between Staten Island and New Jersey, $90,000; Keyport Harbor, $35,000; Raritan Bay, $10,000; Cheesequake Creek, $5,000; Mattawan Creek, $9,000; Manasquan River, $25,000; Maurice River, $35,000; Passaic River, $130,000; Raccoon River, $16,000; Rancocas River, $22,000; Raritan River, $100,000; Shrewsbury River, $50,000; South River, $25,000; Woodbridge Creek, $10,000; Woodbury Creek, $10,500; examination of changes and re-surveys of the Jersey coast, $2,000

OYSTERMEN FIND A BELL.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 28.—One of Fritz Bachheimer's oyster schooners was dredging near Holland Island bar in the Chesapeake bay. When the last "scoop" was hauled up they found that the load was unusually heavy. After much exertion the dredgers succeeded in landing what appeared to be an immense mass of mud and sea weed. Investigation and a vigorous use of spade and scraper revealed a well preserved bell, save for a crack, much the same as that in the old Independence bell. The bell in question weighs about 75 pounds, and the following inscription is plainly discerned: "Fabius, Philadelphia, 1796." The bell was brought to Baltimore and is an object of much interest and curiosity.

A WOMAN NEVER FORGETS.

A woman never forgets her lovers. Ever and anon she recalls them as in a sweet, sad dream, and she counts them as the nun counts her beads in her devotions. But a man forgets. He don't care much. A woman at sixty is always serious and sensible, and if left a widow she lives true to her memories, and comforts herself with her children and grandchildren. But a widower of three score years is the biggest fool upon earth. There ought to be a reformatory prison for boys under sixteen and widowers over sixty. An old widower will put crape on his hat and dye on his beard, and start out on a matrimonial skirmish in two or three months after the funeral. So says an exchange, of feminine partiality.

WOMAN.

Women always show by their actions that they enjoy going to church; men are less demonstrative.

Women jump at conclusions and generally hit; men reason things out logically and generally miss it.

When a woman becomes flurried she feels for a fan; when a man becomes flurried he feels for a cigar.

Some women can't pass a millinery store without looking in; some men can't pass a saloon without going in.

A woman never sees a baby without wanting to run to it; a man never sees a baby without wanting to run from it.

Women love admiration, approbation, self-immolation on the part of others; are often weak, vain and frivolous. Ditto men.

A woman always carries her purse in her hand so that other women will see it; a man carries his in his inside pocket so that his wife won't see it.

FORTIFY OUR GREAT SEAPORTS.

The undefended condition of our coast and great seaports, to which Mr. Tilden's letter has called such universal and deeply patriotic attention, is prejudicial to the country even in mere matters of negotiation with foreign powers.

Our lack of necessary defences is perfectly well known to the other great Governments of the world. The naval authorities of Great Britain doubtless understand that her fleet could probably lay New York in ashes in a fortnight, and it is by no means certain that Germany might not be able to do us almost as much damage with her comparatively small but well-equipped navy. While such a state of things exists it seems preposterous to talk about the Monroe doctrine, or enforcing any other policy against the will of European nations having powerful interests in opposition to our own. We are unprepared, because of our insecurity, to compel compliance with our demands, and everybody knows it.

So when we discuss matters of difference with foreign powers it is impossible that they should lose sight of this fact. Knowing how vulnerable we are, they assume a more positive and peremptory tone than they would otherwise venture to adopt; they concede less; they demand more; and the result is that we are apt to fare worse than would be the case if the world knew we need fear no attack.

Congress should lose no time in putting the country in that condition. Fortify our great seaports!

SOME LONG WORDS.

A correspondent of the St. Louis Republican asked for the longest word in the English language. There have been a large number of answers, some of them quite amusing. Here is a list of words, with the number of letters in each:

	Letters.
Philoprogenitiveness	20
Incomprehensibleness	20
Disproportionableness	21
Subconstitutionalist	21
Honorificibilitudinity	22
Velocipedestrianistical	23
Transubstantionableness	23
Proantitransubstantiationist	28

Only the first three words are to be found in the last edition of Webster's dictionary, and disproportionableness is undoubtedly the longest word in that volume. The correspondent who originated honorificibilitudinity defines it as honorableness, but it certainly has not honorableness enough to entitle it to a nest in the unabridged. Velocipedestrianistical likewise lacks age and respectability, but it may find its way into Webster in time; it certainly has good locomotive powers. Subconstitutionalist is doubtful, but we do not believe even a mandamus would get it into the dictionary. Transubstantionableness might get there if Webster wasn't looking. The man who invented proantitransubstantiationist says it is a good English word, "derived from a short and simple Latin root, and means one who dissents from the doctrine or dogma of the so-called Real Presence." That may all be, but he ought to be condemned to pronounce the word twice a day as long as he lives, if he tries to introduce it into the speech of honest men.

But speaking of long words, what is the matter with Llanfairpwllgwyngyllgerychwyrndrobwllgerchwyrnsyllgogerbwllantisiliogogogoch, the name of a village in Wales?—Rochester Post-Express.

CHRISTMAS -:- PRESENTS !

As the Holidays are approaching we are all thinking about Presents for our friends, and as the times are hard we want to give something useful as well as pleasing.

Now what is more useful, or that Husband, Son, Father or Brother will be better pleased with, than a nice

Suit of Clothes or an Overcoat !

With our Boy's Clothing we give a Toy Gun, worth at least $1 at retail, making two Presents for the Boys at the cost of one.

—PRICES REDUCED AS FOLLOWS :—

Boy's Suits, $1.50 to $10.	Men's Suits $8 to $20.
" Overcoats, $1.50 to 8.	" Overcoats, 6 to 20.

And if these are not nice enough for some to give as Presents, then step up in the CUSTOM DEPARTMENT where we have everything that is Nobby, New and Stylish, at remarkably Low Prices.

CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND & PACIFIC RAILWAY

By reason of its central position and close relation to all principal lines East and West, at initial and terminal points, constitutes the most important mid-continental link in that system of through transportation which invites and facilitates travel and traffic between cities of the Atlantic and Pacific Coasts. It is also the favorite and best route to and from points East, Northeast and Southeast, and corresponding points West, Northwest and Southwest.

The Rock Island system includes in its main line and branches, Chicago, Joliet, Ottawa, La Salle, Peoria, Geneseo, Moline and Rock Island, in Illinois; Davenport, Muscatine, Washington, Fairfield, Ottumwa, Oskaloosa, West Liberty, Iowa City, Des Moines, Indianola, Winterset, Atlantic, Knoxville, Audubon, Harlan, Guthrie Centre and Council Bluffs, in Iowa; Gallatin, Trenton, Cameron and Kansas City, in Missouri; Leavenworth and Atchison, in Kansas; Albert Lea, Minneapolis and St. Paul, in Minnesota; Watertown in Dakota, and hundreds of intermediate cities, towns, villages and stations.

THE GREAT ROCK ISLAND ROUTE

Guarantees its patrons that sense of personal security afforded by a solid, thoroughly ballasted road-bed; smooth tracks of continuous steel rail; substantially built culverts and bridges; rolling stock as near perfection as human skill can make it; the safety appliances of patent buffers, platforms and air-brakes; and that exacting discipline which governs the practical operation of all its trains. Other specialties of this route are Transfers at all connecting points in Union Depots, and the unsurpassed comforts and luxuries of its Passenger Equipment.

The Fast Express Trains between Chicago and the Missouri River are composed of well ventilated, finely upholstered Day Coaches, Magnificent Pullman Palace Sleepers of the latest design, and sumptuous Dining Cars, in which elaborately cooked meals are leisurely eaten. "good Digestion waiting on Appetite, and Health on both." Between Chicago and Kansas City and Atchison, are also run the Celebrated Reclining Chair Cars.

THE FAMOUS ALBERT LEA ROUTE

Is the direct and favorite line between Chicago and Minneapolis and St. Paul, where connections are made in Union Depots for all points in the Territories and British Provinces. Over this route, Fast Express Trains are run to the watering places, summer resorts, picturesque localities, and hunting and fishing grounds of Iowa and Minnesota. It is also the most desirable route to the rich wheat fields and pastoral lands of interior Dakota.

Still another DIRECT LINE, via Seneca and Kankakee, has been opened between Newport News, Richmond, Cincinnati, Indianapolis and Lafayette, and Council Bluffs, Kansas City, Minneapolis and St. Paul and intermediate points.

For detailed information see Maps and Folders, obtainable, as well as Tickets, at all principal Ticket Offices in the United States and Canada; or by addressing

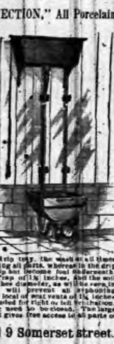
The "PERFECTION," All Porcelain.



WE TAKE pleasure in calling attention of our customers and all interested in sanitary matters to the all porcelain "Perfection," the only square top Hopper, with trap, made.—For perfect cleanliness and simplicity of construction we invite comparison with any Closet ever manufactured, either home or foreign. It combines, with the utmost simplicity, all the points of a strictly first-class water-closet. The square top will make itself apparent to all users, in doing away with drip tray, the wash at all times thoroughly scouring all parts, whereas in the drip tray it cannot help but become foul underneath. It has a seal in Trap of 1½ inches, and the soil pipe vent of 2 inches diameter, as will be seen in the above cut, will prevent all syphoning of Trap. BILIOUSNESS.

Bilious symptoms invariably arise from indigestion, such as furred tongue, vomiting of bile, giddiness, sick headache, irregular bowels. The liver secretes the bile and acts like a filter or sieve, to cleanse impurities of the blood. By irregularity in its action or suspensions of its functions, the bile is liable to overflow into the blood, causing jaundice, sallow complexion, yellow eyes, bilious diarrhœa, a languid, weary feeling and many other distressing symptoms. Biliousness may be properly termed an affection of the liver, and can be thoroughly cured by the grand regulator of the liver and biliary organs, BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS. It acts upon the stomach, bowels and liver, making healthy bile and pure blood, and opens the culverts and sluiceways for the outlet of disease. Sold everywhere and guaranteed to cure.

An Efficient Remedy

In all cases of Bronchial and Pulmonary Affections is AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. As such it is recognized and prescribed by the medical profession, and in many thousands of families, for the past forty years, it has been regarded as an invaluable household remedy. It is a preparation that only requires to be taken in very small quantities, and a few doses of it administered in the early stages of a cold or cough will effect a speedy cure, and may, very possibly, save life. There is no doubt whatever that

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

Has preserved the lives of great numbers of persons, by arresting the development of Laryngitis, Bronchitis, Pneumonia, and Pulmonary Consumption, and by the cure of those dangerous maladies. It should be kept ready for use in every family where there are children, as it is a medicine far superior to all others in the treatment of Croup, the alleviation of Whooping Cough, and the cure of Colds and Influenza, ailments peculiarly incidental to childhood and youth. Promptitude in dealing with all diseases of this class is of the utmost importance. The loss of a single day may, in many cases, entail fatal consequences. Do not waste precious time in experimenting with medicines of doubtful efficacy, while the malady is constantly gaining a deeper hold, but take at once the speediest and most certain to cure,

JEALOUSY IN THE CHOIR.

Silvery-noted,
Lily throated,
Starry-eyed and golden hair
Charming Annie,
The soprano,
All the singers' hearts ensnared.

Long the tenor
Sought to win her,
Sought to win her for a bri'e;
And the basso
Loved the lass so
Day and night for her he sighed.

The demeanor
Of the tenor
To the basso frigid grew;
And the basso,
As he was so
Smitten, of course, grew frightened too.

Anna smiled on Both, which piled on
To their mutual hatred fuel;
So to win her,
Base and tenor
Swore they'd fight a vocal-duel.

Shrieked the tenor
Like a Vennor
Cyclone howling o'er the plain,
Sang so high
To outvie
The bass, he split his head in twain.

Growled the basso
Till he was so
Low, to hear him was a treat;
Lower still he Went unto he
Slit the soles of both his feet.

Charming Annie,
The Soprano,
Mourned a week for both her fellows;
Then she wed the Man who fed the
Wind into the organ bellows.

MISCELLANEOUS READING

A RIGHTEOUS RETRIBUTION.

"Miriam Green, I am astonished !" said Aunt Jane.

"Oh, but Aunt Jane, I couldn't help it!" said Miriam, laughing.

But, at the same time, colored very red, and hung down her pretty head.

There was no denying this offence. It was patent to all the world—or, at least, to all that part of it who might happen to be on the edge of Raven Woods.

There was Miriam Green up in the top of the old oak tree, which reared its proud crest, an Absolom among its gold-leaved brethren, her curls all tangled, her apron filled with treasures of dark-green mistletoe.

There was Aunt Jane, standing in the little open clearing, with hands uplifted, eyes open in the wildest of disapproving glasses, and sunbonnet fallen over backward on her shoulders.

"Your frock's all torn!" exclaimed the old lady.

"I can easily mend it again."

"And your hair blown into a tangle."

"Oh, Aunt Jane, that is nothing!" pleaded Miriam.

"And your bonnet hanging half way down the tree!" gasped Aunt Jane, growing more indignant as the full weight and extent of Miriam's enormities dawned upon her mind. "When you knew I forbade you to think of such a thing as climbing a tree!"

"Dear Aunt Jane——" began the offender.

But the old lady would listen to no argument.

"You were sixteen, yesterday," she said. "You are old enough to know better. And you shall be made to know better! I will punish you for this piece of inexcusable hoydenism!"

Miriam's blue eyes grew big.

Surely Aunt Jane couldn't shake her, or shut her up in the garret with a page of "Watts' Hymns" to learn, or—worst alternative of all—put her on a short allowance of apple-pie at dinner.

For pretty Miriam was still child enough to regard any of these occurrences as a serious misfortune, and one greatly to be deprecated.

But while she was yet in the agonies of apprehension, the question was definitely determined by Aunt Jane's advancing to the foot of the oak tree and pulling away the ladder that had served as a means to reach the first bough, a ragged means of foliage some twenty feet up from the roots. Below that, the trunk extended down as perpendicular and free of side growth as a telegraph pole.

"There!" said Aunt Jane, "since you were so anxious to climb the tree after mistletoe, you may remain there and think it over at your leisure. I will come back this evening and put back the ladder."

Miriam uttered a little cry.

"Please, Aunt Jane, don't go off!" she appealed, "I'll never do so any more. Please forgive me, just this once!"

But Aunt Jane was inexorable. With slow majesty, she strode out of the opening and was gone, even while Miriam's piteous voice quivered on the air.

"Oh, dear! oh, dear! what am I to do?" said Miriam to herself, "I couldn't jump down without breaking my arm, or ankle, or something; and here I am all alone in this wilderness."

There she sat perched on a horizontal bough, clinging to the taper trunk of the tree, and swayed to and fro in the gentle October breezes. It had been a most fascinating position a few minutes ago; now it was frightful and perilous in the extremest degree.

Was it an hour, was it ten, or possibly only fifteen minutes? Like the Prisoner of Chillon, our poor little captive had lost all power of calculating time. But just as the round sun hung like a ball of orange flame above the western woods, there was the sound of quick footsteps crashing over fallen twigs and crisp autumn leaves below.

"It's John Ford coming home from hunting," Miriam said to herself, with a quick breath. "Oh, I do hope he won't see me!"

She shrunk close to the trunk of the tree, and tried to seem as much like a big bunch of mistletoe as possible. But it was useless. John Ford's keen eyes were too well used to woodcraft and all pertaining to it to overlook her. He stopped short at the entrance to the glade.

"Miriam Green!" he exclaimed.

"Yes," said the girl, laughing a little hysterically.

"Zaccheus he—"

"And I am Zaccheus, and now I can't get down."

"Oh!" said Mr. Ford. "The ladder fell, did it?"

"Y-yes," said Miriam, turning very red. "The ladder fell down."

"I'll put it up for you," said Mr. Ford.

"Do!" said Miriam, laughing to herself, as she thought of Aunt Jane.

He swung the ladder promptly up against the trunk of the tree.

"Now, it's all right," said he. "I'll just go over to see that the dogs haven't frightened Mrs. Morey's young turkeys, and wait for you outside the woods."

In five minutes Miriam Green was by his side, rosy and breathless, still clinging to her apronful of mistletoe.

"Oh, I am so much obliged to you!" said she earnestly.

"It was rather an awkward predicament, wasn't it?" smiled he.

"What will Aunt Jane say?" said Miriam, involuntarily.

"She'll be very much alarmed, won't she?"

"No," confessed Miriam. "She—that is—Oh, Mr. Ford, I can't deceive you about it!"

And she told him all.

"Of course, it was very wrong to disobey her," she added, "but—"

"My poor little Miriam! My sweet frightened darling!" cried John Ford, passing his strong arm around her waist. "She was a perfect dragoness to torment you so!"

"But I belong to her," said the girl, innocently. "I have no other home but her house."

"Then belong to me, henceforward," he said, tenderly, looking down into her blue, limpid eyes. "Surely, you cannot have failed to discover how deeply I love you? Hereafter you are mine!"

Miriam Green, young as she was, had often dreamed of the pathway in which love should come to her, but it had never seemed like this?

"But," she stammered, "what will your uncle say?"

"What should he say?" calmly retorted her lover. "Ford Court is mine. My uncle is my only beloved and honored guest. Besides, he loves me so genuinely that my happiness cannot but be his. And—but what is this?"

They had by this time reached the solid stone wall which divided the grounds of Ford Court from the woods, and there, perched up on its height—a feminine Stylites—was Aunt Jane, with a basket in her hand, half full of barberries which she had gathered from the huge bushes that made a scarlet-dotted screen inside, while stretched prone on the grass at the foot of the hill lay old Major Ford's monster bloodhound, Gelert. He looked around and wagged his tail slowly at sight of John, but did not stir otherwise.

"Aunt Jane," said Miriam, "what are you doing on top of the wall, there?"

"I—I only want a few barberries to put in my cucumber pickles," stammered Aunt Jane, ready to burst into tears. "And—and I didn't suppose there was any harm in gathering them here. I've picked pecks and pecks of barberries off them very bushes and nobody said a word. And I was just reaching up for the finest, when up comes a cross old savage and asks me what I mean by stealing fruit, and leaves me here with this horrid, snarling brute to watch me—just as if I was a tramp—while he goes for a constable! I was never so treated in my life! And, the more I try to jump off, the more the dog shows its teeth at me, and growls. He'd tear me in pieces if I stirred a foot in any direction, I do believe!"

"My Uncle Ford," whispered John to Miriam. "He is a positive monomaniac on the subject of fruit thieves! The park bristles with man-traps, and there is a dog chained under every apple tree on the premises. But it's too bad that he should have taken your Aunt for one of the village purloiners! Gelert, come here this instant, sir! I assure you Miss" (to Aunt Jane, who, owing to her fatigue, was on the verge of fainting,) "my uncle will be the most grieved of any one, when he learns what a misapprehension he has been laboring under. Allow me to help you down. Take care—don't spill the barberries!"

"Dear Aunt Jane!" soothed Miriam, receiving the old lady in her arms, "how frightened you must have been!"

"Oh, Miriam, forgive me!" sobbed the old lady behind her sunbonnet. "I—I didn't know how dreadful it was, or I never, never would have pulled the ladder down and left you there! It's righteous retribution on me, that's what it is!"

"Oh, Aunty, don't fret about it!" said Miriam, radiantly. "It's all right. Mr. Ford came along and put up the ladder again, and—and I'm engaged to be married to him! Don't look so surprised, Aunt Jane! I know I've told it in a jerky sort of way, but it all happened as naturally as possible. Didn't it John?"

And then congratulations and explanations, and finally the humble apologies of Major Ford, a testy, old gentleman of sixty odd years, who just then arrived on the scene, accompanied by the village constable.

"I'm sure I beg a million pardons!" said Major Ford. "But how was I to know? I'm a stranger in these parts, you know, and half the fruit trees were stripped last night."

And Aunt Jane received his acknowledgment in frigid silence.

"A lady is a lady," she said to her niece, afterward, "even if she has climbed on a stone wall to gather barberries! And no one but a semi-barbarian could mistake her for anybody else!"

And Miriam Green was too happy in her own new born felicity to argue the question with her aunt.

It is told of Josh Billings that once tramping with a yellow dog as his companion, he fell in with some Yale boys in a Connecticut village hotel. They took him for a farmer from wayback and set out to have some fun with him. On their inquiring with affected interest after the health of his wife and children, Josh, with counterfeited simplicity, gave an account of his family and farm. "Of course you belong to the church?" asked one of the boys. "Yes; the Lord be praised, an' my father and grandfather before me." "Now I suppose you would not tell a lie?" said one of the students. "Not for the world." "What will you take for that dog?" pointing to Josh's cur, crouching beneath his chair. "I won't take $20 for that dog." "Twenty dollars! Why he's not worth 20 cents." "I assure you I would not take $20 for him." "Come, my friend," said the student, who, with his companions, was bent upon having some fun with the old man. "Now, you say you won't tell a lie for the world. Let me see if you will do it for $20. I'll give you $20 for your dog." "I'll not take it." "You will not? Here! Let me see if this will not tempt you to lie," added the student, producing a small bag of half dollars, which he built up in small piles on the table. Josh was sitting by the table, with his hat in his hand apparently unconcerned. "There," added the student, "are $20, all in silver; I will give you that for the animal." Josh quietly raised his hat to the edge of the table, and, as quick as thought, scraped all the money into it except one half dollar, and then exclaimed: "I won't take your $20! Nineteen and a half is as much as that dog is worth! He is your property!"

* * *

"Lige" Temple, a hunter of Wayne county, Pa., killed and sent to market last year two hundred partridges, which netted him ninety cents a pair. He expects this winter to kill one hundred foxes, and from the bounty on them and the sale of their skins, realize a sufficient sum to carry him through the winter.

HOW HE WAS PAID.

"Two dollars a visit!" cried Dot in dismay, forgetting entirely that she had come to look for a spool of No. 40 in mamma's drawer, and opening her brown eyes wider and wider as she read the heading of an old bill of Dr. Cogswell.

"Two dollars a visit!" she repeated.

"Oh, why doesn't Donnie get well? And where is all the money to come from?" she asked herself sadly. "We will get very poor," continued Dot, shaking her little brown head slowly over the bill. After thinking awhile, she slipped the paper in her pocket and went down stairs.

Mamma and sister Margie were sewing. Dot went quietly to Mrs. Leyhard and whispered:

"We'll feel very poor afterward, won't we, mamma?"

Mamma smiled, a sad smile, Dot thought, as she replied:

"You're better at guessing than we supposed. Now, why don't you take your trimming, little daughter, and go into the library? There's a nice fire on the hearth and you can work away like a bee. We'll need it soon, you know," added mamma, for Dot was rather inclined to dream when she was alone.

"We'll need it soon," repeated Dot, as she climbed up in the big library chair.

"We'll need it soon. Oh, why didn't they tell me! Why did they leave me to find it out for myself? I might have worked yards and yards by this time, and sold them for ever so much, but I supposed it was just to give me something to do, and I've sometimes not done more than one scallop in a whole afternoon," confessed Dot, as she made her little ivory needle fly in and out of her work, as if anyone could ever make up for lost time.

"And to think that I never once thought that mamma and sister Margie were making those things to sell, nor how much 'twas costing to have the doctor coming every day, and sometimes twice a day. Poor Donnie. Perhaps he's worse than they tell me. Perhaps," and there was a great lump in her throat, "he's going to die and they're leaving me to find that out." Two great tears rolled slowly down the pretty, round cheeks. "But why, then, do they keep a-tellin' me he's better?" Two tears had dropped on the crochet trimming and two more were following in their train.

Tom went into the barn to clean his gun where Dot saw him.

"I'll ask him," she decided, as she put her work hurriedly in a little silk handkerchief, and started with it for the barn. "He won't tease me when he knows how badly I feel."

It was a very sad little face that peered in at the barn door.

"Hallo!" was Tom's greeting. "Been crying?"

"Yes," admitted Dot, in a voice that could leave no doubt of it in anyone's mind.

"What's up?" continued Tom, as he rubbed away at his gun. "Want any help?"

"Oh, yes, Tom; that's just what I came for. Won't you talk real sober with me?"

"Nary a smile from me," said Tom. Then, glancing sidelong at the little face in the doorway, he added, "Come in and state your case. Here's a seat on the hay pile," as he lifted her gently upon a fresh lot he had just brought down for the purpose of feeding the horses. "There, are you cold?"

"Not a bit," said Dot, smiling thankfully. "I have brought my cloak."

"All right, then; go ahead," said Tom cheerfully.

"Well, you know, Tom," began Dot, in her sweet, timid voice, "there's a secret in there," pointing toward the house, "and I never found it out till this morning."

"So you found it out, did you? Well, I told 'em you would."

"I wouldn't but for the bill."

"You wouldn't what?" asked Tom, who was rubbing away again.

"I'll tell you about that afterward. When I went into the sitting-room, mamma and Margie were sewing."

"That certainly didn't suprise you?" laughed Tom.

"O, Tom! how can you make fun of it all? Mamma looked just ready to cry, and—oh, oh, oh, what can we ever do about it!" as she threw her face downward on the hay, and sobbed as though her little heart would break, while Tom stood by in speechless astonishment, wondering why the words "Two dollars a visit," seemed mingled with her sobs.

"Does she know, after all?" he asked himself. "I mustn't forget my promise to mother, but I must give the child some comfort," he thought, as he went over to the little blue cloak on the hay.

"Come Dot," said he, tenderly. "Don't cry. You haven't told me yet what the matter is. Now we'll sit right up here while you tell Tom all about it."

After a while Dot managed to say:

"Doesn't Dr. Cogswell charge people who are ill two dollars every time he goes to see them?"

"Something like that, I believe," answered Tom, wonderingly.

"It's exactly that," said Dot, feeling for the bill. "O, Tom, we must owe him a hundred dollars!"

There was a queer look in Tom's eyes.

"I suppose we do," he said.

"But have we got the money to pay him?" questioned Dot, the brown eyes swimming again.

"No, I don't believe we have."

"Then, what are we going to do?" asked Dot, with another sob.

"There Dot," said Tom, soothingly. "Don't be so foolish as to cry. It's all coming out right. I can't tell you just how, but take my word for it."

"Tom," called Mrs. Leyhard, "they're all waiting for you."

"The boys have come, Dot," said Tom, giving her a hasty kiss. "Now, remember not to worry. It's coming out all right."

"Tom always thinks everything's going to come out all right," she said, determined to be miserable. He doesn't know anything about money. Margie says so, and I know myself he doesn't, 'cause I once owed him five cents for weeks, and when I went to pay him he'd forgotten all about it, and said I must have dreamed it. He's gone off to sleigh ride and doesn't care how hard we're all workin' anyway," and the little needle flew faster than ever. "I just know how he thinks Dr. Cogswell isn't going to charge, but he is, for here's one bill and he's probably got another one ready now."

"He could just as well not charge," she went on, "for Edith Olcott told me he was ever'n and ever so rich, and that he's got a house in the city even prettier than this. But how could one be?" she wondered. "How could any room be prettier than the one Mrs. Crane took Edith and me into the other day? the little one with the window looking over the lake, and the little bed with curtains and everything blue, carpet and all. Dr. Cogswell calls it his little sister's room, and she's coming in the spring."

The little fingers never did work better than that day, for "mamma wouldn't tell me they needed it if they didn't," Dot kept assuring herself. "Tom just wanted to comfort me. He doesn't know how hard they're workin' and cryin'."

That night Dot added to her prayer the words, "Oh, God, please don't let it be more than we can pay."

"Let what?" asked mamma, as she tucked her in bed.

"The doctor's bill," whispered little Dot, her arms very tight around Mrs. Leyhard's neck.

Mrs. Leyhard smiled. She thought Dot was half asleep, so she tiptoed quietly down stairs to the library, and there found Tom telling Margie about Dot's trouble.

The young doctor must have been there too, or heard of it in some way, for he happened in the next morning right after breakfast, and the first thing he remarked was:

"I'm going to have my bill settled to-day, little Miss Dot," as with quite a grave face he took out his memoranda.

"Let me see," he mused, "I began coming in May. Two visits a day, till—why, it's nearly Christmas, isn't it? Now, how much should you think it would come to?"

"Hundreds!" said poor little Dot, in a faint whisper.

"We want to be business like," said Dr. Cogswell, "suppose you get your slate and figure it."

Dot ran. "He isn't going to let us off one penny," she moaned.

"Now, let's do a little sum in arithmetic," said the doctor. "What does M. stand for?"

"One thousand," said staggered little Dot, pushing the crochet-work way down in her pocket.

"Very good," said the Doctor. "Now what does C. stand for?"

"One hundred," said Dot, trying to be brave.

"Add together."

"Eleven hundred," said Dot, tearfully.

"H'm," coughed Dr. Coggswell. "Now can you think of anything else they might stand for?"

"No, sir," said Dot.

"Why, yes you can, Dot!" said Donald, who had just been wheeled into the room. "M. C.!" clapping his hands, "Why, Merry Christmas, don't you see?"

Dot smiled.

"Then there isn't a bill?" she inquired of Tom.

"Nary a bill," said Tom; "but can't you think of anything else the letters might stand for?"

"I can," cried Dot, catching sight of glances being exchanged, and Margie's pretty cheeks aglow. "Why, yes; Margie Cogswell!"

Then they all laughed, and the doctor caught up Dot and set her on his shoulder and pranced with her into the cosy sitting room. Pretty soon Don was wheeled into the sunny bay window and there they all sat the rest of the morning.

Dot had to submit to a great deal of teasing, but she was very happy, notwithstanding, and wrote in her diary that very night, in such big letters that she went right over two or three of the following days.

"The doctor wasn't coming to see Donnie, after all, and there wasn't any bill. I am going to be bridesmaid and wear white. There isn't any little sister but me, and I am going to have the little blue room whenever I want to go there to visit."

RAPID WRITING.

A rapid penman can write thirty-two words in a minute. To do this he must draw his pen through the space of a rod, sixteen and one half feet. In forty-eight minutes his pen travels a furlong. We make, on an average, sixteen curves or turns of the pen in writing each word. Writing thirteen words in a minute, we must make 480 turns in each minute; in an hour, 28,800; in a day of only five hours, 144,000; in a year of 300 such days, 43,200,000. The man, therefore, who made 1,000,000 strokes with his pen was not at all remarkable. Many men—newspaper writers, for instance—make 4,000,000. Here we have in the aggregate a mark 300 miles long to be traced on paper by such a writer in a year.

JANUARY TERM OF COURT.

The list of calendar cases for trial at the present term of Union County Courts is as follows:

SUPREME COURT.

Butler and Constant vs. Buddenstein. In case.

The National bank of Rahway vs. Rachael A. Brewster. In case.

WHAT TO DO.

There are some public questions which should be taken out and kept out of the arena of political controversy.

The Tariff is one of them.

It is time that the senseless and ceaseless agitation about the tariff was removed from Congress, by having the whole matter settled permanently upon the basis of business facts, justice, common sense, and for the general public good.

The thing can be done, not by scheming cross-road politicians, theoretical college professors, nor selfish money grabbers, but by men intelligent enough to discern the practical truth and sufficiently honest to make it the means of promoting the welfare of the people at large.

There are plenty of such men in the United States.

Let Congress authorize, as it clearly has the power, the appointment of an outside Commission, to be composed of Merchants, Agriculturists, Manufacturers, Miners, Mechanics and Artisans, and empowered to thoroughly investigate and report what, in their judgment, should be a simplified scale of duties on foreign importations, and what articles should come in free, in order to provide adequate revenue for Government, and at the same time protect the interests of American labor, of all kinds, by increasing the opportunities of profitable and permanent employment.

Then let the President, in selecting such Commissioners, look only for men practically familiar with the different departments of productive industry, men who will discharge the trust committed to them as a sacred duty, and with the sole aim of advancing, in a sure and lasting manner, public and private prosperity.

Such action, we think, would solve the problem.

It is folly to make either political party a unit on the tariff question. Local self interests antagonize each other all over the country. There are Republican as well as Democratic free traders, high protectionists and revenue reformers. The only safe course is to take the subject out of politics and submit it to an impartial, practical and honest tribunal.

The greatest good of the greatest number, justly and honestly ascertained, remains to be sound political doctrine.

Under that flag we sail.

DEMOCRATIC CAUCUSES.

The Democratic Assemblymen of this State met in the Assembly Chamber at Trenton on Tuesday morning to nominate officers to be proposed at the organization of the House in the afternoon. Hon. Mr. Besson, of Hudson, was made chairman of the meeting and Hon. Mr. Vetterlein, of Somerset, acted as secretary. The following officers were agreed on: Speaker, Chester Wolverton, of Hunterdon; Clerk, Henry D. Winton, of Bergen; Recording Clerk, James Connelly, of Hudson; Engrossing Clerk, Dr. Bond, of Warren; Sergeant-at-Arms, Mr. Frost, of Morris; Assistant-Sergeant-at-Arms, H. Cornish, of Hudson; Journal Clerk, Mervin Armstrong, of Hudson; Doorkeepers, Geo. Robinson, of Essex, and Alexander Coats, of Atlantic.

At the Democratic Senatorial caucus, Senator Chase, of Middlesex, presided, and Senator Livingston, of Union, was secretary. The following were the caucus nominations: President, George O. Vanderbilt, of Mercer; Secretary, John H. Laird, of Monmouth; Assistant Secretary, John S. Antrim, of Burlington; Journal Clerk, W. H. Carson, of Hudson; Engrossing Clerk, Wm. Swartswelder, of Warren; Sergeant-at-Arms, Con Donovan, of Hudson; Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms, Orlando Perrine, of Middlesex; Doorkeepers, Chas. Lyon, of Mercer, Charles Sinclair, of Hudson, Fred Batrell, of Middlesex.

The contract for the current printing of the Legislature has been awarded to John L. Murphy, of Trenton.

Franklin B. Gowen has been elected President of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad. Now, we will bet a big apple that the Baltimore & Ohio finds an outlet over the old Jersey Central.

Mayor Rockfellow's Annual Message is a lengthy document, but contains practical and sound recommendations for the future management of our municipality. It will be found in another column.

The Second Annual Message of Gov. Abbett, is a sound and readable document, containing much valuable information and suggestions. We give the document to our readers in a supplement form.

The receivers of the Reading railroad have decided to retain $10,000 a day of the earnings of the Central in order to pay the $270,000 overdue taxes, in case the court shall order them paid. As the Reading has been claiming that the Central was not earning anything beyond what was put on the road, it is difficult to imagine what the $10,000 a day is to be saved from.

The temperature fell to 15 deg. at Fernandina, Fla., Sunday, to 20 deg. at St. Augustine, and is reported to have fallen to 16 deg. as far south as Tampa, on the Gulf coast. The damage done is less than would be expected from such a freeze. All oranges remaining on the trees are frozen, and the lemon trees in Northern Florida are probably killed to the surface of the ground, but beyond losing their leaves it is not believed that the orange trees are injured even in the northern part of the State. The cold weather in December prevented the sap from rising, consequently the damage is less than it would otherwise have been.

The Appropriations Committee has been called together by Mr. Randall and arranged to meet on Wednesdays. Sub-committees have been formed as follows:

On the Sundry Civil Appropriation bill—Messrs. Randall, Forney, Burnes, Ryan and Long.

On the Legislative, Executive and Judicial bill—Messrs. Holman, Townshend, Cabell, Cannon and Butterworth.

On the Deficiency bill—Messrs. Burnes, Adams, LeFevre, McComas and Cannon.

On the District of Columbia bill—Messrs. Wilson, LeFevre, Adams, Henderson and McComas.

On the Fortification bill—Messrs. Forney, Randall, Holman, Butterworth and Ryan.

On the Pension bill—Messrs. Townshend, Cabell, Wilson, Long and Henderson.

NOMINATIONS CONFIRMED.

The Senate at Washington, in Executive Session Tuesday last, confirmed the following nominations:

Postmasters—Harriet F. Cadmus, So. Amboy; W. K. Vansciver, Beverly; Jacob C. VanRiper, Rutherford; Chas. Rittenhouse, Hackettstown; John Fothergill, Perth Amboy; Augustus W. Irons, Toms River; Thomas Bunnell, Newton; Geo. W. Evans, Ocean Grove; Fred B. Bardon, Madison; Wm. H. Bennett, Long Branch.

The above-named offices are all in New Jersey.

Organization of the Legislature.

The Legislature of the State of New Jersey was organized at Trenton on Tuesday last. The Senate was called to order at 3 P. M., by Secretary Stiles. On a call of the Senate, the following Senators answered: Brinkerhoff, Chattle, Cranmer, Fish, Gardner, Herring, Livingston, Miller, Moon, Nichols, Pancoast, Thompson, Vanderbilt and Youngblood.

Senator Cranmer moved that Senator Brinkerhoff act as President pro tem. There being no other nominations, Senator Brinkerhoff was declared duly elected.

Senator Vanderbilt presented the credentials of John W. Bogert, of Bergen, for the unexpired term of Senator Miller, deceased. Senator Fish presented the credentials of George H. Large, of Hunterdon. Senator Moon presented the credentials of John A. McBride, of Sussex. Senator Livingston presented the credentials of Daniel C. Chase, of Middlesex. Senator Herring presented the credentials of William H. Carter, of Burlington. Senator Gardner presented the credentials of John W. Griggs, of Passaic. Senator Nichols presented the credentials of Joseph H. Hanes, of Cape May.

The several members being each sworn in, the President ordered a call of the Senate. There being a quorum, he next declared that nominations for President were in order.

Senator Cranmer nominated Senator Griggs, of Passaic. Senator Livingston nominated Senator Vanderbilt, of Mercer. The vote being 12 for Griggs and 8 for Vanderbilt, Senator Griggs was declared elected President. The following was the vote: For Griggs—Carter, Cranmer, Fish, Gardner, Hanes, Herring, Large, Nichols, Pancoast, Thompson, Vanderbilt and Youngblood—12. For Vanderbilt—Bogert, Brinkerhoff, Chase, Chattle, Griggs, Livingston, McBride, Moon—8.

The President appointed Senators Vanderbilt and Fish a committee to conduct the President elect to the Chair.

Prayer was next offered by the Rev. Mr. Conkling. The Senate next proceeded to the election of a Secretary. Senator Cranmer nominated Richard M. Reading, of Hunterdon, Senator Livingston nominating John H. Laird, of Monmouth. Mr. Reading was elected by a vote of 12 to 8. An Assistant Secretary was next balloted for. Senator Cranmer nominated W. D. Honeyman, of Somerset, Senator Livingston nominated J. F. Antrim, of Burlington. Mr. Honeyman was elected by the ballot as announced above. For Engrossing Clerk, Secretary Cranmer nominated John H. McMurray, of Camden, Senator Livingston nominating Martin C Swartzweller, of Warren. Mr. McMurray was duly elected. For Sergeant-at-Arms, J. W. Simmons, of Cumberland was nominated by Senator Cranmer, and C. J. Donovan, of Hudson, by Senator Livingston. Mr. Simmons was duly elected. For Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms, Senator Cranmer nominated Enos G. Budd, of Morris, and Senator Livingston, Orlando Perrine, of Middlesex. Mr. Budd was duly elected. Frank Huber was next nominated and elected Bill Clerk without any opposition. For doorkeepers, Senator Cranmer nominated Calvin B. Bittus, of Salem; Benj. F. Lee, of Camden; Louis Wiel, of Essex, and Walter Atkinson, of Burlington. Senator Livingston nominated Charles Lyons, of Mercer; Charles Sinclair, of Hudson, and Frederick Batrell, of Middlesex. Senator Cranmer's nominees were duly elected.

After regular routine business and the introduction of thirteen bills of minor importance the Senate adjourned to Monday, January 18th.

The House of Assembly was called to order at 3 o'clock by Mr. Toombs, Clerk of the former House.

Prayer was offered by Rev. Alfred Youmans, D. D., of Orange.

The Clerk called the roll, when all the members elect answered to their names.

Mr. Gangewer offered a resolution that Hon. John C. Besson, of Hudson county, administer the oath of office to Hon. Alfred B. Dayton, of Hudson, by whom the members-elect shall be sworn in. Adopted.

Mr. Gangewer also offered a resolution, which was adopted, that the reading of the certificates of membership be dispensed with.

The list of members by counties was then called in alphabetical order, when they took the oath of office.

A petition was presented from James J. Clark against Terence J. McDonald, taking the seat from the Seventh District of Hudson county.

Mr. Gangewer offered a resolution, which was adopted that Hon. Richard Wayne Parker, of Essex, administer the oath of office to the Speaker when elected, and, also, to the other officers.

Mr. Corbin nominated for Speaker Hon. E. A. Armstrong, of Camden, and Mr. Besson nominated Hon. Chester Wolverton, of Hunterdon. Mr. Armstrong was elected by a vote of 31 to 29 for Mr. Wolverton.

On motion of Mr. Wolverton, the election of Mr. Armstrong was made unanimous. Messrs. Wolverton, A. F. R. Martin and Willis then conducted the Speaker to the Clerk's desk, when he was sworn in by Mr. Parker. The Speaker thanked the Assembly for the honor and compliment of an unanimous vote, and alluded to the important duties of the office, which he would endeavor to discharge to the best interests of the State.

The following officers were then elected by a strict party vote, Mr. Gangewer having placed them in nomination:

Clerk—Samuel Toombs, of Essex.

Assistant Clerk—J. Herbert Potts, of Hudson.

Engrossing Clerk—Enos W. Runyon, of Union.

Assistant Engrossing Clerk—W. A. Bennett, of Ocean.

Sergeant-at-Arms—George W. Colfax, of Passaic.

Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms—John Ginder, of Mercer.

Doorkeepers—J. F. Burton, of Burlington, and William Becker, Jr., of Morris.

Document Clerk—George R. Johnson, of Essex.

Mr. Besson, on behalf of the minority, presented the following list of nominations:

Clerk—Henry D. Winton, of Bergen.

Assistant Clerk—James E. Connolly, of Hudson.

Engrossing Clerk—Robert E. Bond, of Warren.

Sergeant-at-Arms—Jas. M. Frost, of Morris.

Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms—P. H. Cornish, of Essex.

Doorkeepers—Alexander Coats, of Atlantic, and Simeon Hancock, of Burlington.

The Speaker informed the House that he had appointed Ernest O. Chamberlain, of Union, his Private Secretary, and that the Clerk had appointed John J. Stanton, of Sussex, Journal Clerk.

Fifteen bills of minor importance were introduced.

Second Annual Message of the Mayor.

To the Honorable Common Council of the City of Plainfield:—Municipal powers and duties appertaining to the executive, and those devolving upon the legislative branch of City government, are, under our system, so interwoven and the respective functions of each are now so dimly defined as to make it of paramount importance that [illegible]

The crudities of the legislation under which Plainfield has been compelled to struggle since the easy remedy of special legislative aid, so long relied upon, was cut off by constitutional amendment, have been the source of great embarrassment to the City government and have rendered the work of its officers doubly onerous.

Much has been accomplished in recent years through general legislation, and a more thorough utilization of charter powers. Some of the most serious obstacles have been thus surmounted, but the work remaining in this direction is of sufficient magnitude to call for the best energies of those entrusted with official power.

FINANCE AND TAXATION.

Attention was called in my inaugural message to the lamentably insecure financial basis upon which rested the City government. The plan there suggested has been successfully consummated. Recommended by the City executive, formulated and endorsed by the Common Council, enacted by the State law-making power, the law was finally approved by the people. The principle therein adopted of limiting the power of taxation to a maximum percentage of assessed valuation is the only wise principle of limitation adapted to a growing City. But the adoption of the principle makes more emphatic the necessity for just assessments of property real and personal. The basis of assessment of Plainfield property is believed to be that practically adopted in other cities of this State. Self-protection would seem to require that the City should continue to conform to this basis. With any reform in this matter, which lies at the foundation of assessable valuation and which affects the whole state, the State Legislature alone is competent to deal; but it lies within the power of your honorable body to see to it that all of our citizens are equitably assessed; that is to say, on the same basis, and in like proportion. I am persuaded there have been many errors in past years in making up the assessment roll. Many are due to evasive or false answers of parties assessed—many more to the magnitude of the task assigned to one man of assessing all the property, real and personal, in a City of nearly 9,000 inhabitants and a total assessable valuation of nearly $5,000,000.

The revisory power of the Common Council is the chief means of correcting errors in assessments and the duty cast upon your Body to revise and correct the Assessor's duplicate on the third Tuesday of August of each year (Revision p. 1180) is one of great responsibility. Adjournments of the August meeting may lawfully be made up to the last Saturday in August to enable either a committee of the whole or a smaller committee to examine and report with recommendations to the Common Council. The duty thus imposed by law upon the Council is to be performed at the season of the year commonly regarded as the season for vacation and rest, and hence the necessity of calling special attention to statutory requirements in order that your honorable body will not permit a mere perfunctory performance.

The collection of taxes during the past year progressed with better results than in the year preceding, (some $4,500 of delinquent taxes having been collected in excess of the amount collected in 1884) but it is to be confessed that the delinquent roll still remains vastly too large.

From the report of the Finance Committee of the last Council it appears that from the years from 1881 to date, the amount of uncollected taxes for each year is as follows:

1881	[illegible]
1882	[illegible]
1883	[illegible]
1884	[illegible]
1885	[illegible]

For that portion of the above delinquencies represented by taxes assessed against real estate, the assessed property has in most instances been sold to the City, and thereby the City has secured upon such real estate a lien for the amount of the tax, which continues to draw interest. The system adopted by the City of selling real estate for taxes is believed to have been the best open for adoption in 1882, when it was inaugurated. Since then the Legislature have adopted a general act which offers many advantages over our present system. See P. L. 1884, p. 162. The act does not apply to any city until its provisions have been first accepted by the people of such city by a majority of the votes cast at any charter or general election, and to only such taxes as are assessed after such acceptance. If it should be deemed wise to submit the act to the people of this City, an ordinance looking to that end should be introduced as early as convenient, in order that the people may thoroughly understand the provisions of the act before voting upon the question of acceptance or rejection.

Whichever system may be preferred, proceedings would be greatly simplified and a greater degree of accuracy attained by the use of a proper assessment map. The desirability of such a map must be conceded, and if the requisite funds are available for the purpose, one should be ordered without delay; incidentally thereto a system of official numbers for the houses of the City may be provided for by ordinance.

The procedure by which real estate may be sold for taxes is at best cumbrous and dilatory, and accordingly, in the first instance, every reasonable effort should be made to collect the taxes by levy and sale of personal property of delinquents.

Since most of the real estate in the City is improved, there should be little difficulty in finding personal property liable to levy and sale. If the property is not occupied by the owner, the law makes the tenant's goods liable, and at the same time gives the tenant complete redress against his defaulting landlord, by enabling the tenant to credit the taxes on the rent or to sue the landlord in a common law action for so much money paid to and for the use of the landlord. There is no hardship on the tenant under this law, and if there were it would not excuse a noncompliance. This remedy should be invoked whenever necessary.

With respect to all taxes from the year 1878 which remain unpaid, warrants have been issued commanding the levy and sale of personal property of delinquents. These warrants should be obeyed. Nothing short of an inability to find personal property on which to levy should excuse a default. The taxes for the year 1885 became delinquent December 20th last; return was made to the City Judge and thereupon warrant was issued. There can be little difficulty at this early date in discovering in most instances personal property on which to levy in accordance with the command of such warrant. Delay in taking action will make the task more difficult. The duty imposed by the warrant is mandatory. Delinquents cannot be heard to urge that such speedy action is a hardship. They received due notice on or before November 20th and officers of the City are not at liberty to grant indulgence in the face of the imperative laws of the State. Levies should be made forthwith in every case in which property can be found. The law is clear. The City has obtained the Supreme Court's decision upholding the law.

There remains delinquent each year an average of $900 of poll taxes. In many instances it may prove impossible for the officer to find personal property in the possession of such delinquents although the delinquent may be perfectly well able to pay the tax. In such cases and in similar cases of willful refusal to pay personal property taxes, the question arises, should the law directing the officer to take the body of the delinquent be regarded as a dead letter? See Revised Statutes, p. 1158, sec. 10; P. L. 1879, p. 190; P. L. 1879, p. 287.

An important law was adopted last winter by which the property of persons engaged temporarily in business in this City subsequent to the completion of the annual assessment, and which under the old law would escape taxation, is required to bear its just share of State, county and City taxation. P. L. 1885, p. 38. To secure the enforcement of this law the City must rely largely upon the vigilance of local merchants and other citizens who are chiefly interested.

STREET IMPROVEMENTS.

In no respect has the city made more marked improvement than in the condition of its streets. The legislature, the people and the council have all directly contributed to this result. The first by authorizing the permanent improvement of road beds at the public expense, the people by voting the money required, and the council by wisely applying the money in such manner as to accomplish the greatest good. The plan so far adopted, (I am speaking of the city fund) the owners of property who propose to macadamize mainly at their own expense cannot be too strongly commended. Those streets however, which have in prior years been macadamized by property owners at their own expense should be kept in repair without further burden to such property owners.

It is believed that under the plan of procedure adopted in ordering streets paved or macadamized, the owners of property benefited may be compelled to pay assessments. Happily, it has not yet proved necessary to take legal proceedings to enforce payment in the case of macadamizing. Two cases are pending in the courts to compel payment of assessments for flagging. These cases assume vast importance in view of the precedent which if successfully maintained, will be established by them, and the aid of the council is confidently relied upon in case it becomes necessary.

STREET LIGHTS.

During the year ending January 4th, 1886, $4,300 was expended for lighting the streets of the city. While there has been marked improvement, both in the quality of the light furnished and the regularity of the service, the fact remains that our streets are inadequately lighted. The quality of the light is still unsatisfactory and should be improved. The time during which the lights are burning is equally unsatisfactory and amendment is imperatively demanded. An all-night service is highly important. Under the present system, the city is in darkness during those hours when burglaries and other depredations are most likely to be committed.

True economy may require the city to dispense with artificial light when sufficient light is furnished by the moon, but no fiction, as to the sufficiency of the light of the moon should justify us in leaving the streets of the city in actual darkness. As well might the city during a rain storm order out its sprinkling carts to lay the dust of the streets, as to extinguish the street lights when the moon is above the horizon, but actually obscured by clouds. The light of the moon may at times be sufficient, but there should be lodged with some city officer, the duty of determining when such light is insufficient, and the power of ordering at such times that the street lamps be lighted. Before making any contracts for the present year, it is hoped that your honorable body will make full inquiry, to the end that such matured measures may be adopted as will best serve the city's interest in this, one of the most important matters entrusted to your control.

PROTECTION AGAINST FIRE.

Recent events have clearly disclosed the fact that Plainfield is insufficiently protected against fire. The time for action is now. Great embarrassment is experienced in dealing with the question of remedy, growing out of the fact that there exists a distinct corporation, free from the control of and responsibility to the common council or the city proper and exercising jurisdiction for fire protection purposes over the territory of three municipal corporations, namely, the city of Plainfield, the borough and the township of North Plainfield—with power to assess taxes against property owners in all three. Taxes are assessed but no effort is made to enforce their collection, so that over fourteen per cent remain uncollected.

The charter of this city authorizes the common council to pass such ordinances as to them shall seem meet and necessary for the prevention and suppression of fires; but so long as the people are assessed by the fire department, there will always be opposition, even though it be unreasonable, to the city treasury bearing any portion of the expense of procuring protection from fire.

An enlightened public sentiment in which it is believed the officers and members of the fire department share, demands a change. All of the taxes assessed against our citizens should be assessed and collected by the same officers. This can not be done under the present system. The people of this city demand that all property protected be assessed its just proportion of fire taxes, and that such assessments be enforced, but the city officers are powerless to carry out these just demands. The system of fire protection should be expanded with the growth of the city, but under the existing regime there can be no such reciprocity. I submit for the consideration of your honorable body the question whether some action should not be taken to meet the demands of the public in the premises. It is believed that legislation would be necessary. A general law might be drafted subject to the approval of the people, at a general or special election, providing a substitute in its time for any existing system of protection from fire, the assessment and collection of taxes therefor, &c. The law should provide for the appointment of commissioners to appraise the property of corporations to be displaced and to apportion the same and the debts of such corporations ratably among municipalities in case more than one municipality should be comprised in the corporation to be displaced. It should also provide that the city may determine whether the department should be paid, part paid or volunteer.

Great care should be exercised in framing such a law, and should your honorable body deem it wise to take any action looking to the presentation of such a measure at the session of the legislature beginning to-morrow, it will be necessary to give the subject your earliest attention.

The charter authorizes the adoption of ordinances prohibiting the erection of frame buildings within prescribed limits but provides that the council may grant permission for the erection within such limits of one-story frame buildings. It did not require the recent disastrous conflagration to reveal the danger which already menaces the city because of combustible buildings crowded together, but the experience should induce your honorable body to require cogent reasons before granting the privilege of erecting any wooden structure whatever within the fire limits. The police officers have instructions to report every violation of the ordinance for vigorous prosecution.

HEALTH.

Statistics verify the statement that Plainfield is one of the healthiest cities of the state, if indeed it does not lead all others in this most important respect. The task is ours to maintain this precedence. During the past year more stringent measures looking to the general health and cleanliness were adopted than ever before in the history of the city, and justified the observation of the secretary of the State Board of Health that Plainfield was the cleanest city in the state. But the time has arrived when the question of how to dispose of sewage matter must be squarely met and answered. In the thickly settled portions of the city, the demand for a sewage system can no longer be ignored without serious danger. This question is one of the pressing questions of the hour, and on its solution depends largely the future healthfulness and consequent prosperity of the city.

During the summer months, the board of health held daily consultations to hear the reports of the health inspector and to take action thereon. In almost every instance the orders of the board were speedily and in general cheerfully obeyed. Several prosecutions were ordered and resulted in convictions and fines in every case except one. Several cases arose in which prompt remedial measures were possible solely by reason of the law-abiding character of the parties against whom complaint was made, since it was found that under recent decisions of the courts the board lacked certain necessary powers. I have before called attention to certain general statutes authorizing the formation of boards of health, and conferring on such boards extraordinary powers. The state board of health approve of these statutes—indeed are practically their authors, and in order to secure uniformity throughout the state in the organization of health boards, are careful to see that the beneficial acts each year adopted by the legislature in health matters shall apply only to such boards as have organized under the general statutes referred to.

While it is true that the charter of this city, together with the ordinances enacted in pursuance thereof, provided a system of health laws superior to that of most cities, it cannot be denied that by reason of the special efforts of the State Board of Health and the legislation recently secured by them, the general system so established is a decided improvement upon our own. I recommend therefore that the corporation counsel be directed to prepare requisite papers for submission to your honorable body, having in view the formation of a board of health under the following acts: P. L. 1880 chap. 153; 1881, chap. 135; 1882, chap. [illegible]; 1883, chap. 185; 1884, chap. 180; 1885, chaps. [illegible] and 225.

The status and personnel of the board of health for the ensuing year should be fully determined before spring when the active work of the department will need to be pressed with vigor in order to be ready for the summer months.

There are several unsettled matters relating to the general health in which, at a later date, it will be necessary for your honorable body and the board of health to co-operate. These matters together with others requiring notice from the executive branch of the city government will be made the subject of special messages to the common council as occasion may suggest, or necessity require.

Believing that the affairs of our city should be conducted upon business principles; that its officers, whether under the control of the common council or of other city departments, or of the people only, whether remunerated pecuniarily or not, are chosen and accept office upon such principles, and should be held to as strict and faithful a discharge of their several duties as each of us demands of those employed in private business; and feeling assured that your honorable body fully concur in these views, I hold myself in readiness promptly and vigorously to execute such measures as you may adopt calling for the exercise of the official duties of

Your obedient servant,
GEO. W. ROCKFELLOW.

Corporation Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the following ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time, and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and it is the intention of the Council to adopt the same.

RICHARD MERRITT, City Clerk,
Plainfield, N. J., January 11th, 1886.

AN ORDINANCE

Restricting the erection of awnings and poles and the stringing of wires in the streets, sidewalks and public places.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield by their Common Council do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. That no person or corporation shall hereafter erect or cause to be erected any awning in or over any street or sidewalk in the City of Plainfield without first obtaining permission therefor from the Common Council.

SECTION 2. That no person or corporation shall erect or cause to be erected any pole in or upon any street, sidewalk, or public place in the City of Plainfield without first obtaining permission therefor from the Common Council.

SECTION 3. That no person or corporation shall string or cause to be strung any wire or wires on any tree, pole or post standing in any street, sidewalk or public place, nor string or cause to be strung any wire or wires across, over or across any street, sidewalk or public place within the City of Plainfield without first obtaining permission therefor from the Common Council.

SECTION 4. Every person convicted of violating either of the foregoing sections of this ordinance shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, or imprisonment not exceeding sixty days in the City or County Jail or by both such fine and imprisonment.

SECTION 5. That all ordinances and resolutions and parts of ordinances and resolutions inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

THE records of the livery stables, last Monday evening, was forty-two teams out with sleighing parties.

BACHMAN BROS. are closing out their Hamburg edgings, blankets, woolen gloves, etc., at greatly reduced prices.

GRAND OFFICER WESTBROOK, assisted by Past Regent E. M. Rodman, installed the new officers of the Royal Arcanum, Monday evening last.

"IT surely would be missed"—Dr. Doremus' lecture at Music Hall, next Tuesday evening, the fourth entertainment of the Y. M. C. A. Course.

THE enlargement of Grace church being still in progress, Dean Rodman's congregation worshipped in the Seventh Day Baptist church, last Sunday.

ALTHOUGH there has been a heavy fall of snow since our last issue, the sleighing is not good out in the country, the snow having drifted off the roads.

IT was so cold in the First Baptist church, last Sunday afternoon, that the Sunday School had only a brief session and no meeting was held in the evening.

WE are indebted to Mr. A. M. Griffen, the agent of the Pope Bicycle Manf'g. Co., for one of the handsome daily calendars of 1886 just published by that company.

"HER ATONEMENT" military band will parade our streets Saturday morning at 11.30 o'clock, and the company will produce the drama at Music Hall in the evening.

THE Morristown Banner looks neat and handsome in a new dress of clear, readable type. The Banner is a staunch advocate of Democracy, and a good family newspaper.

THERE will be a special meeting of the Common Council to-morrow evening, to receive certain applications for saloon licenses that were not presented at the meeting of Monday last.

OUR respective fellow townsman, Judge Enos W. Runyon, was re-elected Engrossing Clerk in the House of Assembly at the opening of the Legislature last Tuesday. A good office for a deserving man.

MORE people die every year from trichinosis than will die from hydrophobia as long as the world lasts. Yet the owners of hogs do not have to muzzle them, nor pay a tax on them, nor have them shot down in the street.

THE services in the Seventh Day Baptist church, last Sabbath day, were shortened by reason of the uncomfortable and unhealthy frigidity of the temperature in doors. It's a cold day when this congregation closes early.

SEATS should be secured at once for DeWitt Talmage's lecture on "Big Blunders" in Music Hall, Thursday evening of next week. The diagram of the house may be seen at Reynolds' pharmacy, where tickets are on sale.

THE Trenton True American, that old and reliable advocate of Democracy, is looking neat in a new make-up. It will be found a reliable source from whence to gather accurate legislative news during the present session.

THE thrilling and celebrated American drama of "Her Atonement," from the pen of Anson Pond, will be produced at Music Hall, Saturday evening, Jan. 16th, by the original company and excellent cast that lately rendered it at the Grand Opera House in New York.

SENATOR LIVINGSTON, of Union County, was honored by doing all the nominating on the Democratic side, for Senatorial offices at the opening of the Legislature, and was also made Secretary of the Democratic caucus. Assemblyman Vetterlein of Somerset, was also honored with the Secretaryship of the Assembly Democratic caucus.

THE members of No. 2 Engine Company have presented to Mrs. Wm. Grogan a handsome and valuable gold watch, of American make, in place of the cheaper one won by her at the late Fair of the Company. This is in appreciation of Mrs. G's efforts in behalf of the Fair, by turning in the largest sum of money received for votes as a contestant for the watch prize.

EX-SURROGATE ADDISON S. CLARK has been appointed Postmaster of Westfield, to supersede Fred Decker, who has held the position for the past twelve years. This appointment is a good and well-deserved one. Mr. Clark has been a life-long Democrat, and has thus been deservedly rewarded. The retiring Postmaster, Mr. Decker, has made a most acceptable official during his term of office, and has the best wishes of his many friends for his future success.

MESSRS. EDWARD NELSON and BART KLINE, the affable and courteous ticket agents of the P. & R. R. at this station are also the representatives of the Accident Insurance Co. of North America. They will sell you a ticket to any station on the road and accompany it with a smile and an insurance on your life to the amount of $3,000 for twenty-five cents additional per day. It must be a very poor sort of a man whose life is not worth twenty-five cents a day for its protection.

A GOOD story is told of a Morristown youngster who was wonderfully interested in witnessing his mother picking the feathers from quail, that she was preparing for the New Year's dinner. He petted the dead birds and was very officious in handling the feathers, and the following day proved the lessons had been well learned. His mother thought he was very quiet indeed, and on investigating found he had the canary bird tightly held in one plump little hand, while with the other chubby fist he was rapidly dressing it for a pot pie. When the warbler was released by the horrified mother it was found to resemble Job's turkey, in that it had but one tail feather and was otherwise afflicted.

STIRLING is just now a busy place. Many of the houses have been and are being painted and repaired, and at the silk mill the work of enlarging, setting up the machinery and other work has been going on since August. The silk machinery that is being put in is of the most approved character, and some $50,000 will be expended in the work of repairs, additions, etc. Two immense engines of eighty horse power each will supply the motive power, and it is believed the mill will be in operation in a short time. The Edison system of electric light will be used to aid the workmen and two hundred and fifty lamps will be put in. Stirling is in fact a lively place now and soon will be booming, and as it is a pleasant little place and has suffered a severe blow during the hard times every one will be glad to hear of its prosperity.—Morristown Banner.

THE net profits of the late G. A. R. Fair amounted to $636.

NEXT Wednesday evening, Jan. 20th, there will be a public installation of the recently elected officers of Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, I. O. O. F., in Reform Hall.

OWING to the severe weather the ladies of the Plainfield Relief Association feel the necessity of again asking their friends for second-hand clothing. Articles may be left at 45 West Second street, the rooms of the association.

THE charm and fascination of chemical experiments, enter largely into the illustrations of Dr. Doremus' lecture on "The Agreement between the Mosaic and Scientific Accounts of Creation," to be given at Music Hall, next Tuesday evening.

MR. L. L. MANNING, the Front street marble dealer, against two bidders from Elizabeth and one from Rahway, was awarded by the Union County Board of Freeholders, the contract for furnishing headstones for the graves of soldiers not so marked.

MR. E. P. THORN has secured the services of Mr. William Grogan, late with Mr. Charles Smith, as bar clerk of his wholesale and retail liquor saloon, on Park avenue. Mr. Grogan has many friends in this city who will no doubt call upon him in his new quarters.

THE New York World offered a prize of a handsome watch in a Christmas chess tourney, last month, which was won by Mr. Clarence Murphy, of North Plainfield, against an array of expert and skillful competitors of much greater age and experience. The winner is the son of the rector of the church of the Holy Cross.

THE published statement that the "New Jersey Game and Fish Protective Society" will present a bill to the Legislature, prohibiting quail shooting for three years, is incorrect. The Society say they have no intention of urging the passage of such a bill, which would neither be beneficial in preserving or increasing the supply of quail. A rigid enforcement of the game laws is the best means of protecting the birds.

For Future Reference.

The thermometer stood at ten degrees below zero in Plainfield on Wednesday morning last.

Personalia.

Miss Carrie Culver is visiting, for a few weeks, the Miss Montgomerys of Madison avenue. Consequently, by reason of which, Plainfield's gain is Ithaca's loss.

T. DeWitt Talmage's Big Blunders.

Although the W. C. T. U. Course of entertainments are given in Reform Hall, the demand for seats and tickets to hear the lecture on "Big Blunders", by the Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D. D., is so great that Music Hall has been engaged for the purpose, next Thursday evening. The sale of seats begins at Reynolds' pharmacy, to-day. General admission, 50 cents, reserved seats, 75 cents.

Unity Lodge, No. 102, K. of P.

The following officers were installed Wednesday of last Week:

Frederick Sears, Jr., P. C.
William [illegible] Mosher, C. C.
Charles [illegible] Dunham, V. C.
William H. Rogers, P.
John L. Duckworth, M. at A.

By D. D. G. C. John Charles, of Elizabeth, assisted by P. C's Leigh, Miller, Jones and Neill of Olive Branch Lodge, No. 78.

"Her Atonement" at Music Hall.

To-morrow evening at Music Hall, Messrs. Chapman & Sellers' excellent company from the Grand Opera House, New York, will present Mr. Anson Pond's play of "Her Atonement." The sensational features and military evolutions of the piece as given in other cities never fail in receiving the most demonstrative approval, besides which there is much to commend in the acting of Eleanor Moretti and Thomas Seabrooke.

Dropped Dead.

Mrs. Eunice Laing, widow of the late Nathan Laing, died suddenly at her residence, corner of Fifth and New streets, Saturday evening last, in the 82d year of her age. The deceased had just prepared to retire for the night, and was about getting into bed when she fell and expired almost immediately. The funeral services were held at her late residence Tuesday afternoon, and attended by a large gathering of friends and admirers.

St. Mary's Church Finances.

The annual financial statement of St. Mary's R. C. church for the past year, shows a reduction of the debt to the amount of $3,307 85, which includes the repurchase of a mortgage on real estate of $639 15. The receipts from pew rents were $3 461 27; from Sunday collections, $1,185 51; from Easter and Christmas collections, $881 94; Visitation collection, $1,1[illegible]. The church debt society raised $7[illegible] 63, and the proceeds of sundry entertainments amounted to $202 80.

To The City's Shame.

The results of the past storm remain to attract attention to the ice and snow covered sidewalks that each Winter linger to the danger of the pedestrian and the shame of the city. An ordinance has been passed and resolutions are periodically adopted requiring the cleaning of the walks, but no enforcement of such provision is ever accomplished. It seems to be too much trouble for the authorities to undertake. Let the Democratic majority that has been put in power try its hand at the business.

Showing Their Appreciation.

Probably no one individually does as much gratuitous labor in the cause of righteousness as the respective officers and teachers of the Bethel Mission. How gratifying, therefore, must it be for them to find how their kind efforts for the good of the colored members of the flock are understood and appreciated. The scholars of this Mission, last Sunday, presented their Superintendent, Mr. S. A. Ginna, with an elegant and comfortable, leather-covered chair; while Secretary A. W. Duxbury received a silver-headed cane, Librarian D. Ginna a brass inkstand, and Miss K. Kimball a pair of statuettes.

$100 For a Mad Dog.

At a regular meeting, held last week at Taylor's Hotel, Jersey City, of the New Jersey Kennel Club, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, A newspaper published in the city of New York has created mad dogs in this State, and as this club knows the full pedigrees of such dogs to be sired by and dammed by ink, therefore be it

Resolved, That the New Jersey Kennel and Field Trial Club offer a reward of $100 for the production of a living dog with rabies, said dog to be examined by a committee of three veterinary surgeons, and then place such dog on exhibition in the Newark Show, to be held in March next.

Shinney Downs Polo.

Wednesday evening at The Crescent, the Somerville shinney team with fences built around their legs so they wouldn't get hurt, hammered dents in the floor and almost slugged the cover off the ball, until by good luck and no science they would succeed in blindly getting a goal. The Plainfield boys expected to play polo, and, unfortunately, knew how to play that so well that they were unacquainted with any buckwheat game from up country. Their fine and scientific playing of polo, however, rather bothered the Somervillians, and the home team did, by perseverance, get a goal before the time was up.

Grace Church.

This congregation will be enabled to have services in their own church on Sunday next. Morning services at 10.30. Sunday School at 3 p. m.; evening services at 7.30 o'clock.

P. & R's New Officers.

The following are the officers of the Philadelphia and Reading road, elected on Monday last in Philadelphia: President, Franklin B. Gowen; managers, I. V. Williamson, John Wanamaker, A. J. Antelo, Peter C. Hollis, Mark M. Watson, David Hostetter; treasurer, William W. Harkness; secretary, William R. Taylor.

Presenting a Jewel.

In behalf of the officers and members of Unity Lodge, 102, K. of P., Joseph Shephard, K. of R. and S, presented P. C. Frederick Sears, Jr., last evening, with a handsome jewel, as a token of their high esteem for the faithful discharge of his duties as C. C. In response he thanked the Lodge, wishing them the great success in the future which they had attained in the past. The Lodge is on the road to success.

Next Tuesday.

The fourth of the Y. M. C. A. Annual Course of Entertainments, will be a lecture by Prof. R. Ogden Doremus, with experiments and illustrations, on the subject of the "Agreement between the Mosaic and Scientific laws of Creation." Speaking in a general way, scientific lectures are not generally interesting to the public in general, but the one to be given is so entertaining besides being so instructive, that all and every one would be pleased with it.

A Fall in Electric Lights.

For the first time since they were started up last November, the electric lights in The Crescent went out, Saturday evening, and for a few moments the audience were in the dark. The cause of the accident was the breaking of the cable that raises the tower lights to the top of the pole. The fall of the lamps smashed them to pieces and broke the circuit, but as soon as the tower connection could be switched off, the lower lights were burning brighter than ever.

Bank Directors.

The following gentlemen were Tuesday last elected directors of the First National Bank: Messrs. J. R. Van Deventer, C. Potter, Jr., I. D. Titsworth, Manning Stelle, John Simpson, P. M. French, W. McD. Coriell, D. F. Randolph and Geo. P. Suydam.

The Directors elected by the City National Bank were the same as last year as follows: Messrs. Charles Hyde, Elias R. Pope, J. Frank Hubbard, Lawrence Myers, James T. Closson, R. MacDonald, J. K. Myers, Joseph B. Coward and J. M. Myers.

Two Carnivals Next Week.

During Wednesday evening of next week at The Crescent, there will be given a Variety Carnival, in which those who take part may wear any kind of a costume, and for a number of which valuable prizes will be given. Designs representing the olden times, or hard-times, or any times at all, will be appropriate.

Saturday afternoon of next week, (the 23rd) will be given up to the enjoyment of the children that can not have an evening carnival. There will then be held a Bon-Bon Party, and a whole afternoon of pleasure, regarding which we will publish further particulars in our next issue.

Another Bachelor Gone.

At the residence of the bride's parents on Central avenue, Tuesday evening of last week, by the Rev. D. J. Yerkes, Miss Anna Balen Montgomery and Mr. J. Clare Derby were united in marriage. The ceremony was of necessity a quiet one by reason of the recent death of the groom's sister, and only the relatives of the two families were present. The bride was most becomingly dressed, the groom looked correspondingly brilliant, and the friends present beamed with sincere congratulations. The wedding gifts were numerous and costly, including two checks for large sums of money from generous relatives.

A Wonderful Result.

The most marvellous and creditable financial statement of any fire insurance company in the world to-day, is that which we present of the German American, of New York, whose Vice President and acting head is John W. Murray, Esq., of this city. The largest company in the country with a capital of three million dollars, is proud of a surplus of one million, yet the German American with a capital of only a million, shows a net surplus of $2,039 850 58. Such a marvellous exhibit of the result of brains and management, we believe has never been excelled. Messrs. J. C. Pope & Co. are the agents in this city, and all losses here are paid from their office.

A Calico Benefit.

At the Casino rink, last Monday evening, a benefit was tendered to Mr. Chas. Frace, who has been connected with the establishment ever since its existence almost, as floor manager. The occasion called forth the attendance of his numerous friends and a thoroughly successful and enjoyable time resulted. Many were present in costumes of calico, and 25 couples took part in the grand march. The prizes for the best and most originally dressed were awarded to Miss Dorland, of Somerville, Miss Lee, of this city, and Mr. George Leland. Miss Hull accompanied Mr. Frace in the leading of the march. Among the many graceful skaters present were Mr. John S. Smalley and Miss Kitty Wright of Somerville.

Whoppers from Woodport.

A mysterious and suspicious looking box arrived per Adams Express at the Post Office Thursday morning, addressed to Albert Runyon, the popular clerk at the delivery window. No dynamite scare affected the "Bunny," but with "Eli's" assistance the box was opened and the backs of fourteen fine pickerel were exposed to view, the largest weighing 4 lbs. 2 oz., the remainder averaging 3 lbs. each. No clew has been obtained as to the perpetrator of the outrage, but suspicion points strongly to Woodport, at the head of Lake Hopatcong, as the starting point of the box; and probably Mr. Tom Bright, Joe Nichols and old Sol at the Woodport Hotel could throw some light on the subject of the contents, could they be interviewed. "Al" intends to investigate the matter.

Plainfield a Match for Montclair.

The foot-ball match at The Crescent, during last Saturday evening, between Mr. Roger Murray's team of this city and a picked team from Montclair, resulted, to the surprise and pride of the Plainfield boys, in a score of four to four. The home team was short the services of two of its best players—Mr. Fred. Yates being incapacitated by a felon, and Mr George Vincent being out of town. Consequently, to make up the required number, their places had to be filled with two who had never before played the game.

In spite of the storm a large audience, many of whom were ladies, assembled and thoroughly enjoyed the most exciting sport. Before the first half of the game was completed, the Montclair team had made four points and the Plainfielders were nothing. But after a gallant struggle, Capt. Murray secured two points for his side and added two more just as the time arranged was completed. Another game is looked forward to with much interest and expectation.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

MONDAY EVENING, Jan. 11, 1886.

The Council met pursuant to adjournment.

Present—President Beguelin and Messrs. Bowers, Cuthbert, Dumont, Dunham, Gallup, Goddard, Marsh, Simpson, Voorhees—10.

Absent—Mr. Cox—1.

The minutes of regular meeting of Jan. 4th, approved as read.

The President announced the following as the standing committees for the year:

Alms—Cuthbert, Bowers, Goddard.
Auditing—Simpson, Cuthbert, Marsh.
Finance—Dumont, Cox, Gallup.
Fire, Water and Lamps—Bowers, Gallup, Goddard.
Laws and Ordinances—Cox, Marsh, Voorhees.
License—Dunham, Voorhees, Simpson.
Police—Gallup, Dunham, Bowers.
Printing and Stationery—Goddard, Dunham, Cuthbert.
Salaries, Offices and Elections—Marsh, Dumont, Cox.
Streets and Public Health—Voorhees, Simpson, Dumont.

The following petitions for hotel and saloon licenses, were read and referred;

Hotel, James H. Force, 7 North avenue.
Saloon, James Muldowney, Liberty and Third street.
Hotel, J. B. Miller, Front street, opposite Madison avenue.
Hotel, J. Blimm, Somerset street.
Saloon, E. P. Thorn, 17 Park avenue.
Saloon, James Conneely, 32 Park avenue.
Saloon, P. Day,—Third street, near Plainfield avenue.
Saloon, C. Smith, 4 West Front street.
Hotel, John G. Staats, cor. Park avenue and Second street.
All referred.

Mr. Cuthbert presented a petition from the W. C. T. U., which was also referred to License Com.

The following claims were presented and referred to the proper committees: Jno. Wilson, $424.15 and $85.51; N. Y. & N. J. Gas Light Co., $149.52; W. V. Mundy, $18.50.

The annual message of His Honor, the Mayor, was read as published elsewhere, and on motion ordered filed.

The Aud. Com. reported as correct the claim of W. V. Mundy, for which a warrant was ordered drawn.

Mr. Goddard presented an ordinance in relation to the erection of awnings, telegraph and telephone poles, and the stringing of wires within the city's limits.

Read its first and second times, and ordered engrossed and published.

On motion, the Clerk was authorized to have the necessary roll blanks and committee cards printed.

A petition was presented from the trustees of Grace church for permission to erect a frame addition. Referred to the committee on Fire with power.

On motion of Mr. Goddard, the committee on Printing was requested to confer with the Corporation Counsel in relation to the advisability of soliciting bids for doing the official printing of the year.

On motion of the same, the President appointed Messrs. Goddard, Simpson and Voorhees a special committee upon the subject of an equalization of the assessment of taxes.

Such business matters as had been laid on the table by the last Council, were taken up and referred to the proper committees of the present.

The Council then adjourned.

An Unsatisfactory Play.

Mr. John T. Raymond, who gave a rendition of his celebrated character of "Col. Sellers" at Music Hall, Thursday evening of last week, was "supported" by a company that seemed to be composed of some of the poorest material obtainable. Miss Kate Forsyth—who is Mr. Raymond's leading lady—was unfortunately too ill to appear, and so was wanting in her ability to redeem in one particular a representation that was only endurable so far as the star was concerned. Mr. Raymond had been and is now playing "The Magistrate" (a piece better adapted to display his peculiar style of comedy) with a company fully familiar with its parts; so the mistake of selecting so hackneyed a play as the one given here, necessitated a hurried rehearsal and the formation of such a cast as could be gotten together at short notice. Let us hope that all this is appreciated, and the second appearance of so clever a comedian in Plainfield will be in a character more recent, and with a company more gratifying.

Fire Board Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Board of Managers of the Fire Department was held in the Council room, Tuesday evening. Present—President Jones, Senator Livingston and Commissioners Morris and Knowland. The minutes of the past meetings of Nov. 17th, and Dec. 7th and 8th, were read by deputy Secretary Stover and approved. The regular order of business was suspended, and the President reported that the striker in the tower was at last in perfect order. He also stated that in the absence of Commissioner Cutter, nothing had yet been done in settlement of the claim for the wrecking of a peanut stand. Mr. W. W. Coriell, against whom the Board had presented a claim for the use of No. 3 engine in quenching the fire in the coal heaps of Cook Bros., yard, was permitted to explain his position in the matter. He stated that by requesting of the 2d assistant Engineer he had obtained permission to secure the services of the steamer for the purpose of putting out a fire that the Department should have overcome of itself. He had paid for such service $115.30 to No. 3 Company, and had furnished besides all the coal and lubricating oil that was used during the work. He had made the contract with the Company to do the work, and it had cost the Department nothing. He felt he had more right to the use of the steamer for the purpose of putting out a fire that was endangering surrounding property and consuming his at the rate of $10 an hour, than there was any right to use the same to pump out the cellar of the Children's Home, or "Jimmerson's brick yard."

After some discussion in relation, the matter was laid on the table. The following resolutions offered by Commissioner Morris, were adopted, and the President was authorized to have the same printed and posted in the houses of the Department:

Resolved, That for the information of all whom it may concern, the following sections of "Miscellaneous Fire Ordinances," be printed and distributed by the Chief Engineer among the firemen, and others who may desire them, for the better instruction of all who are, or may hereafter be, connected in any way with the Fire Department:

SECTION 2. The Chief Engineer in all cases of fire shall have sole control over all the members of the Fire Department and over all the engines and apparatus belonging thereto, and any person belonging to said Department who shall refuse to obey any lawful order of the Chief Engineer, shall be expelled.

SECTION 3. In the absence of the Chief Engineer, the 1st Assistant, and in case of his absence, the 2d Assistant Engineer shall act as Chief Engineer, and shall have all the power and authority of the Chief Engineer.

SECTION 4. The different fire companies shall be under the control of their respective Foremen and Assistants, and upon every alarm of fire shall forthwith repair to the place thereof with the engines and other fire apparatus under their care, and there manage the same under the direction of the Chief Engineer or the Assistant Engineers and in case of their absence, the Senior Foreman present.

The Committee on Repairs and Supplies was instructed to have the furnace in No. 2 Engine house repaired; and after some further business the Board adjourned.

The New Council's Committees.

Better judgment, greater skill and more taste in the selection of the Standing Committees, has never been displayed than by President Beguelin of the present Council. The members of each seem to be apportioned with a true and satisfactory regard for the interest of the community and the deserts of the majority. The good of the people will result from Mr. Beguelin's discrimination and sagacity.

The Easiest Way's the Best.

Should the Fire, Water and Lamps Committee of the present Council refrain from mounting the same high horse ridden by that of the last in relation to the action of the Telephone Company in removing the instruments from the houses of the Hook & Ladder Co., and Alert Hose Co., they might accomplish the return of the 'phones. A polite request would undoubtedly persuade the Company to do that which the Council have no right or power to command.

A Striking Exhibit.

Elsewhere will be found a detailed statement of the condition of the Prudential Insurance Company and a comparative table, by means of which the growth and prosperity of this institution can be accurately gauged from its inception, 1876, to the present time.

Among other facts shown, it appears that the company has, during the past twelve months, increased its cash assets over $300,000, or at the rate of almost $1,000 per day, excluding Sundays.

This fact alone is eloquent in giving some idea as to the vast extent of the total volume of business transacted by the company, and an ample demonstration of the ability which directs its fortunes.

Mr. John S. King, of 36 Park avenue, is the faithful agent in this city who has done his share towards the successful results we speak of.

A Grand Bicycle Tournament.

The grand bicycle entertainment that the Plainfield Bicycle Club, through its enterprising and popular members, Messrs. Crane, Burr and Cooley, is arranging for the 25th inst., will eclipse in all its details any like affair of the sort that has ever been completed and carried out. Twenty six stars will take part in the performances, and sixty-four wheelmen are expected to join in the grand parade. There will be races for members of the fraternity from everywhere, and a special race for the wheelmen of this city. The Kings county bicyclists of Brooklyn will give their "demon drill" in the dark, carrying lighted torches, with lanterns lit and dressed in the scarlet habiliments of his satanic majesty. The drill squad of the Hudson County Club of Jersey City will perform its evolutions and intricate figures that are so graceful and skillful. The great Leopold will give an exhibition of fancy, trick and expert riding—performing, among other feats, the difficult one of jumping the rope on a buggy wheel while turning the rope himself. The "beginner's" act, originated by Dr. Johnson of the Orange Wanderers, will be introduced into the programme by that gentleman himself. Other interesting and marvellous features that are being secured will be set forth in the small bills, including a game of polo on bicycles. This tournament will be held at the Crescent, Monday evening, January 25th. The general admission will be 25 cents, reserved seats 25 cents extra. Boxes in the gallery, holding five, with admission, are to be sold for $3.00.

Where They Are to Be Found.

The stopping places of some of our law makers at Trenton are as follows:

At the Trenton House will be found Senators Bogert, of Bergen, (rooms 54 and 55): Fish, of Essex, (rooms 23 and 24); Brinkerhoff, of Hudson, Large, of Hunterdon; Vanderbilt, of Mercer; Cranmer, of Ocean (room 46); Griggs, of Passaic (18 and 19); Thompson, of Somerset (D and E); McBride, of Sussex, and Livingston, of Union. Assemblymen Underhill (61), Potter, (25), Condit (58 and 59), Doremus (60), Parker (1 and 2), Martin (21) all of Essex; Dayton, of Hudson (13); Throckmorton, of Monmouth (62 and 63); Pintard, of Monmouth (64); Gourley, of Passaic (53), and Corbin, of Union (51 and 52) Clerk Toombs, William H. Bettle and "Cul" Barcalow are also at the Trenton House.

At the American House are found Senators Herring, of Camden, (18 and 19) and Moon, of Warren (25). Assemblyman Lister, of Essex (21); Jewett, of Camden (17); Temuity and Reloubet, of Hudson (57); Noonan, Pearson and Hudspeth, of Hudson (51, 52 and 44 respectively); Banks, of Cumberland (21), and Heyer, of Monmouth (29). Sheriff Brown, of Essex, and John Kenndil, of Paterson, choice spirits who know more about legislative ways than the legislators themselves, are also registered at the American, with William R. Weeks, counsel for the State Fire Association.

At the State Street House—Senator Pancoast, of Gloucester, has rooms (10 and 11), and Senator W. W. Miller, of Salem, has room (40); Assemblyman Whitaker, of Salem. (41); Beckwith, of Atlantic, (9); Pfeiffer, of Camden, (1); Peal, of Essex, (8); Roe, of Gloucester, (7). John Hood, well known about the legislative halls, is also at the State Street House.

At the National Hotel are found Assemblyman Van Bussum, of Bergen, room (33); Arnwine, of Hunterdon, (22); Wolverton, of Hunterdon, (23); Scheele, Bolton and Low, (1, 6 and 2); Kinney, of Sussex, (5); Baird, of Warren, (8); Titus, of Warren, (9); Drake, of Morris, (16), and Ten Broeck, of Middlesex.

The Windsor accommodates Senators Carter, of Burlington, and Chattle, of Monmouth; Speaker Armstrong, of Camden; and Assemblyman Alcott and Gangewer, of Burlington, and Besson, of Hudson.

William Harrigan, of Essex, is to be found at the United States Hotel.

SCOTCH PLAINS SCRATCHINGS.

Brown, the Iron Jeweler, positively asserts that no poor deluded mortal actually can tell when he wins a turkey at Buckwheat John's Raffle, until "Ran" gets done throwing for the house.

We are happy to state that Mr. Albert Harris, who had the misfortune to break his arm last week, is again able to be about, and is doing finely under the skillful treatment of our village physician, Dr. Westcott.

The much needed repairing of the road from Fanwood depot to the village is no longer a subject of idle gossip or cracker barrel eloquence. A few energetic and enterprising citizens have taken the matter in hand and are doing something of a more tangible nature. Mr. Warren Ackerman has given the use of teams and men, Mr. John Cook has given crushed stone and Mr. Daniel Allen, gravel. They were getting along finely, when the snowfall came and brought the work to a standstill—pro tem.

Excelsior H. & L. Co. No. 1, having recently purchased 300 feet of fire hose, by the voluntary donation of its friends, desire to express their thanks to those who have so liberally contributed to the accomplishment of this very desirable end. The acquirement of this hose by the Company now places them in a condition to render efficient service in time of need. The Company appointed a committee consisting of Dr. F. W. Westcott, H. Hand and A. Macauly to locate the cisterns within the engine fire limits; and it is generally understood that the committee propose to have a chart of them drawn and hung up in the engine room for reference in time of need.

BOROUGH COUNCIL MEETING.

FRIDAY EVENING, Jan. 8th.

The Council met in adjourned meeting. Present—John H. Van Winkle, Mayor, and Councilmen F. M. Sister, D. R. Weaver, John Thickstun, James K. Arnold, William H. Ludlow and Wm. E. Mattison, Clerk.

Absent—Councilman Peter Brunson.

The minutes of the last two meetings were read and approved.

A communication from Marshal Weaver, calling attention to the necessity of two blankets for Lock-up, was read and referred to the Committee on Supplies with power.

Applications from A. B. Summers, and Peter Hoagland for express license, and John Hoff for peddler's license were read, referred to the Committee on Licenses, reported correct and licenses granted.

Claims of John V. Whitlock for $450 for laying cross-walks, and of Tunis J. Carey for $10 for store were presented, referred to Finance Committee, reported correct, and warrants ordered for payment of same.

The Borough Clerk read his monthly report showing a balance of $148.33 in his hands.

Councilman Weaver, from Street Committee, reported that the parties who had been notified to lay sidewalks had complied with notice.

The Corporation Counsel was directed to prepare necessary papers for formation of Board of Health under law of 1885.

Councilman Sister moved that the cost of erecting and maintaining a certain number of street lamps, be ascertained, and suggested that the committee secure a bid from the Globe Gaslight Co. Carried.

The Committee on Streets was instructed to report at the next meeting the probable cost of putting and keeping the streets in repair.

Councilman Weaver offered the following resolution, viz:

Resolved, That the Corporation Counsel be authorized to defend the certiorari proceedings in the Supreme Court in the case of the Borough vs Tunis J. Carey, for violation of truck ordinance. Carried.

The meeting then adjourned.

Wonders of the Polar World.

Under the auspices of Perseverance Lodge No 74, K. of P., Mr. William Bradford gave one of his visually and orally illustrated recitals of the different phases of life and nature in the far North at the Music Hall on Monday evening last before an appreciative audience. The recital was delivered in a pleasant style, being sketchy and sparkling with good points and illustrated on a canvas twenty feet square, by the aid of a very powerful lantern, from photographic views taken on the different expeditions fitted out by Mr. Bradford at fabulous expense. Mr. Bradford's remarkable collection of illustrations received the closest attention of the audience and were frequently applauded. Miss Ruby Sinclair from behind the scenes, sang Eskimo songs and hymns, which had an interesting effect. Some were so deeply attentive (and the hall being without heat) that they imagined themselves in the land of the midnight sun and were startled when the loud snap occasioned by the re-lighting of the hall occurred at Mr. Bradford's conclusion. We are pleased to state that the recital was a success and the jolly Knights are happy thereby.

MISCELLANY.

At No. 34 E. 5th street Mr. H. H. Baker will show you the best Furnace ever yet made. And his regulator that can be attached to any furnace, will save coal and is operated from the dining or sitting room, thus making it remarkably convenient. Call and see it.—j1m1

A FAMOUS TRICK.

Robert Heller, the [illegible] magician, who died a few years ago, used to exhibit with delight one trick of which he was proud. He would step to the front of the platform, holding out at arm's-length a small bird-cage, in which hopped and chirped a live sparrow. Extending the cage above his head, and grasping it with both hands, he would say:

"Ladies and gentlemen, you see this cage. It is a real cage, isn't it? You see the bird. It is a real bird, isn't it? Now watch me closely. The moment I snap my fingers the cage and bird will vanish into thin air."

He would then snap his fingers, and both cage and bird would disappear, leaving not so much as a feather behind.

Calvert, a French wonder-worker, having heard of the bird cage trick, determined to discover its secret. He came to the performance one evening armed with a powerful opera glass. Just as Heller stepped upon the platform, with the cage in his hands, Calvert called out:

"Put the cage down on the table, or hold it out by one hand."

Heller made a reasonable excuse for not doing anything of the kind, and immediately caused the cage to disappear as usual. The next morning Calvert, who was on good terms with Heller, called upon him at his hotel.

"Ah, monsieur!" said the Frenchman. "I have discovered your great bird-cage trick at last!"

"Have you?" replied Heller, smiling. "Pray describe it."

"No. Come to my performance to-morrow night, and you shall see it."

"Very well," said Heller. "If you can perform the trick, you are the only living person, besides myself, who can do it."

Heller went to the evening performance, and took a front seat. After the usual tricks with cards and pistols had been performed, Calvert came forward with a bird cage, in which could be seen a small bird fluttering about. Holding the cage out at arm's length, he said:

"Ladies and gentlemen, you will see here to-night, for the first time, the great bird-cage trick of the American wizard, Heller. I have had the honor to discover the secret of this trick, and I now perform it before you as my own. When I snap my fingers, the cage and bird will disappear."

Looking directly at Heller, with a smile, Calvert snapped his fingers and the bird-cage vanished.

At Heller's death the method of making the cage and causing it to disappear was disclosed.

The cage, made of the finest and most delicate wires, was separated into two compartments by a thin partition. These two compartments were held together by minute but powerful springs, which were made to open by pressing two wires, one on each side of the cage.

The two wires were held by the performer between his thumb and finger, as he extended the cage at arm's length. Each compartment of the cage was so made that when the springs which held them together were loosened, the compartments would collapse, or fold up into a very small compass.

Attached to each side of the cage, close by the wires held by the finger and thumb of the performer, were stout elastic cords running up the inside of Heller's sleeves, and fastened at some point above his elbows.

The bird chosen for the cage was one of the smallest varieties of sparrow, and he was placed in the compartment to which the partition belonged.

Suppose the performer now ready to exhibit the cage. He steps out, holding it up at arm's length. The elastic bands being on the inner side of his hands and wrists, are not perceived by the audience. He snaps his fingers; that is, he presses the wires which let the cage fall apart; each side collapses, and the force of the tightly stretched rubber pulls each section of the cage up the performer's sleeves.

The bird is drawn up with the side in which it is placed, and, strange to say, is not often seriously injured by the operation.

Every part of this trick requires the utmost skill and the most delicate handling in every detail to make it successful. The fact that Heller performed the trick hundreds of times before attentive audiences without betraying the secret of it, shows to what an extent attention to details may enable a man to triumph over the seemingly impossible.

It is ten years since James Lick, the California millionaire, died and left most of a large fortune for public purposes in San Francisco. But as yet only about $800,000 out of more than $2 000,000 so devoted has been expended. Thus only $200,000 has been expended on the observatory for which $700,000 was bequeathed. The object glass of thirty six inches for the telescope, now nearly finished, is the one success of nineteen casts. Only $35 000 has been paid from the $150 000 left for public baths. It will require three years more to finish Sculptor Story's statue of the author of "The Star Spangled Banner." Some of the largest bequests have not yet been touched. The reason assigned for the delay is that the directions of the testator devolved so much labor upon the trustees that they have not yet been able to execute, and in some cases scarcely consider, the provisions and plans of the will.

A French hair-dresser in St. Louis has filed a caveat and applied for a patent for an invention by which passengers and freight may be taken on and discharged from railway trains without stopping. The working model shows a main track in front of an elevated depot, with inclined tracks leading to it. The idea is to start a train from one terminus, and not to have it stop or slacken speed until it reaches the other. At the same time passengers may be taken up and discharged at any station. As a train reaches a station on the main track the rear car switches off and runs up the inclined plane to the elevated depot. At the same time another car runs down the other inclined plane, is caught by the passing train, whirled on to the main track and becomes a part of the train. The passengers who desire to stop at the next station pass to the rear car, which is side-tracked, as was the previous one, and another car-load of passengers is taken on. By a very simple contrivance, which acts automatically, when a train gets within a certain distance of a depot, it releases the car in waiting there, which starts down the inclined plane just as the last car of the train is switched off and starts upon the other.

A committee of three was appointed to procure a suitable meeting room. The chief object of the association is to try and hasten the settlement of the city debt.

Three burglaries were committed at Cranford on January 21, a drug store and two private residences being entered. The thieves did not make much of a haul in the former place, although they forced open a Herring safe, which fortunately was empty. One dollar in currency was taken from the store drawer and a quantity of cigars stolen. The robbers were more successful in the other places visited. Forty-five dollars in cash was taken out of the pocket of a pair of trousers hanging in a bedroom. A gold watch was also taken, together with a gold cup and a large quantity of silverware and some jewelry.

Edward Garrighty and Charles Paustian, the former a son of one of Phillipsburg's Councilmen, and the latter a son of the Collector of Taxes, have gone to State Prison for burglary. They came home from Easton drunk one evening, and out of pure mischief entered a cigar store in the Second Ward and stole a lot of goods. Their suspicious movements attracted the attention of Officers Callanan and Coleman, and the thieves were promptly lodged in the station. Next day at the hearing they confessed to the whole thing and were committed to jail. They gave the Sheriff no end of trouble, and even made a very nearly successful attempt to break jail. When they came up before Judge Dewitt, he gave them a year each. Neither of them is over twenty years of age, but both are very bad boys.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

The absence of a tracking snow up to the time the game season closed, Jan. 1st, ought to insure an increased percentage of quail, grouse and rabbit next season.

A bill should be passed at the coming Legislature, extending the "open season" for catching black bass with hook and line to Dec. 1st. The same law now exists in New York and Pennsylvania.

A female English pheasant was shot in the valley back of Scotch Plains recently by Charles Drake of the latter village. Some years ago a number of these beautiful birds were released by sportsmen near Chatham. Possibly the bird shot was one of them or their progeny.

An item is traveling the rounds of the State press to the effect that New Jersey sportsmen intend to apply to the Legislature for a law prohibiting the shooting of quail for three years. We doubt if there is any foundation for such a report. Such a law would not be beneficial or a protection to the quail. A stricter observation of the game laws is all that is needed.

STATE ITEMS.

Rev. Carter Helm Jones, of Richmond, Va., has accepted the call of the First Baptist church, of Elizabeth, and will enter upon the duties of the pastorate the first Sunday in February.

On Saturday morning, Jan. 21, St Mary's church of Elizabeth, was broken into by thieves, who effected an entrance through a window. All the poor boxes were rifled of their contents. They are supposed to have contained over $25.

The Essex County Lunatic Asylum, at Newark, was partially destroyed by fire on Saturday, Jan. 21, caused by a defective flue. All the inmates were rescued without injury. The loss to buildings is about $30,000. The Asylum will be rebuilt at once.

The Board of Trade of Elizabeth effected an organization Saturday, Jan. 21, and elected Dr. J. S. Crane as temporary Chairman. The annual dues of members were fixed at $3. Twenty-five prominent citizens enrolled their names. Officers will be elected on January 11.

Mrs. Margaret Taylor, widow of Captain Wm. Taylor, of Trenton, died suddenly of apoplexy, at the residence of her son-in-law, Gen. J. Madison Drake, Elizabeth, Sunday evening, Jan. 31. She had just seated herself at the dinner table when she attempted to rise from her chair, and before any of the family could reach her she had fallen upon the floor, expiring instantly.

At the regular meeting of the Middlesex Agricultural Society at New Brunswick, Monday, Jan. 4th, a resolution of respect to the memory of the late President, Mr. J. V. D. Christopher, was passed and the society adjourned without transacting any routine business. Mr. Frederick Staab, of New Brunswick, has been elected to the position of Treasurer of the Union Loan Association, made vacant by Mr. Christopher's death.

Armstrong, the cashier and bookkeeper of the Newark Journal, whose recent mysterious disappearance was supposed to be a case of mental aberration and suicide, has proved to be an absconding embezzler, having systematically falsified his books to cover up his pilfering. Armstrong does not break the record. He was an orthodox churchman and spent his spare moments in efforts to increase the usefulness and piety of a Sunday school. He is supposed to be in Canada looking for something to turn up.

Justice certainly traveled with a leaden heel toward Milwaukee. A man has been granted a full pardon there after having undergone twenty years' imprisonment for a murder of which he was innocent. The pity of the whole world is a poor recompense for the suffering of this innocent man during his twenty years' confinement.

At the meeting of the Commissioners of Appeal in Jersey City, Monday afternoon, Jan. 4th, J. H. Loomis, real estate agent of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, presented a communication from that road claiming a reduction from the assessed valuation of that Company's lands. The total sum of the valuation of the Assessor is $3,031 900 and the company's valuation is $699,735. The company and the city, therefore, disagree by the small sum of $2 332,165. The committee appointed will decide what valuation should be made.

A little over a year ago, says the Dover Index, probably one-half of the Republican voters of New Jersey sincerely believed that if the Democrats won the Presidential election all our industries would at once go to ruin and absolute starvation would be the fate of hundreds of thousands. This sort of calamity was predicted in every Republican newspaper, by every Republican stump speaker, and also by some pious frauds who serve their political party in the name of the Lord even from the pulpit, and uninformed laymen are perhaps not to be blamed for believing them. But did these demagogues tell the truth, or did they lie? By this time everyone with as much thinking capacity as an oyster, knows that they lied. It is about ten months since the Democratic administration was inaugurated, and even in this short period of time a gratifying change has taken place for the better in the iron trade and other industries. Last week marked the opening of several concerns that have been closed during several Republican administrations. The Boonton Iron Works is one of these concerns. It was at one time one of the most flourishing industries of the State. The works closed shortly after President Grant's second term began, and has been closed ever since. They reopened Wednesday of last week, and started with the employment of twenty-five hands. The old Coghlan mill at Whippany, up in Morris county, is another concern that has been idle since Rutherford B Hayes occupied the White House. The mill started once more last Saturday.

Analyses and careful examinations of Cleveland's Superior and Royal Baking Powders enable us to bear testimony to the superiority of Cleveland's. It yields more carbonic acid gas than the Royal, and contains no ammonia salts.

Cleveland's Baking Powder is made of pure substances and is absolutely free from any kind of adulteration. We endorse it most cordially as an honest and efficient article, and one that will give entirely satisfactory results.

CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND & PACIFIC RAILWAY

By reason of its central position and close relation to all principal lines East and West, at initial and terminal points, constitutes the most important mid-continental link in that system of through transportation which invites and facilitates travel and traffic between cities of the Atlantic and Pacific Coasts. It is also the favorite and best route to and from points East, Northeast and Southeast, and corresponding points West, Northwest and Southwest.

The Rock Island system includes in its main line and branches, Chicago, Joliet, Ottawa, La Salle, Peoria, Geneseo, Moline and Rock Island, in Illinois; Davenport, Muscatine, Washington, Fairfield, Ottumwa, Oskaloosa, West Liberty, Iowa City, Des Moines, Indianola, Winterset, Atlantic, Knoxville, Audubon, Harlan, Guthrie Centre and Council Bluffs, in Iowa; Gallatin, Trenton, Cameron and Kansas City, in Missouri; Leavenworth and Atchison, in Kansas; Albert Lea, Minneapolis and St. Paul, in Minnesota; Watertown in Dakota, and hundreds of intermediate cities, towns, villages and stations.

THE GREAT ROCK ISLAND ROUTE

Guarantees its patrons that sense of personal security afforded by a solid, thoroughly ballasted road-bed; smooth tracks of continuous steel rail; substantially built culverts and bridges; rolling stock as near perfection as human skill can make it; the safety appliances of patent buffers, platforms and air-brakes; and that exacting discipline which governs the practical operation of all its trains. Other specialties of this route are Transfers at all connecting points in Union Depots, and the unsurpassed comforts and luxuries of its Passenger Equipment.

The Fast Express Trains between Chicago and the Missouri River are composed of well ventilated, finely upholstered Day Coaches, Magnificent Pullman Palace Sleepers of the latest design, and sumptuous Dining Cars, in which elaborately cooked meals are leisurely eaten, "good Digestion waiting on Appetite, and Health on both." Between Chicago and Kansas City and Atchison, are also run the Celebrated Reclining Chair Cars.

THE FAMOUS ALBERT LEA ROUTE

Is the direct and favorite line between Chicago and Minneapolis and St. Paul, where connections are made in Union Depots for all points in the Territories and British Provinces. Over this route Fast Express Trains are run to the watering places, summer resorts, picturesque localities, and hunting and fishing grounds of Iowa and Minnesota. It is also the most desirable route to the rich wheat fields and pastoral lands of interior Dakota.

Still another DIRECT LINE, via Seneca and Kankakee, has been opened between Newport News, Richmond, Cincinnati, Indianapolis and Lafayette, and Council Bluffs, Kansas City, Minneapolis and St. Paul and intermediate points.

For detailed information see Maps and Folders, obtainable, as well as tickets, at all principal Ticket Offices in the United States and Canada; or by addressing

The "PERFECTION," All Porcelain.

WE TAKE pleasure in calling attention of our customers and all interested in sanitary matters to the all porcelain "Perfection," the only square top Hopper, with trap, made.—For perfect cleanliness and simplicity of construction we invite comparison with any Closet ever manufactured, either home or foreign. It combines, with the utmost simplicity, all the points of a strictly first-class water-closet. The square top will make itself apparent to all users, doing away with drip tray, the wash at all times thoroughly scouring all parts, whereas in the drip tray it cannot help but become foul underneath. It has a seal in Trap of 1½ inches, and the soil pipe vent of 2 inches diameter, as will be seen in the above cut, will prevent all syphoning of Trap. The two local seat vents of 1½ inches diameter are intended for right or left vent, as the one not being used to be closed. The large washout in front gives free access to all parts of trap.

AYER'S Hair Vigor cures baldness. Hair Vigor restores youthful freshness and color to faded and gray hair. It attains these results by the stimulation of the hair roots and color glands. It rejuvenates the HAIR and cleanses it. It restores to the HAIR that, either by reason of age or diseases of the scalp, has become dry, harsh and brittle, a pliancy and glossy silken softness of extreme beauty. There is no dye in Ayer's Hair VIGOR and the good it does is by the vitality it imparts to the follicles, and the cleanliness and healthfulness of the condition in which it maintains the scalp.

AYER'S Hair Vigor renews the hair. Hair Vigor is the best cure known for Brashy Hair, Scald Head, Itching Humors, Tetter Sores, Torpid Follicles, and all other diseases of the scalp that cause the falling of the HAIR and its fading. Nothing cleanses the HAIR of the nuisance of dandruff so perfectly, and so effectually prevents its return, as AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. In addition to the curative and restorative virtues peculiar to Ayer's Hair VIGOR it is a toilet luxury. The Hair VIGOR is by far the cleanliest hair-dressing made. It causes the hair to grow thick and long, and keeps it always soft and glossy.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

Contains no deleterious ingredients. Its use prevents all scalp disease, secures against the hair growing thin or gray, and surely cures all baldness that is not organic.

Poetry.

TO-MORROW.

To-morrow and to-morrow,
O fair and far away,
What promises lie when hope is high
Along your shining way.

What promises fulfilled,
What better deeds to do
Than ever yet, are softly set
Beneath your skies of blue.

To morrow and to-morrow,
O sweet and far away,
Still evermore lead on before,
Along your shining way.

Still evermore lift up our eyes
Above what we have won,
To higher needs, and finer deeds
That we have left undone.

HOW IT TASTED.

She was a maid of many charms,
As lovely as the rose;
She held her poodle in her arms
And fondly kissed his nose.

Her lover lying at her feet,
Was envious as could be,
And said, "Oh, give me a kiss as sweet,
As that, my love, to me."

She stooped and kissed him on the lips,
Then sprang he to his feet;
She, blushing to her finger tips,
Inquired, "Well, was it sweet?"

He wiped his mouth, picked up his cane,
And then prepared to jog,
Remarking, "Sweet? well, to be plain,
It kind o' tastes of dog."

THE VILLAGE ORACLE.

Beneath the weather-beaten porch
That shades the village store
He sits at ease, an aged man
Of three-score years or more;
That ample seat for him is placed
Beside the open door.

His face is very keen and shrewd,
And piercing are his eyes,
As with an air of prophecy
He scans the cloudy skies,
And children look with awe on him,
For he is weatherwise.

And jolly farmers riding
On fragrant loads of hay,
Call out: "Good morning, Uncle Dan!"
And "Will it rain to-day?"
While boys who would a-fishing go
Await what he will say.

"Well, of the wind should change about,"
—They listen eagerly,
But he is very slow and calm,
For thus should prophets be—
"Mebbe them clouds will bring us rain.
But I dunno," says he.

And ever as the seasons come,
And as the seasons go,
The oracle is asked the signs
Of wind, or rain, or snow;
But still he never hesitates
To answer: "I dunno."

Miscellaneous Reading

THE "FIERCE" BASSO.

The Useless Terror He Brought Upon a Lady Critic.

When I undertook to write musical criticisms for a daily paper, it was with the firm determination to do entire justice to everybody. I would bestow praise when I considered it due, and not spare the lash where it could be rightly applied.

"We want criticisms, Miss Medland; not indiscriminate flattery or abuse," said the editor to me. "Let your words be well weighed. Do not allow personal preference or dislike to influence your judgment. Write fearlessly, but honestly, and consider a performance from every point of view before committing your opinions to paper. When compelled to be severe, abstain from spitefulness, and remember that votaries of the divine art have tender feelings, which they carry very near the surface. That is all I have to say."

So I attended concerts, musicales, piano and organ recitals and all the various styles of entertainment in which music is introduced, and which, because of some slight difference in arranging the programme, are called by distinct names. Thus, a ballad, a vocal duet, two piano selections, a violin solo and refreshments in a private house is a musicale. The same programme in a hall, with a quartette and an aria from an Italian opera added and the piano solos omitted, is a concert, while an entertainment essentially the same as the first mentioned, but with the name of the pianist in capital letters on the programme, becomes a piano recital.

I soon learned these nice distinctions, and religiously sat through all the entertainments for which I received tickets, giving my impressions of the performance in the paper afterward as fairly as I could.

"Miss Medland," said the editor, one Saturday afternoon, "I should like you to go to church to-morrow."

"I always do."

"Yes, but I wish you to attend the services at the Fourteenth P. E. They have a new choir—a quartette—and I should like to have a detailed criticism of their work in Monday's paper."

"Very well. I will go."

"The basso looks very bass," I thought, as I sat in the church next morning and glanced up at the choir, which was standing up preparatory to singing the first anthem. "What a terrible creature, with his great black beard and eyebrows! I hope he will not compel me to speak slightingly of his singing. I am afraid of him."

But the next minute the anthem commenced, and oh! what a bass. It was nothing but a discordant growl. It was useless for the other three voices to strain at the harmony. The bass persistently sang in the wrong key, with a disregard for time and tune that was absolutely maddening.

I never looked up after that first glance. I felt that I must show my disgust in my countenance, and perhaps meet the eye of the basso as it rolled wildly in its socket in sympathy with his frantic efforts to control his voice. "Perhaps he will not be so bad in the other numbers," I thought.

But he was—and worse. As the service progressed and the choir was at intervals called on to render their assistance, the basso's voice seemed to get huskier and more disagreeable. When I sat down in my room that afternoon to write my criticism, I had no compunction in giving him as severe a lecture as he ever probably received on paper. Of the other three members of the quartette I had nothing but good to say, and I censured the directors of the church allowing the efforts of the three good singers to be rendered useless by an utterly incapable fourth.

I folded my manuscript and sent it to the office of my paper, with a note to the editor, in which I told him that my animadversions on the basso were strictly justified by his wretched performance.

When I read the paper the next day and saw how my hot words looked in cold type, I began to feel uncomfortable. I thought of the fierce man with the black beard and eyebrows, and wondered what I should do if he found me out and demanded satisfaction. I wished that it had been the tenor, instead. He was a handsome young man with a blond moustache, from beneath which I felt sure no unkind words could come—to a lady, even if the lady had given him an unmerciful scolding in the columns of a newspaper. I should not be the least bit afraid of him.

But it was no use wishing. The tenor part had been beautifully rendered, and I had not a shadow of excuse to censure him.

"Mamie," said my younger sister Belle, bursting into the room, where I was thinking over my troubles, "come down stairs, won't you? You have been moping all day. Here it is eight o'clock in the evening, and you are still sitting up here by yourself. You have no writing to do for that tiresome newspaper, I know. I don't see why you do it at all. Literature is well enough in its way, but I think the trouble and annoyance must far outweigh the glory and emolument."

"Never mind, Belle. Go away. My head aches."

"Of course. The old excuse when you feel cross. But do come down, that's a dear. Papa has brought a gentleman home with him, and we want some music. Mr. Wilson sings."

"I am tired of singing."

"No you are not, Mamie. You are disagreeable. I will go and tell papa that you will not come."

"Belle, don't be impertinent. Tell papa I will be down in a few minutes."

Plump came a kiss on the end of my nose, and Belle danced out of the room, re-appearing for a minute to say:

"Oh, by the way, Mamie, Mr. Wilson is a member of the Fourteenth P. E. church choir. You must have heard him sing yesterday."

"Belle!" I screamed.

But Belle was gone, after firing her parting shot.

Now what should I do? If I only knew whether Mr. Wilton were the black-bearded basso or the blond-moustached tenor! I had a good mind not to go downstairs at all. No! I am not afraid to write boldly, and I would be consistent in my actions. At the worst Mr. Wilson would hardly strike me, especially with my father there to protect me. Besides, he might not even know that I wrote for the papers. It was with a beating heart that I put the finishing touches to my toilet and walked slowly down stairs.

The parlor door was shut, but I could hear voices on the other side, among them that of a stranger—Mr. Wilton. I tried to distinguish the tones, that I might determine, if possible, whether they were tenor or bass. This is something that can very seldom be decided, even when the speaker is by your side, the singing voice and colloquial tones being in many persons entirely distinct. I knew this, and with a mighty attempt to be calm, opened the door and stood in the presence of Mr. Wilton!

Thank fortune! It was a gentleman with a blonde moustache whom my father introduced me to by that name, as I bowed to the handsome tenor—as a god. Or so I thought.

I soon found that Mr. Wilton was as brilliant in conversation as he was handsome in person. He had been everywhere and had seen everything and above all was a thorough musician at heart. To my father he talked about stocks, bonds, the labor problem, the political situation and the relative merits of natural gas and bituminous coal as fuel elements in the iron industry. I soon found that he had lately become a member of a prominent iron firm, and that he gave his services to the choir of the Fourteenth P. E. Church from pure love of music.

"Will you not sing, Miss Medland?" asked Mr. Wilson, when he had been chatting for an hour or so."

I felt a little nervous about singing before him, but as I knew I possessed a fairly good soprano, well cultivated, I did not hesitate. I sang two ballads, and then came Mr. Wilton's turn.

"You must sing for us, Mr. Wilton. What shall it be?" I asked, carelessly running my fingers over the keys of the piano. "Have I anything that you know?"

He was hunting over my sheet music and picking out a piece here and there.

"Yes, here are several that I sang before. I will try this if you will play the accompaniment."

He placed before me "I Fear No Foe!"

"Is not this in too low a key for you? I will transpose it, if you like."

"No, I can manage it," was Mr. Wilton's confident reply.

I said nothing, though as I began playing the syphony I wondered how this decidedly bass song would sound when rendered by a tenor voice.

The syphony finished, he commenced. Horrors! The excruciating bass that had spoiled the quartette!

Yes. There was no doubt about it. My handsome "tenor" was the bass, and the sweet voice I had credited to Mr. Wilton was possessed by the fierce man with the black beard and eye-brows!

He got through the song somehow, apparently to his own satisfaction, and I did not ask him to sing again.

He had not read my criticism then, but he saw it the next day, for he has told me so since.

Mr. Wilton does not consider me a good musical critic, but he is satisfied with me in every other way, for it was only last night that he asked me to wear a diamond ring as a sequel to a certain quiet but earnest conversation.

I was introduced to the fierce, black-bearded tenor a week or two ago, and he is one of the mildest men I ever met.

The illustrations of the February Century, the "Midwinter number," are to be of more than usual interest. Among the illustrated articles are a paper on Antoine Louis Barye, the French sculptor, with upwards of twenty engravings; Mr. Cable's first paper on Creole songs and dances, "The Dance in Place Congo," with a number of drawings by Kemble; and Mrs. Van Rensselaer's paper on City Dwellings, in her series on "Recent Architecture in America," with illustrations which include the Somerset Club building in Boston, Mr. W. K. Vanderbilt's and Mr. Tiffany's new houses in New York.

There were in New Jersey during 1885 deaths to the number of 23,807, marriages to the number of 8,[illegible] and births to the number of 24,077. The births show a slight decrease from 1884's record, but the marriages are more numerous. The mortuary list is also somewhat greater, owing to an increase in diphtheria and summer diseases. The New Jersey state board of health will report to the legislature shortly that the hog cholera exists in many portions of the state, and that a scourge of pleuro pneumonia was only prevented by inoculation. The vital statistics for the entire state for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1885, will be given.

REPORTERS AS DETECTIVES.

Not infrequently the reporter has real detective work to do in the legitimate pursuit of news. In this, as in a great many other things, the efficient, experienced and enterprising reporter very often excels. Not only have many crimes been exposed by them, but through their unaided efforts—with the detectives on the wrong scent or after they have hopelessly abandoned all clues—many criminals of high and low degree have been run down and finally sent behind prison bars to "play checkers with their nose."

The possession of a genuine "nose for news," without the possession of which the reporter is not worthy the name, implies certain qualities that are included in the make-up of the successful detective. A good deal of this sort of work is wholly unknown to the public; they get the results, while the methods employed to procure the news is never advertised, except in special cases.

It was a reporter who found ex-mayor A. Oakey Hall in London after he had mysteriously disappeared from New York. Mr. Hall himself was afterwards in charge of the staff of reporters on the New York World, in the position of city editor, and is now back in London again, this time looking up others who mysteriously disappear, together with the general run of news, as correspondent of the New York Herald.

Winslow, the Boston defaulter, was found in South America by a reporter who had known him in the United States. Angell, defaulting and absconding Secretary of the Pullman Palace Car Company, was found through the newspapers. Boss Tweed was identified in Spain through his portrait in Harper's Weekly, and brought back to New York to occupy the cell, or apartment, in Ludlow street jail, which Ferdinand Ward has more recently exchanged for quarters in Sing Sing.

Chastine Cox, the colored murderer, was run to earth and captured through the unaided efforts of Balch, then a reporter on the always wide-awake Boston Herald. Cox was hanged and Balch became for a time managing editor of the Philadelphia Press, on the strength of the reputation his excellent piece of detective work had given him. To-day Mr. Balch holds a comfortable semi-journalistic, semi-literary rank in the Quaker City.

There are plenty of other examples of clever detective work done by reporters, in the interest alike of news and justice, with which newspaper readers are more or less familiar.

What I started out particularly to tell just now, however, was a little personal affair which brought me plenty of excitement, and some experience that was certainly novel and wholly out of the routine of note-book and lead pencil. I enjoyed it then and I must confess that I rather relish it in the retrospect.

A friend of mine who was at the head of one of the largest and best known detective firms in the country used frequently to regale me with the exploits of himself and his men that were vastly more realistic and entertaining than any dime novel that is devoured by adolescent Indian-killers. I had frequently expressed a desire to go along with him sometime when there was to be lively work, in the execution of which my presence would not interfere.

One day—perhaps ten years ago—my detective friend sent for me, and when I called gave me the gratifying information that he was about to make an important seizure out West. If I wanted to go along I could do so, but I would have to go as a detective and take all the risks. Of course I did want to go, risks or no risks, and I went.

For a long time one of the leading railroads in Indiana had been suffering from the depredations of a large, expert and desperate gang of freight thieves. They had been identified at last by a detective who got in with the gang and was working with them. From him a complete description of the members, the extent of their depredations, and their methods of operating had been learned. It only remained now to "gather them in," and that was the part of the job which my friend was going to superintend, in person, assisted by a force of his best men, —and myself.

The method of the robbers was to force open freight car doors while the train was stopping at a lonely water tank, and then, after closing the doors, by the use of dark lanterns select such boxes and packages as promised the most satisfactory plunder, which were thrown out along the track after the train was in motion. Then they would jump off when the train was going up grade, walk back along the track, gather up the spoils of the night and remove them to a safe hiding place. The losses to the railroad company now footed up many thousands of dollars, but the thefts were continued with surprising boldness and regularity.

The programme for the capture of the gang contemplated taking them, or as many of them as possible, after they had entered the cars of a certain train and before it should leave the station. The detective who was working with them had a delicate role to play, for it was necessary for him to arrange it, without appearing to do so, to have as many of the gang at work as possible, and as much divided up as might be. To avert suspicion he must be at work with them and at the same time manage to dodge bullets from friends as well as from those who would have killed him without an instant's hesitation at the first suggestion of treachery on his part. Incidentally it may be mentioned that this same man had been through similar experiences with the Mollie Maguires in Pennsylvania, and could be depended on in any emergency; the last I knew of him he was a prosperous merchant in an Eastern city.

There could not have been a better night than the one selected for the capture if it had been made to order—nor a more disagreeable one. Dark as a pocket, rain pouring in torrents, mud up to our knees.

The force of detectives was divided into two parties, with three men in each. One was commanded by my friend and I was placed in charge of the other. These detectives as well as the railroad officials to whom I had been introduced, supposed me to be an old and experienced detective —and I tried to look as much like one as possible. At the same time I kept up a considerable thinking.

There was to be shooting. Of this there was no doubt. Some of us might get hit, or worse. I never had much fancy for making a target of myself, and I had no ambition to be transformed into an amateur lead mine.

At the same time I had always wondered how I would stand fire when I knew in advance revolvers were to be faced. Now my curiosity was to be gratified.

The more I heard of the gang of robbers the less I relished the idea of an introduction under the circumstance as arranged.

I even had dim but hastily dismissed, suspicions that somebody was a fool for taking such chances voluntarily.

It was too late now to back out, if anybody wanted to, and I was possessed of too much pride to weaken now that I was about to enjoy a sensation which I had always coveted—although my coveting had heretofore been done at a safe distance.

It was in the early morning hours when the freight train came in and stopped opposite where we were concealed. I never before heard so loud, or so diabolical a whistle as that locomotive gave when it was coming. Every detail of our work had been carefully arranged in advance. Now all we had to do was to go ahead and capture those robbers.

As I was crawling along on my hands and knees, followed by my three men, through the mud and slush, on one side of the train, with my friend and his three men doing the same thing on the other side of the train, the capture of those robbers suddenly assumed the proportions of a remarkably large and well-developed contract. I was glad it was dark, that my men could not too closely study the face of their heroic, dare-devil leader!

At last, after seconds that seemed hours, we reached the cars where our prospective prisoners were at work.

Then we made a rush. After that I have a somewhat confused recollection of blazing away after a ball had skipped disagreeably near my ear—then a lot of shots in quick succession—other bullets flying around—of hoarse cries and ugly imprecations—of a burly fellow that was about to brain me and didn't—of four or five prisoners that we had captured amongst us—of one burly prisoner that I had a personal mortgage on, and of the disagreeable consciousness that some of the gang had escaped.

There was a mental exhilaration about it though—after the first shots had been exchanged—that made it rather enjoyable and I began to feel proud, after it was over, that I had been a participant and had got out of it in a way that was not discreditable.

A part of the night after that was spent in guarding the prisoners, in searching a barn for the hidden plunder, and in a mile a minute race on a locomotive that had been placed subject to our orders, to head off the two or three who had escaped and were certain to make for a particular rendezvous of theirs. Suffice it to say that we got them all at last, and in due time they were sent to state prison for terms of varying length, some of them being still engaged in "doing time."

What amused me more than anything, after the capture became known, was the manner in which the reporters wrote up columns of glowing descriptions of the combined cleverness and courage of the detectives, in which glowing accounts, under the name by which I had made my debut—as well as disappearance—as a detective, I, myself a modest newspaper reporter, came in for a full share of glory!

I had often written up the exploits of detectives with graphic realism. Now I knew how it was myself.—American Rural Home.

"Cinnamon, darling."
"But I smell something else."
"O, that's allspice."
"But I'm certain that I smell something that isn't spiced at all."
"That's an apple I ate just before I came in."
"Well," said Mrs. B., "if you'd only swallowed a ham sandwich and a drink of brandy you would have all the ingredients for a mince pie."

FREEHOLDER'S PROCEEDINGS.

OFFICIAL.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Jan. 7, 1886.

Regular monthly meeting of the board, held Thursday, Jan. 7, 1886, at 2 p. m.

Present—Director Martine and Freeholders Astfalk, Belmer, Bauer, Chapman, Doty, Debbie, Dardis, Etheridge, Hobbard, Howard, Halliday, Isenmann, Oliver, Pierson, Roll, Vanderbeek—17.

Absent—None.

The minutes of the last meeting were read (omitting list of bills ordered paid) and, on motion, approved as read.

COMMUNICATIONS.

A communication, signed by residents of Fanwood township, in reference to altering the course of a stream, so that only one bridge will be necessary, instead of two, as at present, was read; also a diagram shown, giving the location of the said stream and bridges.

Freeholder Vanderbeek moved that the communication be received and a committee of three be appointed to take charge of the matter.

Which was carried, and the following committee appointed by the director: Freeholders Vanderbeek, Pierson and Isenmann.

RESOLUTIONS.

EDITORS AND PROPRIETORS.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND.

President Cleveland has already done more to purify the foul atmosphere of politics, and lifted higher the standard of political integrity, than any of his predecessors ever did during the past sixty years.

That is saying much, but not a whit more than the truth.

The salutary effects of President Cleveland's firm determination to conduct public affairs in a practical business like manner, and to make offices sacred trusts for the public benefit, in lieu of places for pilfering personal gain, may be imagined, but cannot be fully estimated.

Time will reveal the glory.

The influences of such a noble official course will be seen and felt through the coming years. It is an edict against that despicable spoils system which, as a partisan element, has grown so defiant and corrupt as to arouse the indignation of independent and right thinking men, irrespective of political name.

The accomplishment of a purpose so grand and patriotic will be to confer upon the present Democratic National Administration brilliant renown, yet greater still will be its lasting benefits upon the country at large.

It is in accord with public sentiment, Public necessity demands it.

The fact cannot be disguised that the people, the rank and file of all parties, by a vast majority, are heartily sick of political duplicity and mal-administration.

They yearn for the day when Governments, of all grades, shall be exclusively for the public good, when honor and integrity shall control official duties as rigidly as private interests.

To secure a boon so priceless, men of undoubted ability and character must fill the offices, both elective and by appointment, and spoils seekers be ordered to the rear.

It is high time that Honesty should rule America.

The hero of the cause is Grover Cleveland.

The National bank notes received for redemption to-day amount to $581,000.

BEGINNING THEIR WORK.

The State Legislature got fairly started in their work for the session last Monday evening. A list of the Committees appointed by the Senate and House will be found in another column. In their distribution Senator Livingston, of Union county, was honored by appointment on Banks and Insurance, Fisheries, and Labor and Industries. In the House Committees, Mr. Vetterlein, of Somerset, is on Elections, Incidental Expenses, and Soldiers' Home. A large number of bills have already been introduced in both branches of the Legislature.

The Presidential Succession bill has passed Congress.

City Treasurer A. G. Ogilby, of New Brunswick, has resigned his position.

Congressman McAdoo, of New Jersey, has introduced a bill for the relief of the survivors of the exploring steamer, Jeannette.

Asbury Park Skating Rink is to be converted into a theatre. As a rink it utterly failed—not even knee breeches being able to save it.

Assemblyman Vetterlein, of Somerset, has introduced a bill before the State Legislature to allow the Mayor and Council in boroughs to appoint a justice to try violations of local ordinances.

In the State Senate last Monday evening Senator Livingston, of Union county, presented a petition from the Common Council of Elizabeth, asking the State to appropriate $1,780,000, being the amount they claim to have lost by reason of the State Courts deciding against them in the cases of Hand and Bogert v. The City of Elizabeth. It was referred to Municipal Corporations.

Miss Kate Bayard, eldest daughter of Secretary Bayard, died suddenly at the residence of her father, in Washington, on Saturday last. Miss Bayard assisted her father at a reception and party at their residence Friday night. At that time she was in her usual good spirits. When the party broke up about 1 a. m., she retired to her room, which adjoins that of her younger sister. She left instructions with the servants not to be disturbed. The doors between the two rooms were open. About 1.30 Saturday afternoon, Miss Bayard not having appeared, her sister went to her room to awake her that she might have time to prepare her toilet to assist at Miss Cleveland's reception. The sister was struck with the vacant expression on the face of Miss Katherine, and her call not being heeded, she shook her; but still no signs of life appeared. The alarm was at once given, and messengers were dispatched for the family physician. Dr. Gardner at once responded and made a cursory examination. All indications pointed to death, but thinking she might be simply in a state of collapse the doctor hurried to his office and soon returned accompanied by Dr. Pope with an electric battery. This was applied, but was of no avail. An examination was made, which revealed the fact that the body was still warm, probably arising from the fact that the room was quite warm and the covering heavy. Miss Bayard was reclining on her left side, with her head resting on her left hand. There was a peaceful, calm expression upon the lady's face. Dr. Gardner gave as a certificate of death "heart failure." Dr. Gardner has for the past year been treating Miss Bayard for heart disease. Miss Bayard was in her 27th year.

THE WAR BEGUN.

In the State Legislature last Monday evening, the preliminary skirmish of the anticipated railroad fight regarding the bridging of Staten Island Sound, came off by the presentation of the following resolutions by Mr. Parker, of Essex county:

Resolved, The Senate concurring, that the petition sent at the last session to the Congress of the United States of America be respectfully renewed, that they will not pass any bill authorizing the construction of railway draw bridges across Staten Island Sound. Such bridge or bridges would injure the navigation of the Sound and many miles of New Jersey water front thereon. The New Jersey shore of the Hudson river and of Staten Island Sound is the natural terminus of railroads from the West, affording ample room and opportunity for terminal yards, depots whereon coal and grain shipments, and direct communication between railroads and ships. Several steamer lines have moved to docks on our shores for the purpose. Immense sums of money have been expended on our shores, including large depots and docks for coal and iron on the sound. To establish such a bridge if it becomes a success is to render the sound and New Jersey shores thereon useless for their natural terminal purposes, with the intent to transfer these terminal improvements to the eastern shores of Staten Island. That such transfers will be the result may be doubted, but that the sound will be injured if not destroyed for the use of large vessels is certain.

The natural and original boundary of New Jersey is the Hudson river and New York bay, including the sound with all rights of terminus thereon and navigation therein. Her boundary thereon, and to the middle thereof was settled by convention between the States, confirmed by acts of Congress of the United States. Staten Island became the property of New York on the ground that it was not the west shore of the Hudson, but an island therein. To convert it by a long bridge into main land, and thus to impair the navigation of the sound and its use for terminal purposes is a breach of the condition upon which that boundary was settled.

Resolved, That this memorial be transmitted under the signatures of the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House in duplicate to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States.

Mr. Parker advocated the adoption of the resolution saying that the matter had already been settled by the vote of the Legislature in accordance with the wishes of New Jersey.

Mr. Corbin moved it be referred to the Committee on Riparian Rights, as he had no doubt members would like to have something to say on the subject and time was needed for preparation.

Mr. Parker objected to delay, and Mr. Harrigan hoped the motion to refer would prevail.

Messrs. Hughes, Hudspeth and Beckwith supported the motion, and it was carried by a vote of 35 to 20, as follows:

Ayes—Messrs. Arnwine, Baird, Beckwith, Besson, Bolton, Chamberlain, Corbin, Dayton, Drake, Gourley, Harrigan, Heyer, Hildreth, Hudspeth, Hughes, Kinney, Lawrence, Lennon, Low, Martin (John), Noonan, Ossenberg, Peal, Pearson, Peloubet, Pintard, Roe, Scheele, Seymour, Smith, Titus, Tumulty, Vandenberg, Whittaker, Wolverton—35.

Nays—Messrs. Alcott, Armstrong, Banks, Condit, Doremus, Gangewer, Hutchinson, Jewett, Martin (A. F. R.), McDonald, Norwood, Parker, Potter, Schriehoffer, Taylor, TenBroeck, Throckmorton, Underhill, Vetterlein, Wills—20.

The New York Star thus shows that a so-called "liberal education" is not necessary to success in the world.

The President of the United States never attended college. The President pro tem. of the Senate received a common school education in Ohio. The Secretary of State is an alumnus of a small Long Island academy. The Secretary of the Treasury was graduated from a printing office. The Speaker of the House of Representatives is a self-educated man. Of the seventy-four members of the U. S. Senate only thirty are graduates of any college, and of these only twelve took degrees at institutions of national reputation. The House is full of village Hampdens whose educational advantages were of the scantiest.

SOME years ago the Delaware Rolling Mill at Phillipsburg, was sold under the hammer at a great sacrifice. Since then it has been closed. It is now said that the mill is to be overhauled, new machinery put in, and the works started up by March. The mill cost $250,000 and employed 200 men.

SCOTCH PLAINS SCRATCHINGS.

Mr. C. Brown, the genial ticket agent at Fanwood, has embarked in the lucrative business of running a hack. He will also serve the citizens of this place with the Sunday papers.

Theodore Wyckoff, a smoked yankee familiarly known as "Cedar Owl" drove his wife Clara out of the domestic circle, because she did not appreciate the love he had for a daughter of hers by a former husband. There is strong talk of using a bucket of hot tar on his black knot.

The humorous recitals and instructive sketches given by the popular humorist, J. S. Burdett, at Excelsior Hall, on Tuesday evening, was attentively listened to by a highly respectable and appreciative audience. The speaker left a very favorable impression on all in attendance. The house was moderately filled.

If there ever was the least infinitesimal shadow of a doubt in regard to the ability of "Willie" as being a salesman, that doubt now is entirely dispelled, for he has sold the governor's anti-deluvian canal-boat sled, made in the days of Tib and Tilliky, and realized spondulix sufficient on the sale to purchase himself a new style surrey-bodied Portland cutter. Vast is the triumphant smile that hovers on his phiz, as he glides over the "beautiful snow."

WESTFIELD WISPS.

Samuel Godshalk spent the past week with his relatives at Bethlehem, Pa.

Charles A. Kimball, who has been seriously ill for some time past, is still confined to his bed.

The V. S. C. organization will give their third sociable of the season at Arcanum Hall, on Monday evening, Jan. 25.

Ground has been broken on North avenue for two new dwelling houses for Mr. Charles Weeks and his son-in-law, Chas. Hann.

The new residence of Mr. Echman on Clark street is rapidly approaching completion. Kaylor & Moffett are the contractors.

Now let the candidates come to the front. Annual election for chief and assistants of our Fire Department will be held on the 9th of February.

The Old Folks will hold their sociable on Thursday evening, Feb. 2, at Arcanum Hall. Music by Messina. Those having the sociable in charge hope to make it one of the best of the season.

Courtney can do a Lancashire clog on roller skates. He being about six feet in height makes some very graceful movements when he is on the floor. He is already engaged in a New York rink, and expects to go to Chicago by Feb. 7.

Henry Dougherty, our village blacksmith, was quite seriously injured on Monday last. He was engaged in shoeing a vicious horse of Albert A. Drake, Esq., and was thrown against another horse in the shop, and received a severe kick, fracturing two of his ribs. He is around but not able to do much.

Mrs. Eliza Martin, (wife of Luther Martin) and daughter, left last week on a visit to Knoxville, Tenn. Mrs. Martin's father moved from Washington Valley about twenty-six years ago, and located near Knoxville, and owns a fine farm within a few miles of that town. Mrs. Martin has not seen her father since his removal. He is aged eighty-six years. It will no doubt be a happy meeting.

"Charlie" is about organizing a variety troupe to put on the road soon if they will walk. It is to be a blood and thunder drama entitled, "The Bloody Gulch; or, Shinglefoot's Vengeance." The leading lady is Mrs. Shinglefoot and gentleman Ginger Blue, the Egyptian Mummy. Fred, prompter, who has taken a very active part in the management. They expect to make money out of the combination.

The death of John Battelle occurred on Sunday morning at the residence of his brother-in-law, Thomas J. England, on Mountain avenue, after a very lingering illness of consumption. The funeral took place on Tuesday. Interment at Irvington, N. J.

Those in arrears for taxes for the year last past should call on Collector Pierson and settle the same, as the Collector is bound by law to return all taxes on real estate remaining unpaid, on the first day of February next to the County Clerk to be recorded as a lien against the real estate of the taxpayer. Mr. Pierson can be seen nearly every evening on Broad street, at L. M. Whitaker's store. Westfield was the first township to pay State and county taxes. If all those interested will make an effort to settle their unpaid taxes before the first, there will be but a small number to return.

A young Swedish woman, named Hilda M. Peterson, who has lived in our town off and on for several years past, but not staying over a month in any one place, appeared before Justice Jaques, in company with her friend Adam Miller, and made a complaint against one of our young men who drives a hack for his father, for an indecent assault. The young woman alleged that on Sunday afternoon she engaged John J. Urmston, the hack driver, to take her to a friend of hers at West End; and she says instead of driving the horse and buggy to West End he drove past the place, and while going through a small piece of woods made an assault upon her. Upon the complaint Justice Jaques issued a warrant, and placed it in the hands of Officer Koester to serve. While the complainant was at the Squire's office, a friend of Urmston told him of it. He immediately got into a wagon and was driven to Millburn, N. J. Koester secured a horse and buggy of liveryman Burtle and followed in pursuit. He, however, arrived a few minutes too late, and found that the young man had taken the train for New York. Koester immediately telegraphed ahead to have him intercepted, but without avail. The feeling of a large number of our residents seem to be in favor of the young man, and there are a number of very bad rumors regarding the character of the young woman. One fact that seems strange about the whole affair is if as the young woman alleges, the assault occurred on Sunday afternoon, why did she wait until the next day at 10 a. m. to make the complaint. She was stopping within a quarter of a mile of our Justice. The young man no doubt did a very foolish thing in running away.

Corporation Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the following ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time, and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading; and it is the intention of the Council to adopt the same.
RICHARD MERRITT, City Clerk.
Plainfield, N. J., January 11th, 1886.

AN ORDINANCE

Restricting the erection of awnings and poles and the stringing of wires in the streets, sidewalks and public places.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield by their Common Council do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. That no person or corporation shall hereafter erect or cause to be erected any awning in or over any street or sidewalk in the City of Plainfield without first obtaining permission therefor from the Common Council.

SECTION 2. That no person or corporation shall erect or cause to be erected any pole in or upon any street, sidewalk or public place in the City of Plainfield without first obtaining permission therefor from the Common Council.

SECTION 3. That no person or corporation shall string or cause to be strung any wire or wires on any tree, pole or post standing in any street, sidewalk or public place, nor string or cause to be strung any wire or wires along, over or across any street, sidewalk or public place within the City of Plainfield without first obtaining permission therefor from the Common Council.

SECTION 4. Every person convicted of violating either of the preceding sections of this ordinance shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, or imprisonment not exceeding sixty days in the City or County Jail or by both such fine and imprisonment.

SECTION 5. That all ordinances and resolutions and parts of ordinances and resolutions inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

An Efficient Remedy

In all cases of Bronchial and Pulmonary Affections is AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. As such it is recognized and prescribed by the medical profession, and in many thousands of families, for the past forty years, it has been regarded as an invaluable household remedy. It is a preparation that only requires to be taken in very small quantities, and a few doses of it administered in the early stages of a cold or cough will effect a speedy cure, and may, very possibly, save life. There is no doubt whatever that

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

Has preserved the lives of great numbers of persons, by arresting the development of Laryngitis, Bronchitis, Pneumonia, and Pulmonary Consumption, and by the cure of those dangerous maladies. It should be kept ready for use in every family where there are children, as it is a medicine far superior to all others in the treatment of Croup, the alleviation of Whooping Cough, and the cure of Colds and Influenza, ailments peculiarly incidental to childhood and youth. Promptitude in dealing with all diseases of this class is of the utmost importance. The loss of a single day may, in many cases, entail fatal consequences. Do not waste precious time in experimenting with medicines of doubtful efficacy, while the malady is constantly gaining a deeper hold, but take at once the speediest and most certain to cure,

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

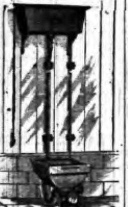
The "PERFECTION," All Porcelain.



WE TAKE pleasure in calling attention of our customers and all interested in sanitary matters to the all porcelain "Perfection," the only square top Hopper, with trap, made. For perfect cleanliness and simplicity of construction we invite comparison with any Cistern Closet ever manufactured, either home or foreign. It combines, with the utmost simplicity, all the points of a strictly first class water closet. The square top will make itself apparent to all users, in doing away with drip tray, the wash at all times thoroughly scouring all parts, whereas in the drip tray it cannot help but become foul underneath. It has a seal in Trap of 1⅜ inches, and the soil pipe vent of 2 inches diameter, as will be seen in the above cut, will prevent all syphoning of Trap. The two local or seat vents of 1½ inches diameter are intended for right or left ventilation, the one not being used to be closed. The large handhole in front gives free access to all parts of trap.

Nos. 7 and 9 Somerset street.

THE fine sleighing has departed.

No mad dogs in Plainfield as yet.

IF a boy could smell himself as others smell him he would not smoke cigarettes.

THE Young People's Association of the Crescent avenue church, will have a sociable this evening.

THE colored fires to be used during the Drill of the Demons at The Crescent, Monday evening next, are being prepared by Mr. W. R. M. Mattox, the stage manager of Music Hall.

AMONG the bills already introduced in the Legislature is one to guard against hydrophobia. It requires the licensing of all dogs which must also wear a collar, bearing the owner's name.

A PETITION is circulating requesting the P. & R. Railroad to arrange for a train leaving the Jersey City ferry at 5.15 p. m. and reaching Plainfield at 6 o'clock, stopping only at Elizabeth.

THE ushers for the Tournament of the Plainfield Bicycle club, next Monday evening, have been selected from the "flower of the flock" of this city. They will be under the direction of Mr. Wm. Craig.

A LARGE number of invited (and other) friends of the contracting parties, were present at the marriage ceremony that bound together Miss Anna Bales and Mr. Abraham Hooley, Thursday evening of last week.

THE team and sleigh of Mr. A. Walter Haviland of North Plainfield, ran away, Wednesday, threw out its occupants and very generally wrecked itself before turning into the yard of Charles Matthews, Esq., on Grove street.

A "LOCAL OPTION" law that, if approved by the people, will apply to this city, has been presented before the present legislature of the State of New Jersey. It is "fathered" by the Rev. W. E. Honeyman of North Plainfield.

THE Borough of North Plainfield is to have a shoe store at last. Mr. Wheeler, formerly in the same line of business this side of the brook, will open such an establishment on Somerset street, opposite Emily, about February 1st.

ISAAC MELBOURNE, the well-known building contractor of this city, has received a contract to build a large brick hotel at Huntsville, Alabama. In company with his wife, Mr. Melbourne started for the above place last Tuesday.

PROF. DOREMUS' lecture of Tuesday evening in Music Hall, was as instructive a discourse as was ever listened to in this city. A number of wonderful and pleasing experiments illustrated the subject in a manner to make it entirely clear to all.

BARKALEW & DUNN is the name of a new firm who will open a family grocery store in McIntyre's new brick building on North avenue, shortly. Both members of the new firm are well-known to our Plainfield public, and will no doubt receive the just share of patronage they deserve.

THE adjourned term of the Somerset County Court will begin next Tuesday, and the jurors will attend for the trial of the remaining indictments and the appeals. His Honor Judge Bartine will preside, having happily recovered from his recent indisposition. There will not be a long session.

MR. POND's play of "Her Atonement" with a portion of the original company, was given at Music Hall, last Saturday evening, to a medium sized house. Some of the cast was efficient and parts of the performance were satisfactory, but, as a whole, better plays have been better rendered at our Opera House.

A TYPOGRAPHICAL error in last week's report of North Plainfield Borough proceedings, published in THE CONSTITUTIONALIST, made it appear that our honest friend, John Whitlock, had been awarded the sum of $450 for doing certain work in that municipality, when it should have read Four Dollars and Fifty Cents, "By Harry."

WE can assure the members of Zep by H. & L. Co. and Alert's gallant fire laddies, that the telephones will be put back in their respective houses through the courtesy of all concerned. Messrs. Sargent and McCulley, the Superintendent and Asst. Superintendent of the Telephone Co., were at all times ready to listen to an expression of what the authorities of the city considered just, and to act favorably upon it if no dictation entered into the matter.

THE Grand Jury of Union county were discharged on Tuesday last after bringing in twenty-seven bills of indictment and the following presentment:

Union County, ss.

The Grand Inquest of the County of Union, present, that their attention has been called to the fact that instances have occurred in this city of the Board of Excise of the City of Elizabeth having granted licenses to applicants for the same who have signers, who for the time being have been made freeholders, apparently for the purpose of signing licenses, and after the applications for the licenses have been and before the granting of the same have almost immediately reconveyed to the original grantor the property has been the second time conveyed. Respectable men in this community have made conveyances of this kind, and have perpetrated a fraud on the Board of Excise of this city. This Grand Inquest condemns this manner of proceeding, and considers that it is not only an imposition on the community, but also on the Board of Excise, and regards it as the duty of the said Board to refuse any applications for licenses when the above facts exist, and revoke any licenses where their attention is called to this manner of proceeding.

WM. McKINLAY, Foreman.

"THE Great Republic;" allegory and tableaux; something new for Plainfield. We learn with pleasure that arrangements are perfected with Prof. J. M. Hager for producing his grand historical drama in Plainfield in about two weeks.

The Grand Lodge.

The Grand Lodge of Masons of New Jersey will meet in annual communication Wednesday and Thursday, January 27th and 28th. Many matters of importance to the craft are to come before the body for consideration. As this will be the first communication held in the new Masonic Temple, a large attendance is anticipated.

No Vocal Rehearsal Probable.

By reason of the fact that almost the entire membership of the Plainfield Vocal Society had requested the postponement of the regular rehearsal next Monday evening, on account of the bicycle tournament, an effort was made by the officers to so arrange, but it was impossible for Mr. Fitzhugh to be present during any other evening of the week. President Howland of the Society expressed his regret, but at the same time urged upon the members the importance of being present at the rehearsal. But, just the same, no one can stay away from The Crescent, Monday evening next.

Premature Prophets.

The ice men were very busy three or four days last week filling their houses. The sudden cold snap quickly made seven or eight inch ice on all the streams hereabouts, and no time was lost in gathering from the bountiful supply. The prophecies of those who presaged an open winter with no ice worth cutting seem to have been somewhat premature.

Make An Example.

That portion of law abiding citizens that cleans off its sidewalks, is "tired" of hearing that "the police are going to arrest all who do not conform to the law regarding this offence." Make an example of one or two, and the reform is accomplished; but don't drop on some poor man for the example. Arrest some of the "bloated aristocracy" that have money enough to do better.

Postponement of Modjeska's Date.

Mme. Modjeska's two physicians advised her not to travel next week and accordingly she will remain in New York for the present. The management of Music Hall would not release her, however, until another date was secured on better terms. The date fixed was April 29th. It is probable that Wallack's Company will take the cancelled date—Jan. 28th—and give "Diplomacy."

The Births Exceed the Deaths.

According to the report of the State Board of Health, there were in New Jersey during 1885 deaths to the number of 23,807, marriages to the number of 8,989 and births to the number of 25,077. The births show a slight decrease from 1884's record, but the marriages are more numerous. The mortuary list is also somewhat greater, owing to an increase in diphtheria and Summer diseases.

The City Hotel's First Hop.

A Surprise sociable was held at the City Hotel Thursday evening of last week, under arrangements perfected by Messrs. E. M. Adams and Harry Whitlock and a most enjoyable time resulted. The new proprietors of the hotel were both willing and generous in according the comforts and conveniences of the house to the use of the young people, and satisfaction was consequently the experience of all concerned.

Cool Nights in Dakota.

The Mandan Pioneer, published way out in Dakota, where the thermometer is 45 degrees below, speaks in this manner of its cool nights: "There is one good thing about this Dakota climate—it does not matter how hot it is during the day, it is always cool at night. There has not been a night during the past week, when at least one blanket was not needed to make the sleeper really comfortable, especially if the window was left open."

Neglected Too Long.

Sunday was a pleasant day that called forth a large attendance at the churches, but the same sun that brought out pretty bonnets and gay clothes melted the greasy ice and snow on the railroad bridges and trickled it down the silk circulars and hat-strings of those that were compelled to pass beneath. The condition of affairs at the crossings has been allowed to exist too long, and it is hoped that the new Street Committee of the Council will not be so neglectful. The lumber to remedy it, however, arrived last Tuesday.

Reviving the Marriage Law.

Although marriage is said to be a wise state and one in which men are more likely to be happy than out of it, yet our marriage laws are defective because they afford facilities for foolish marriage by boys and girls who have not learned the first duties of life. This subject will be brought before the next Legislature, and it is to be hoped that something will be done to throw proper safeguards about the marriage laws. Such a thing as a runaway marriage by mere children ought to be the impossibility which it is not.

During Its Pastor's Absence.

The Rev. K. P. Ketcham of the First Presbyterian church left on Tuesday for a trip to Savannah, and an absence of about three weeks. During that time an effort will be made to fill his place as completely as possible. Dr. Vincent will occupy the vacant pulpit next Sunday, to be followed on the following Sunday by the Rev. Mr. Love of Poughkeepsie, who is a new comer to this city. It is probable that the Rev. A. V. V. Raymond may preach for Dr. Ketcham during the third and last Sunday of his vacation.

A Special Meeting.

The Council met in special meeting, last Saturday evening, for the purpose of receiving such applications for license to sell liquor, as had not been presented but which would expire before the Council's next regular meeting. Messrs. Casper, Rafferty, Sullivan and Bock handed in their petitions which were referred excepting that of the latter. Mr. Bock's application was signed by the required number of freeholders, etc., in the proper manner, but it was not signed by Mr. Bock himself. It was consequently returned for correction.

A Great Fanciers' Show.

The Annual Exhibition of the New York Fanciers' Club which takes place at Madison Square Garden, N. Y. City, Feb. 3rd to 10th inclusive, is the 4th of a series of successful exhibitions held under the auspices of the club. Added to thousands of attractions, on the last three days of the Exhibition there will be a large and fine display of thoroughbred dogs of all varieties, which to many, prove more of an attraction than either fowls, pigeons, chicks, or incubators. As a whole it will be well worth a trip to the city, to see this great exhibition, Feb. 3rd to 10th.

Misrepresentation Claimed.

The case of the foreclosure of the mortgage on the Casino rink still drags its way through the lower court, although seemingly but the beginning of a long litigation that will carry the matter to the highest. Mr. Millard Jones, after erecting the building and netting during his first season the original cost, sold it to Messrs. Dennis & Wogiom for $10,000. The purchasers paid $5,000 in cash and gave a mortgage for the balance. One payment has been made on this but Messrs. Dennis & Wogiom refuse to make another, claiming a misrepresentation of facts. Hence the suit.

I. O. O. F.

A public Installation of officers of Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, I. O. O. F. was held in Reform Hall, Wednesday evening. The programme was most entertaining and impressive, including singing by the members of the Lodge, a prayer by the chaplain, an address by P. G. M. Wm. H. Izard, vocal solos by Mr. B. T. Barnes of this city and Messrs Harvey Ellis and W. W. Covell. There was also a piano solo by Mrs Harvey Ellis. Among the visitors were Bros. Henry M. Jewett, of Winslow, Camden county, N. J., and Dr. Wm. H. Izard, of Camden, N. J. Mr. Jewett represents the Republican majority of Camden county from the Third district in the House of the State Legislature. Dr. Izard, besides having the honor of being a P. G. M., is also an ex-member of the House of Assembly. It is a great pity that such good "fellows" as the above mentioned, should adhere to Republican doctrines, but then we suppose that some good fellows must naturally be led astray politically.

Owe For It.

The Crescent avenue Presbyterians have $4,000 towards the purchase of a new organ, which is the only thing that congregation now stands in need of excepting more pews to rent. With so much to start with the organ should be ordered at once, and the balance will undoubtedly be raised before the completion of the instrument. There are enough, and to spare, of rich men in the church to make up any deficiency that might arise—but such need is improbable.

Montclair Against Plainfield Again.

Neither the Montclair or the Plainfield foot-ball teams was satisfied with the result of the tie game that was recently played, so another match has been arranged for to-morrow evening at The Crescent. The home team expect to have its full number of regular players on deck, so there is every possibility of a victory for "us." May the best team win. During the evening, Master Frank and Gracie Holden will give an exhibition of trick and fancy skating. The prices will remain as usual.

Children's Day At The Crescent.

As the older folk have been enjoying all the carnivals at The Crescent, the management think that the young people deserve something of the kind, and so propose to give the children a bon-bon party, to-morrow afternoon. German mottoes will be distributed among all who attend, and the fancy caps and other articles they contain when worn by the little skaters, will have a most charming effect. During the session, Master Frank Holden, who is unequalled for his age, and Little Gracie, have been engaged to give an exhibition. They will also appear again the same evening.

Anderson—Ketcham.

At the Crescent avenue church, next Thursday evening at six o'clock, the marriage of Miss Fanny Ketcham and Mr. Robert W. Anderson will be performed, for which a large number of invitations have been issued. Miss Ketcham is a very talented artist and pianist, and Mr. Anderson is one of the rising dentists of the city. Both are extremely popular and possessed of scores of friends and admirers. The prospective bride is a niece of the pastor of the First Presbyterian church, whose absence from the city, however, prevents his assisting in the ceremony as intended.

Restored To $3,700.

The sum allowed by the government for clerical help at the post-office in this city before Mr. Wiley was appointed postmaster, was $3,700. Postmaster Harris, prior to his retirement, wrote to the post-office authorities at Washington recommending that this sum be reduced to $3,416, to take effect April 1, 1885.

The recommendation was adopted and the allowance reduced accordingly. Mr. Wiley took charge on the 11th of April, 1885. He has since then tried to have it increased to the former figures, and the other day he received notice that the request had been complied with. Thus the sum has been restored to the $3,700, taking effect Jan. 1, 1886.—Elizabeth Herald.

A Bonanza in Clay.

The annual meeting of the Fire Proof Building Company of New Jersey, was held last Monday, and resulted in the election of President Holcombe of Central avenue, and Secretary John Jackson also of this city. This Company have an undoubted "Bonanza." The clay is very fine and close to the surface, and the supply seems inexhaustible. By the railroad that has been built to the water's edge, brick can be shipped weeks before it can from other points. A thousand tons of salt hay is cut each season from the land possessed by the Company. Clay that can be landed on the dock for 50 cents is worth at least six dollars, while the hay itself is worth about ten dollars a ton.

Local Option.

The local option law which will be presented to the Legislature by the Rev. W. E. Honeyman, of North Plainfield, provides for a special election if one-tenth of the legal voters of any county petition the Judge of the Circuit Court to order one, the ballots to read "Against the sale of intoxicating liquors," and "For the sale of intoxicating liquors." If a majority of the votes cast are against the sale of intoxicating liquors, it shall be unlawful after thirty days for any person to sell any liquors, etc. Druggists are excepted, and licenses granted before the election are to hold good until the expiration of the same. The penalty for the violation of the law will be a fine of $200 or imprisonment for six months, one or both, with cost of suit, and for each additional offense the fine to be $500 or imprisonment in the State Prison for a term not exceeding one year, with a cost of suit. But one election for the purpose can be held in two years, whatever the result, and then only upon the presentation of a new petition as aforesaid.

A "Grand Bicycle Show."

The L. A. W. Bulletin, of Philadelphia, says—"There will be given, under the auspices of the 'Plainfield Bicycle Club,' of Plainfield, N. J., on Monday evening, January 25th, a bicycle tournament at the new and handsome 'Crescent Rink' in that city. Messrs. Cooley, Burr, and Crane, of the Plainfield Club, are managing the entertainment, and have secured some of the best talent in the country. There will be exhibitions by the drill squad of the Kings county, as well as the Hudson County Wheelmen, and Dr. Johnson, of the last named club, will appear in his popular act, known as 'Paddy's Experience in Having to Ride the Bicycle.' Single and double Star and crank fancy riding, as well as some special features, will be introduced, and a programme consisting of two parts, consuming one hour or more each, will be rendered. Mr. Clark W. Evans, the owner of 'The Crescent,' as well as the business manager, Mr. J. A. Demarest, are both members of the Plainfield Club, and are doing all in their power to make this, Plainfield's first bicycle tournament, a grand success."

Personalia.

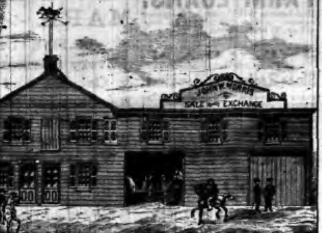
Mr. and Mrs. Secretary Willis and daughter, of the Y. M. C. A. have been receiving the congratulations of their many friends during the past week.

Mr. Isaac Colthar, the bridge builder, of North Plainfield, has just returned from a visit to his brother, Peter Colthar, of Chester county, Pa. He states that the late grand jury, of Chester county, of which his brother was a member, found over thirty indictments for illegal liquor selling.

Those whose costumes took the prizes at the Carnival at The Crescent, Wednesday evening, were: Miss Emma Hobby, the handsomest costume of the present time; Mr. John Force, the best costume of old times; Mr George Leland, the funniest costume of hard times, and Mr. Willie Miller, the most original costume of any time. The gifts consisted of skates, skate bags and commutation tickets.

It was a cold day in Mandan, Dakota, Thursday of last week, but the Directors of the First National Bank of that place declared the usual half-yearly dividend of five per cent and elected Mr. O. T. Roberts, formerly of this city, assistant cashier. Mr. Roberts left Plainfield in the spring of 1883. He was at that time in the office of Breese & Smith, of New York, where he secured his early business education, and where he had exceptional facilities for acquiring for himself a practical knowledge of the banking business, and of handling securities. The First National Bank of Mandan is one of the pioneer banks of the great Northwest and is known in the East as one of the substantial institutions of that section.

JOHN W. MORRIS,



PEACE STREET, BETWEEN ALBANY AND WASHINGTON STREETS,
New Brunswick, New Jersey.

MAN'S BEST FRIEND.

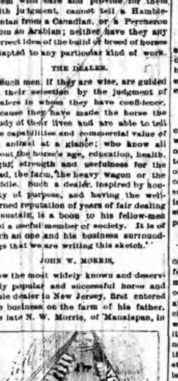
It is a truthful saying, that of all the animals which a beneficent Providence has assigned to the use, comfort and sustenance of man, the horse is his best friend. It is therefore natural that man should take a pride and pleasure in the ownership of the noble brute whose strength and endurance, faithfulness and intelligence add so much to his comfort and contribute so largely to his prosperity. There is no pursuit in life in the success of which, directly or indirectly, the horse is not an important factor. It is therefore important that a sound judgment and ripe experience should enter into his selection. There are thousands of men who own and use horses for business or pleasure who, though they handle them with care and provide for them with judgment, cannot tell a Hambletonian from a Canadian, or a Percheron from an Arabian; neither have they any correct idea of the build or breed of horses adapted to any particular kind of work.

THE DEALER.

Such men, if they are wise, are guided in their selection by the judgment of dealers in whom they have confidence, because they have made the horse the study of their lives and are able to tell the capabilities and commercial value of an animal at a glance; who know all about the horse's age, education, health, sight, strength and usefulness for the road, the farm, the heavy wagon or the saddle. Such a dealer, inspired by honesty of purpose, and having the well-earned reputation of years of fair dealing to sustain, is a boon to his fellow-men and a useful member of society. It is of such an one and his business surroundings that we are writing this sketch.

JOHN W. MORRIS,

Now the most widely known and deservedly popular and successful horse and mule dealer in New Jersey, first entered the business on the farm of his father, the late N. W. Morris, of Manalapan, in



FIRST STABLE.

Monmouth county, who always kept in stock on the old Morris homestead from 300 to 500 horses and mules suited to any demand, and who was very widely known as one of the most reliable dealers in the country. Here young Morris grew up in an atmosphere of strict probity as to dealings and thorough knowledge of the business, to follow in the footsteps of his father and to extend the knowledge and business thus taken up as a life-work.

STARTS IN NEW BRUNSWICK.

In 1865 John W. Morris started in business as a dealer in horses and mules in New Brunswick, and opened his sale and exchange stables at their present location

ON PEACE STREET,

Between Albany and Washington, where his main range of stables now occupies a lot about 80 by 170 feet.

THE STABLES.

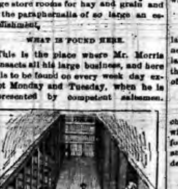
Alongside the main stable is another large brick structure containing 30 stalls, and in the lower part of the city he has yet another stable, at the corner of Burnet and Bishop streets, capable of accommodating 75 head of horses.

THE MAIN BUILDING

On Peace street has four stables with every modern improvement that a ripe experience can suggest for housing horses and mules, with comfort, convenience and economy. The stalls are all plank floored with stone paved passages, while the mangers are arranged upon the best possible plan for convenient feeding and watering, every stall being exactly alike. In the main building there are twenty-five stalls in the first stable. In the second stable there are ten open and five box stalls. In the third stable there are six box stalls, 10 by 12 feet each, and built in accordance with the most approved plans. In the fourth stable there are sixteen open stalls. Beside these there is in the main building a box stall 13 by 24 feet which is occupied by the promising trotting mare Etra, recently purchased by Mr. Morris, also a special box stall for the family horses. The front part of the building is occupied on the left by Mr. Morris's private office and the waiting room of the employees, and on the right by a large room containing Mr. Morris's private carriages and the vehicles for trying horses. Overhead are large store rooms for hay and grain and all the paraphernalia of so large an establishment.

WHAT IS FOUND HERE.

This is the place where Mr. Morris transacts all his large business, and here he is to be found on every week day except Monday and Tuesday, when he is represented by competent salesmen.



SECOND STABLE.

From here he will furnish any kind of horse or mule that may be desired for any purpose in life. From here he will furnish a fast trotter, a fancy pair for the carriage, matched draught horses, ladies' or gentlemen's saddle horses, boys' ponies, ponderous farm horses, or any kind of mule wished for. Through these doors pass indiscriminately, Morgan horses from down East, Hambletonians from New York State, Kentuckians from the Blue Grass region, heavy draught horses from Pennsylvania, mixed breeds from the West, Percherons from fair Languedoc, and bucking bronchos from the Western plains. Mr. Morris will fit you out with horses for a farm, a street railroad or a circus with equal facility and with thorough integrity. Although he has many and excellent salesmen at this stable, he is always found at home, except on the days mentioned, to give the buyer the advantage of his ripe knowledge, the result of long years of active experience.

AMOUNT OF STOCK HANDLED.

Mr. Morris receives from one to two car loads of stock every week, and always keeps on hand from 100 to 150 head of horses and mules, handling from 1,500 to 2,000 during the year. From the fact of these large dealings the purchaser cannot fail to reap an advantage by consulting Mr. Morris, who, by purchasing in such large quantities, secures his stock cheaper and is able to sell at lower prices than smaller dealers.

VISITORS WELCOME.

A walk through Mr. Morris's stable cannot fail to be a treat to any one who feels the slightest interest in horses and mules, and visitors are always made welcome by Mr. Morris, and his courteous attendants, whether they come as purchasers or not. The animals are kept with such care, and seem to enjoy their life and quarters with such zest as cannot fail to be a source of gratification to the humanitarian, and the change in the stock, as horses and mules come and go, is so constant that there is always something new to greet the visitor or purchaser, let him call as often or as unexpectedly as he may.

BOUND TO BE SUITED.

Another feature of importance to purchasers is, that should it be possible that Mr. Morris may not have in stock at any time the particular kind of horse or mule that may be wanted, his acquaintance is so extensive and thorough in the horse world that he can readily put his customer in possession of the very animal desired.

THE PRESENT STOCK.

At the present time all the stables are filled with a most excellent stock of both horses and mules, from which a selection may be made to fill the wishes of any purchaser, let the particular style of animal desired be what it may, or the purpose for which it is to be used what it will; and, as we have said before, prices are largely reduced by the magnitude of the transactions, and Mr. Morris never allows a horse to stand unsold until he "eats his head off," nor does he charge a long board bill to the customer.

A SAMPLE LOT.

During a recent visit the writer was shown a lot of 15 horses which had been purchased by Mr. H. F. Totten, Superintendent of the Essex county Horse Railway Co. of Newark. These animals are of Iowa stock, strongly and squarely built, with powerful frames well filled up, and they are of a breed celebrated for strength of bone and feet, both very desirable qualities in horses intended for this use. The lot was much admired by judges of horse-flesh.

FOURTH STABLE.

ALL QUALITIES.

In Mr. Morris's stables you can be suited with anything you wish from a $50 "plug" to a $5,000 blooded "flyer," with all the intermediate grades. He has in stock now some good horses that have been used up somewhat on street railways, but can be recuperated into good and serviceable animals. These are especially worthy the attention of farmers who desire to buy horses to build up.

MULES.

While Mr. Morris is dealing thus largely in horses, mules are by no means neglected, and he always has on hand a large lot, and can furnish any quantity that may be desired at short notice and of the best quality.

EXCHANGE.

Although sale is the main business, exchange is also given full attention. Mules will be exchanged for horses, or horses for mules, on favorable terms. In fact, any exchange may be effected that is desirable.

IN CONCLUSION.

One of the best indications of the advantages to be derived from dealing with Mr. Morris is the success which has attended his long career in business. Buyers of horses do not return to the dealer who fails to deal justly with them. Mr. Morris has many customers who have been dealing with him ever since he started in business, and their return is certain every time they find themselves in need of a horse or mule. Fair prices and fair dealing are the watchwords which have made and sustain his reputation, and enter into all his transactions, large and small.—Adv.

THERE are so many entertainments of all sorts and kinds given in this city, that it is a wonder that any one "pays".

Small Fire and Little Loss.

At about 10 o'clock of Wednesday evening, fire broke out in a small room occupied as a bedroom by a colored hotel waiter, and situated in the upper story of the stable in the rear of No. 40 W. Front street. It is supposed to have been caused by the lamp fastened to the side wall. The alarm was rung, and Gazelle after breaking an axe trying to get the cover off the Somerset street well, took water from the race and soon quenched the flames. The lower part of the building was occupied by Mr. James M. Dunn as a stable, and a lot of household furniture also was stored in the building. But little damage, however, resulted, and such was confined to the room where the fire started.

The Bicycle Tournament.

Thanks to the efforts of Messrs. Burr, Crane and President Cooley, of the Plainfield Bicycle Club, the programme of the Tournament on Wheels that is to be given at The Crescent, next Monday evening, will be the biggest affair of the kind ever attempted. The drill in the dark by the Demons of Brooklyn and the electric light drill by the Hudson county Wheelmen of Jersey City, have either been alone a show of itself on other occasions, and this is the first time that both have taken part in the exhibition of a single evening. Besides these features any so many others that the programme will take almost three hours for its completion. For the first time in this city, the deaf mute Chautauquan, Mr. John M. Stout, will show what marvellous feats can be performed on the machine with the little wheel in front, and will ride over bottles, see-saw on a plank, play foot-ball and accomplish many things that others only attempt. At the request of many, The Crescent management has persuaded Mr. Stout to remain in the city for a few days and give different exhibitions during Tuesday evening and Wednesday afternoon and evening. The great Leopold, who fears no one, will appear twice on the programme, and give fully half his exhibition on one wheel. He alone jumps rope on a buggy wheel and turns his own rope, which is all effected on a small table. Dr. Elliott W. Johnson and Mr. Fred Erlich's original act of Pat and his friend's first ride on the bicycle, will be one of the most entertaining parts of the evening, while a game of polo on wheels by Messrs. W. P. Smith and C. E. Kluge is to be one of the most novel. The opening parade of the wheelmen will be a grand sight, as a large number of visiting cyclists in their different uniforms are to take part. The races, also, are sure to add greatly to the interest of the affair, some of the fastest riders coming together in competition in the two-mile open race, and the local interest being so strong regarding the result of the race for members of the Club. Valuable medals are to be given to the fortunate ones—two furnished by the managers of the Tournament, and two being generously donated by Mr. Clark W. Evans.

Assemblyman A. F. R. Martin has introduced a bill into the Legislature, amending the fish act, so as to permit black bass fishing on and after May 30th. It is to be hoped that the act will be so further amended as to extend the time of "close season" to Dec. 1st instead of Nov. 1st, as at present.

MISCELLANY.

A robust blacksmith is needed to shoe a horse; but it requires the careful and tender hand of a woman to "shoo" a hen.

At No. 34 E. 5th street Mr. H. H. Baker will show you the best Furnace ever yet made. And his regulator that can be attached to any furnace, will save coal and is operated from the dining or sitting room, thus making it remarkably convenient. Call and see it.—jlm1

"Yes," said old Mrs. Badger, "I have met Col. Ingersoll and I thought he was a very pleasant gentleman; but I have heard that he's a regular amethyst."

"Then you think he has an eye to the future?" "I am quite sure of it." "How are his investments located?" "Mostly where moth and rust cannot corrupt them."

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

THE DOCTOR'S NIGHT WATCHMAN.

"Tell you what, doctor, you'll be getting robbed and murdered one of these days, you will, upon my word."

"Hardly, my boy. You ought to know by this time that it's the province of us doctors to kill other people, not to be killed ourselves."

And with a thick chuckle at his own wit, Dr. John Hunter Bistoury settled himself comfortably in his arm chair, and began to peel his third orange as carefully as if he were taking off a limb.

When the doctor first came to New York, thirty years before, he had been in no way burdened with riches, but his face had proved his fortune in a different sense from that of the over candid milkmaid in the song.

The mere sight of that round, florid, jovial visage, in every crease of which a joke or a good story seemed to be lurking, was a cordial in itself, and appeared capable of reviving the most hopeless invalid without the aid of medicine at all.

Mindful of the human weakness which makes so many worthy people regard their own ailments as a kind of a personal distinction, the lessening of which in any way is a direct insult to themselves.

Dr. Bistoury skillfully took a middle course between alarming his patients by an over serious view of their case, and offending them to make light of it.

In this way he had acquired an enormous practice, and his reputation now stood so high, that the mere eclat of his name had sufficed to sell an entire edition of his great work upon the mutual relation of mind and body, in which he proved to his own satisfaction, if not to that of his readers, that all criminal impulses whatever, and indeed the very existence of sin itself are wholly due to "a morbid action of the physical system"—that murder may be prevented by the timely use of Epsom salts, and an unbeliever converted by a judicious contemplation of the virtues of quinine.

"I can assure you, my dear Harry," resumed the genial doctor, "that it's amazingly flattering to me to find myself considered worth robbing at all. No thief would have thought me worth a cent in the days when your poor father—as fine a fellow, Harry, as ever lived—used to come and sup with me upon biscuits and toasted cheese in my little snuggery down town.

"And then, as surely as the time came to go, he'd turn to me and say: 'Now, Jack, old boy, won't you think better of it, and let me write you a check, just to give you a fair start?'

"But although I knew well enough that he'd only be too glad to do it, I had to refuse, for 'Heaven helps those who help themselves,' was my motto."

"A motto which you'll find some black-masked gentleman exemplifying in this very house one of these nights," growled Harry Everett. "Look here, doctor, I'm not joking, I am not, indeed. Everybody knows you are rich, and it's got abroad that there's a room in your house which is always shut up, the very thing to make people think there must be something very valuable stored away there, and yet after all that you go on living in this big house without a soul near you except the cook and old Sam, who wouldn't be worth a cent in a scrimmage."

"Well, my dear boy," said the doctor, with a curious smile, "would it tranquilize your mind if I were to hire a night watchman?"

"I should think so. That would be just the thing."

"Very good. Consider it done."

The room of which Harry had spoken as being always shut up, was a standing puzzle to the doctor's few intimates. Not a man of them had ever crossed its threshold.

Rumor whispered that one adventurous gentleman, rendered desperate by his wife's threat to give him no peace until he found out what the doctor kept hid in that room, had attempted a burglarious entrance, but it was unsuccessful.

Many declared that the doctor had all the hoardings of his life in gold. A rival practitioner suggested that it contained the remains of the unfortunate patients who had perished under "that fellow Bistoury's administration."

To those who questioned him on the subject of marriage, he replied that he was wedded to his profession, and that any other union would be bigamy; but to his friend Harry Everett in a moment of after dinner confidence, he told a very different story.

"My medical cousin Alice ought to have been my wife. When she was only sixteen she bought a skeleton with her uncle's birthday gift of five dollars, and articulated in a manner that was really masterly. But she became smitten with a fancy for homeopathy, and after that all was over between us."

The doctor's agreement to get a night watchman quieted Harry for the time being, but he returned to the attack again. "I say, doctor, have you got that watchman yet?"

"Yes, some time ago."

"Well, he don't do his duty then, for I've passed here at all hours of night and never see him."

"Wait and see," replied the doctor, oracularly.

The invisible watchman remained as ever, and Harry had almost decided to take some decisive step on his own authority, when a new complication introduced itself into the drama.

This was the temporary retirement of the doctor's man servant, popularly known as "Old Sam," whose health had begun to give way so manifestly that his master insisted on sending him to the country for three months, replacing him with another man, who had volunteered as promptly as if he had been keeping his eye on the place for a year.

Although the doctor and his friends highly approved of this new domestic, Harry did not, and lost no time in announcing his opinion.

"Look here, doctor, I don't always want to be lecturing you about this sort of thing, but that new fellow of yours is up to some mischief. I was coming home late last night, when I caught sight of him talking to a couple of men. One of them is a noted thief who goes by the name of Badger Bill."

"Indeed! Are you sure of that?"

"Quite sure. You know I never forget a face."

"In that case it is time for me to do something."

Harry, who was not wanting in shrewdness, began to suspect that his persistent warnings to the doctor had been superfluous after all, and the doctor was equal to the emergency.

This suspicion was confirmed about a week later when the doctor dropped in upon him unexpectedly, saying:

"Give me some dinner, my boy. You've no engagement for this evening, I know; so I'm going to be very benevolent, and find you some amusement myself. Have you ever read the 'Count of Monte Cristo?' because you're going to see a chapter of it dramatized, and pretty effectually, too, I flatter myself."

"What do you mean?" asked Everett, staring.

"Why, you see, I told my servants a few days ago that I should be away from home to-night, and the cook has asked for an evening off; consequently, the house will be under the charge of my man servant, against whom you are so prejudiced. It's quite possible that the two men he was talking to the other night may be kind enough to enliven his solitude with a visit—"

"Capital, first rate! I see it all now. But why on earth couldn't you tell me before that you were up to the whole game, instead of letting me make a fool of myself by preaching to a man as smart as any six of me."

"Never mind," said the doctor, "your warning was kindly meant. Eat your dinner and then we'll have our talk."

Dinner over, the doctor began to expound his plan. "I've locked up the outer room that opens into my mysterious chamber, which puts two strong doors between it and the robbers. My servant will warn them of this—they will try the window instead. He will let them in by the garden door. We'll hide in the stable, which has been unused so long that no one would dream of suspecting it. And then—"

"And then," broke in Harry, "we'll go for them. It'll be a fine chance to try my new revolver."

"Better leave it at home," said the doctor, "we shall want no weapon for this job."

"Why, are you going to mesmerise the fellows?" asked Everett, completely mystified.

"Wait and see," chuckled the doctor. "We needn't be there till eleven, for my domestic will make sure, before giving the signal that I'm not coming back, and an experienced burglar seldom begins work until after midnight. The only thing to be sure of is that nobody sees us getting in."

But in this fortune favored them, and the two conspirators glided in unseen and unheard.

Weary work crouching there in the darkness, with eye and ear strained to the utmost for the first sign of danger. Like all young soldiers, Everett found the suspense before the action more trying than the fray itself. The window at which the two watchers had posted themselves, commanded a view of the whole side of the house, the blackness of which was relieved only by a solitary light in one of the upper windows. Suddenly the light vanished and reappeared a moment later—a performance repeated three times in quick succession.

"That must be the signal," whispered the doctor. "Keep your ears open, Harry."

Courageous as Everett was, his pulse quickened, and his hand went instinctively to the revolver which, despite the doctor's verdict, he had persisted in bringing with him.

"Hark! Was that a stealthy footstep outside?"

The next moment came a low whistle, instantly answered from the house, and then a shadowy figure issuing from the house, opened the garden gate to admit two others.

"They have got a ladder," whispered Dr. Bistoury, as the three men crossed the garden. "Be on the lookout, my boy, you're going to see something worth seeing."

The ladder was soon planted against the mysterious window, and Badger Bill ascended and cut out a pane so dexterously that the sound was barely audible, put his hand through and shot back the hasp. His two assistants mounted after him, and stepped into the room and turned the bull's eye upon the interior.

Instantly the treacherous servant recoiled with a stifled cry: "Ain't that a—a coffin over yonder?" he whispered tremulously. "Good gracious! suppose there should be a dead man in it, and—"

"S'pose you should be a thunderin' fool!" growled Bill, savagely. "Shut your mouth, will yer, or thar'll be another dead man somewhar round soon; I'm a-goin' in—I am!" And he stepped resolutely forward.

Crash! the coffin lid burst open, and a skeleton, thrown out in ghastly relief by the red light that flamed in its eyeless sockets, started up with a hideous rattle, thrusting forward its bony arms and grinning jaws as if about to spring upon them. The honest servant gave one yell sufficient to wake the neighborhood, and rolled on the floor in convulsions. The second burglar, leaping backward, dashed his head with such force against the corner of a bureau, that he dropped as if felled with an axe; while Badger Bill overturned the ladder, and fell crashing along with it, breaking his leg in the fall.

"You see, Harry," said the doctor as they went up stairs that night, "that my watchman did know his duty, although there is nothing more unearthly about him than a few concealed springs, and a little phosphorous, and as for this wonderful room you see it is only a laboratory after all."

AN OLD NOTE.

City Treasurer Margerum, of Trenton, has received from David Prosky, a Paterson numismatist, the following: "I enclose an old interest note of your city issued in 1837 for $2. If the city has still a fund for its redemption I should be pleased to hear it." The enclosed note is a faded piece of paper somewhat smaller in size than a dollar bill. It bears the State coat of arms and the following:

"City of Trenton—This is to certify that there is due to the bearer from the Mayor and citizens of Trenton the sum of two dollars bearing interest at the rate of one per cent. per annum payable July —1838; being part of a loan of $30 000 dollars authorized by an ordinance passed June 6th, 1837."

It is numbered 1,614 and bears the signatures of "Samuel Evans, treasurer" and "L. Ikopell, President of Council." City Treasurer Margerum will inform Mr. Prosky that he knows of no fund for the note's redemption."—True American.

The season on the Morris Canal closed on the 19th of December. The year's business has just been computed at Supt. Kellogg's office at Phillipsburg, and show the following totals: Total number of boats loaded, 3,893; total number of loading days, 204; average number of boats loaded per day, 19¼; first boat loaded April 13; last boat loaded Dec. 11; number of boats cleared at Port Delaware (Phillipsburg), 4 250; number of tons transported, 364 554 14. Business on the canal was not up to that of former years. The boatmen complain that they have hardly been able to make both ends meet. The days of the raging canal appear to to be about numbered.—Morristown Banner.

Rutgers College (the New Jersey State Scientific College)
New Brunswick, N. J., July 7, 1885.

Analyses and careful examinations of Cleveland's Superior and Royal Baking Powders enable us to bear testimony to the superiority of Cleveland's. It yields more carbonic acid gas than the Royal, and contains no ammonia salts.

Cleveland's Baking Powder is made of pure substances and is absolutely free from any kind of adulteration. We endorse it most cordially as an honest and efficient article, and one that will give entirely satisfactory results.

CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND & PACIFIC RAILWAY

By reason of its central position and close relation to all principal lines East and West, at initial and terminal points, constitutes the most important mid-continental link in that system of through transportation which invites and facilitates travel and traffic between cities of the Atlantic and Pacific Coasts. It is also the favorite and best route to and from points East, Northeast and Southeast, and corresponding points West, Northwest and Southwest.

The Rock Island system includes in its main line and branches, Chicago, Joliet, Ottawa, La Salle, Peoria, Geneseo, Moline and Rock Island, in Illinois; Davenport, Muscatine, Washington, Fairfield, Ottumwa, Oskaloosa, West Liberty, Iowa City, Des Moines, Indianola, Winterset, Atlantic, Knoxville, Audubon, Harlan, Guthrie Centre and Council Bluffs, in Iowa; Gallatin, Trenton, Cameron and Kansas City, in Missouri; Leavenworth and Atchison, in Kansas; Albert Lea, Minneapolis and St. Paul, in Minnesota; Watertown in Dakota, and hundreds of intermediate cities, towns, villages and stations.

THE GREAT ROCK ISLAND ROUTE

Guarantees its patrons that sense of personal security afforded by a solid, thoroughly ballasted road-bed; smooth tracks of continuous steel rail; substantially built culverts and bridges; rolling stock as near perfection as human skill can make it; the safety appliances of patent buffers, platforms and air-brakes; and that exacting discipline which governs the practical operation of all its trains. Other specialties of this route are Transfers at all connecting points in Union Depots, and the unsurpassed comforts and luxuries of its Passenger Equipment.

The Fast Express Trains between Chicago and the Missouri River are composed of well ventilated, finely upholstered Day Coaches, Magnificent Pullman Palace Sleepers of the latest design, and sumptuous Dining Cars, in which elaborately cooked meals are leisurely eaten. "Good Digestion waiting on Appetite, and Health on both." Between Chicago and Kansas City and Atchison, are also run the Celebrated Reclining Chair Cars.

THE FAMOUS ALBERT LEA ROUTE

Is the direct and favorite line between Chicago and Minneapolis and St. Paul, where connections are made in Union Depots for all points in the Territories and British Provinces. Over this route, Fast Express Trains are run to the watering places, summer resorts, picturesque localities, and hunting and fishing grounds of Iowa and Minnesota. It is also the most desirable route to the rich wheat fields and pastoral lands of interior Dakota.

Still another DIRECT LINE, via Seneca and Kankakee, has been opened between Newport News, Richmond, Cincinnati, Indianapolis and La Fayette, and Council Bluffs, Kansas City, Minneapolis and St. Paul and intermediate points.

Surface Indications

What a man would very properly term "surface indications" of what is beneath, are the Pimples, Sties, Sore Eyes, Boils, and Cutaneous Eruptions with which people are troubled in spring and early summer. The effete matter accumulated during the winter months, now makes its presence felt, through Nature's endeavors to expel it from the system. While it remains, it is a poison that festers in the blood and may develop into Scrofula. This condition causes derangement of the digestive and assimilatory organs, with a feeling of enervation, languor, and weariness—often lightly spoken of as "only spring fever." These are evidences that Nature is not able, unaided, to throw off the corrupt atoms which weaken the vital force. To regain health, Nature must be aided by a thorough blood-purifying medicine; and nothing else is so effective as

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

which is sufficiently powerful to expel from the system even the taint of Hereditary Scrofula.

The medical profession indorse AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, and many attestations of the cures effected by it come from all parts of the world. It is, in the language of the Hon. Francis Jewett, ex-Member of Congress of Massachusetts and ex-Mayor of Lowell, "the only preparation that does real, lasting good."

PREPARED BY
Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Druggists: Price $1; Six bottles for $5.

WHAT IS DYSPEPSIA?

Among the many symptoms of Dyspepsia or Indigestion, the most prominent are: Variable appetite; faint, gnawing feeling at pit of the stomach, with unsatisfied craving for food; heartburn, feeling of weight and wind in the stomach, bad breath, bad taste in the mouth, low spirits, general prostration, headache, and constipation. There is no form of disease more prevalent than Dyspepsia, and none so peculiar to the high-living and rapid-eating American people. Alcohol and tobacco produce Dyspepsia; also, bad air, etc. BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS, will cure the worst case, by regulating the bowels and toning up the digestive organs. Sold everywhere.

JESSUP'S TILDY.

BY FANNIE FOSTER CLARK.

I.

It was that winter when stout Mrs. Jessup came down to her bed with rheumatic fever. Dan'l Jessup, her husband, trying to get breakfast for himself and his old deaf brother Ike, swore a temperate "Consarn it all!" then called out, "Mariar, I'm goin' to Philadelphy to fetch an orphan!"

"Ug! umph! Deary goodness me!" groaned Mrs. Jessup, attentive only to her sufferings.

So Dan'l was absent a couple of days; then one night entered the house followed by a slip of a girl. "Here, Mariar," he said, "I've brought the orphan."

"Ugh! umph!" answered Mrs. Jessup. "Let's see her."

Dan'l lifted off the girl's shabby hat, and held up the kerosene lamp.

"What's yer name?" asked Mrs. Jessup.

"Arethusa Chestnut, fourteen years old, No. 327," answered the "orphan" promptly, but in a scared whisper.

"Found in a basket on Chestnut street," Dan'l explained, "and brought up in institooshuns."

"Ugh! umph! She looks like our old mare Tildy, that died last year," said Mrs. Jessup. "She perfickly ridic'lous."

"Why she do favor Tildy," Dan'l yelled at old Ike, moving the light up and down before the stranger's face.

"She sartinly do," answered Ike, in his quavering voice. "Kinder ewe-necked, kinder long-featured; her eyes sot high into her head, and looks as as if she hadn't got horse sense. She do sartinly favor Tildy."

Presently the new domestic was grappling with the mystery of the stove dampers, and before long she brought Mrs. Jessup a bowl of palatable gruel.

"Ugh! umph!" said Mrs. Jessup, as she drank it; "you ain't no fool, but you are perfickly ridic'lous, Tildy."

"Yes'm," answered the girl, accepting the old mare's name quite calmly.

After six years of domestication there seemed no reason to revise the first judgment. Tildy, grown to be twenty years old, was a slab of a figure, had a bony forehead, imperceptible eyebrows, sparse hair and a long upper lip. Mrs. Jessup had meanwhile hardly ceased from saying, "Ugh! umph!—deary goodness me!" for the rheumatism had become chronic, asthma had set in, and she was quite helpless. Still, in perfect good faith, she used to say, whenever the Ketchums, or the Hulls or any other neighbor dropped in, "I get through a sight of work, considerin' my afflictions." In fact, Jessup's place looked so neat and well kept that the invalid was held as a kind of wonder.

Becky L. Ketchum, talking to Becky F. Ketchum as they came out of church one Sunday, remarked, "How smart Mrs. Jessup must be to do so much, and with that Tildy to hinder everything, too!"

Joel F. Ketchum put forth the opinion, as he crunched his last cardamon seed, "That Tildy' enough to scare the crows."

Just then the object of this compliment passed by and struck out down the south road towards the Jessup farm. The back view of Tildy was not lovely; her shoulders were thin, her stride enormous, and her dress of a hideous purple with blue spots. The two Becks burst into a loud laugh, and Joel N. fairly howled.

"Now here comes Lydie S. Hull and that splendid house painter Harry Halpine," said Becky F., looking over her shoulder. "What black curly hair he's got, and white teeth, and what elegant cravats he wears!"

It should be explained that identity of name in Redbrook argued no recognizable kinship, for the place was almost made up of Ketchums and Hulls, who all clung to the same ancestral Becky or Joel or Amos. So the middle initial was tacked on with a euphonious result of which Redbrook was very proud.

"Yes," Becky L. went on, "and Lydie S. has got on her blue silk with a new over-skirt."

Lydie Samantha Hull was the daughter of the richest farmer in Redbrook—a handsome, rosy-cheeked, fair-haired girl too, and one who could unravel the mysteries of that criss-cross pattern sheet of the Fifth Avenue Fashion Guide, and create by its dots and lines garments that thrilled Redbrook to its centre. At the moment she wore the celebrated Princess Maud dolman (pattern 3046), cut in blue cotton velvet, and her over-skirt was the dizzying combination known as "the Clotilde with lambrequin loopings." The young painter who came smiling and bowing by her side had been for the last month at work on her father's new house and was something entirely novel in that village. It was Redbrook chivalry to maintain in public an indifferent aspect towards the fair sex, so a girl was left to scramble into a wagon quite unaided, while her escort chewed a blade of grass and critically observed her struggles. Now Harry Halpine came from the city of New York, where he was believed to move in the very highest circles of society, and his bearing toward ladies was a startling innovation—an innovation that, except for his skill as a banjo player, had never been tolerated by the youth of Redbrook. As he drew near, Joel N. called out, "Stop makin' a monkey of yourself." Then, remembering the festive twang of the banjo, he added, humbly, "Come to the store to-morrow night—do."

"I shall spend the evening with Miss Lydie Samantha," said Halpine, boldly, whereat Amos P. and Amos W. Hull, who had just joined the group, exchanged fastidious winks. Lydie S., quite delighted, toyed with the fringe of her "Princess Maud" dolman and lisped:

"Ma says please won't you join our family sukkie for Thanksgivin' dinner, a week from Thursday?"

"With the greatest of pleasure, Miss Lydie S.," answered the glass of fashion. Then Joel N. tripped up Mr. Halpine's heels, and the ready Halpine knocked Joel's hat into the air.

By this time Ma and Pa Hull having come up, Mrs. Hull, who talked without rhethorical pauses, said:

"I really don't know Mr. Halpine as we'd oughter expect you to eat with us on Thanksgivin' when there don't seem to be a turkey fit to cook in all Redbrook along of a kind of a pip as took all the young uns last spring and them three at Jessup's why they can't be got for love or money though folks as farms only thutty acres ought to be glad to turn an honest penny an' we're offerin'—"

"You're worse nor a mill wheel. Shut up, Sarah B," interrupted Mr. Hull, dispassionately, this being his way of stopping his spouse when he wanted to speak himself. "I'm willin'"—and he expectorated in a generous way that befitted a man who farmed three hundred acres—"I'm willin' to pay twenty cents a pound for a pair of Jessup's turkeys."

A murmur of admiration went round, and Joel N. exclaimed, "Gosh! that's a big offer!"

"Come, ladies and gentlemen," said Halpine, "let's all pile into a wagon and take Jessups by storm."

As the boys and girls drove off, Mr. Hull remarked to his wife, "That young Halpine has got spring in his heel. Why he has saved up money; paid me cash yesterday for ten acres of good land."

"Then he's certainly goin' to settle down in Redbrook," exclaimed Mrs. Hull, "and he's thinkin' about our Lydia S. a better match I never see he with black cully hair and she with yellow braids and both such a taste in dress why that dolman Lydie S. has got on is—"

"You're worse nor a mill wheel. Shut up, Sarah B.," said Mr. Hull; but he remarked, meditatively, "Nothin' like spring in the heel." And he looked pleased.

When the party arrived at Jessup's farm house, all whooping and screaming in a highly rural and festive manner, the door was thrown open by Tildy, who still wore that Sunday dress, the ghastly combination of purple and blue. Mrs. Jessup, a monstrous mass of adipose, was wheezing and snorting in an arm chair, and Lydia S. greeted her with a compliment on the tidy housekeeping.

"'Self-praise is no praise,' as the sayin' is," answered Mrs. Jessup, rolling forward a little in her chair; "but I do get through considerable."

"Well," said Lydia S., "we've come on business. Here's Mr. Halpine, a gentleman from New York. He can speak for my pa."

"Yes, ma'am," and Mr. Halpine came forward with an easy swagger. "Mr. Hull desires his best compliments, and would like to purchase a brace of turkeys at twenty cents a pound."

Mrs. Jessup colored purple before such ceremonious elegance, yet to show she was accustomed to the courtly style, answered: "I desire my compliments back in return, and would be happy to accommodate; but my bound girl Tildy owns the birds, and is just makin' a fool of herself about them. Ain't she, Dan'l?"

For Daniel Jessup had just came in, and stood listening. He said, hospitably, "How are ye all? Pretty peart? Set. Make yourselves to home." Then he declared, "Tildy must be brought round about them fowls. You see, a man's cart broke down before our door, and a basket of eggs was smashed in the jolt. 'Here, sis,' says he, by way of a joke, 'you can have 'em.' But Tildy, when she came to wash out the basket, found three good turkey eggs, and raised them nice young birds. Here, Tildy," he called out. Tildy's long ungainly figure and expressionless face promptly appeared at the kitchen door. "Here, Tildy," you must sell them turkeys. You'll have twenty cents a pound, and the money all for yourself, to buy a new dress with."

"They ain't for sale," answered Tildy, standing there in her hideous gown—a creature absolutely without one feminine grace.

"Can't we at least seem them?" asked Lydia S., tittering.

"Bring 'em here," ordered Jessup, imperatively; for he was anxious to oblige a great man like Farmer Hull.

Tildy went to the door step, and in a peculiar way called, "Here, Jesse; here Lil; here Ned." Presently three glossy young turkeys, with a great deal of gobgle and flutter, came hurrying to her feet.

"Good uns," remarked Amos P.

"I won't have them killed," said Tildy, as Jessie jumped up to peck at her fingers.

"Pshaw!" cried Lydie S., "what nonsense! My pa will be very mad—very mad indeed," and she drew the "Princess Maud" dolman about her in a high and haughty manner.

"Deary me!" wheezed out Mrs. Jessup from her chair. "Tildy, you'd ought to be ashamed to hold out against your betters in that way. Give them fowls up, I say, this very minute—give 'em up! You're a ridic'lous thing. Ugh! humph! Deary goodness me! You're a ridic'lous—a ridic'lous—" Then she broke down in a coughing fit, and the culprit ran to her, supported her ponderous figure, held her lolling head and finally laid her back against a pillow quite helpless.

"Now, then, Tildy," said Jessup from the outside, "we've got to have them birds."

"They're mine," answered the girl, stalking up straight in front of him.

"Shucks!" shouted the farmer. "Joel N., just ketch them derned things and ring their necks."

"Pitch in, boys," cried Amos P. "Head 'em up," said Amos J.; and they began to chase the scared and fluttering fowls.

Tildy drew back a few paces, stopped, and the creatures came to her outstretched hands; then, facing all the jeers and laughter, she said, in a loud, clear voice, "They love me; they trust me. Look here!" as Ned snuggled his foolish head into her hand. "No one shall lay a finger upon them." Then two spots of carmine came out upon her sallow cheeks, her eyes flashed, and still sheltering the fowls in her arms, she walked away with a fiercely grateful action that a tragedy queen might have envied.

The village gentry kept silent until she disappeared; then, not knowing just what to do, they laughed. When they all piled into the wagon to go home, Joel N. remarked, "Tukkeys wouldn't be nowhere if Tildy could raise a young man to be fond of."

"But she couldn't," said Lydie S., "for she's uglier than sin."

"She's a reg'lar 'natomy," added one of the Becks.

"By George!" exclaimed Halpine, "let's have some sport. I'll make love to Tildy—just cheat her, you know—and I'll wheedle those turkeys out of her yet."

"Oh, what fun!" screamed Lydia S. "But Lor'! she can't be made to think anybody would really care for her."

"Leave that to me," said Halpine, "and I'll own those turkeys before Thanksgiving Day."

"Gosh!" cried Joel N., slapping his knee; "that's the biggest joke ever got off in Redbrook. To go courtin' Jessup's Tildy! Ho! ho! Then let her down slam-bang, and say you've been foolin' her. It's splendid, Halpine—just splendid!"

II.

There was no time to lose, so the very next evening Halpine donned a tight frock coat and a scarlet cravat; then, after entertaining the boys at the store for a while, he put up his banjo and announced, "Now I'm going to court Jessup's Tildy."

A shout arose so loud that it startled even deaf old Ike Jessup, who was struggling to grapple a kerosene can and shoulder a bag of flour.

"Here's a good excuse for calling," said Halpine. "I'll take that for you, Ike." Then winking violently, the painter swung out with both bag and banjo. As they approached the farm, Tildy came flying down the moon-lit garden path. Ike handed her the can, and said to the young man, "She can take that flour."

"Not a bit of it," replied Halpine. "It's too heavy for Miss Tildy."

She gave him a strange, quick look, her eye lingering an instant on his dark curls, and again on the bright cravat; then she seized the burden in a practical, accustomed way.

"No—oh, no," said Halpine, half commandingly, half caressingly, as he unclasped her thin, toil worn hands—"no, Miss Tildy, not while there is a strong man who is proud to help you." The hands melted from under his touch, and Tildy made straight for the kitchen.

Halpine entered the sitting room, and soon remarked to Mrs. Jessup, "I'm idle for a few days, and can paint that new shed for you."

"Obleeged to yer," answered Mr. Jessup, dryly. "I can't afford no paintin'."

"I won't charge you a cent," answered Halpine.

"Sho! you don't say so!" exclaimed the farmer. "You're a first-rate young chap. Thank you. Sho!"

Soon, however, Jessup crept off to bed, and then Halpine produced his banjo. He played a bright prelude, half a dozen popular tunes, and by that time Mrs. Jessup had fallen fast asleep. Then he carefully turned his back toward the half-open door that led to the kitchen, touched a few silvery chords and swung into the melody of an old love song. He listened, half turned his head and began to croon the words. After one verse something came softly creeping toward him; it was Tildy, who had been sitting in the dark outside there. Halpine pretended to see nothing, but let out his tenor voice on the second verse. To be sure, the twang of the prolonged notes was execrable and the roll of his r's might make one shiver, but to Tildy's untutored ear choiring angels could give nothing more enrapturing. He sang!

"As summer waves that sleep at night
Are stillest when they shine,
Oh! thus my soul lies hushed in light
Beneath the heaven of thine."

Tildy crept on and on until she stood right before him, her eyes rapt, her hands tightly clasped together. He artfully changed the numbers.

"Here, where the shadows softly lie,
Under the arms of the evening sky—
Here let thy trembling heart find rest;
Come, love, come to a faithful breast."

Tenderly the last note was drawn out; then Halpine whispered, "Do you like it, Tildy?"

"I didn't know there could be anything so beautiful," she breathed out, with a quivering sigh.

"Ah, Tildy!" he said, leaning toward her with an ardent gesture—"Ah, Tildy."

She swayed a little, gave a low sob, covered her face with her hands, then turned and fled from the room.

Halpine stared for a moment, but was soon on his way to Hull's, where Lydie S. met him in a "Jessica basque" (pattern 2479), and with the question, "How does it come on?"

"Fine," was the answer. "I've been singing love songs to her."

"Oh! the idea!" screamed Lydie S. Then presently she asked, "Are you going to build on the land you bought from pa?"

"Perhaps," answered Halpine, "if I can get a pretty blue-eyed wife."

"Go 'way!" exclaimed Lydie S., with sweet consciousness, and took a seat beside him on the sofa.

III.

Of course the painting of Mr. Jessup's shed was undertaken betimes, and Halpine costumed himself carefully. A white cap showed off his black hair; a heavy watch chain supplied richness; an expanse of blue necktie supplied color. For the first hour Tildy kept the house, so he went in and leaned against the kitchen doorway, and stared at her while she persistently polished a tin pan.

"Miss Tildy, I'm feelin' dizzy to-day. Won't you hold the ladder."

"Feelin' dizzy!" cried Tildy, looking up in alarm.

"Ah!" said the deceiver, with effective sadness, "we painters have to take great risks."

Tildy wiped her hands at once, and ran straight to the shed, where she laid hold of the ladder with a life-or-death grip. The pet turkeys by some instinct found out she was there, and came gobbling from a distant field to peck at her dress. As Halpine looked down at her remarked, mentally, "Well, that girl's about as homely as they make 'em," but he entertained her untiringly. Once, holding fast by the eaves, he pretended to stumble, and slyly kicked the ladder aside. Instantly, Tildy slipped her arm between the rounds, and by main strength forced it under his feet again, crying out in terror.

Halpine laughed behind his hand, but assured her, "There, it's all over now. Just a passing spasm like." But after that the girl's eyes never left him for an instant.

Old Ike at last began to split wood near by, but with such complaining groans and such glances towards Tildy that she said to Halpine, "Can't you rest awhile? I must help Ike."

Halpine sat watching her as she took the axe from the old man's hand, told him where his pipe lay ready filled, and sent him trotting off comfortably to the house. After a while Jessup came home, threw the ox goad down and called out, "Tildy, the cattle." Then she unyoked the great brutes, who thrust their noses in her hand confidingly, and followed her to the barn in procession, with the old dog, the house cat, the chickens, and the impudent, spoiled turkeys, that actually rode on her shoulders, and to each creature she gave some word, some look, some assuring touch. Then Tildy went in to cook the dinner, and while the men ate, she shook Mrs. Jessup, and fed her with some special delicacy.

"Ugh! umph!" said the invalid. "We must hustle about smart this afternoon, Tildy." Then, feeling herself a brisk housekeeper, she dozed off to sleep.

Tildy had her sleeves rolled up for scrubbing, when Halpine noticed her arm, and said to himself that it resembled a jointed broomstick. But he saw, too, that it bore a great swollen bruise, and he asked her kindly, "How did that come?" The poor girl hastily pulled down her sleeve and gave no answer, but Halpine remembered the trick with the ladder, and knew well enough that she carried that cruel mark for his sake.

In the evening, when he entered the store, the first words he heard were from some Redbrook blade, "Bet yer half a dollar he can't fascinate Tildy so she'll give up them tukkeys."

"I'll take that bet," yelled Joel N., and tossed all his small change on the counter.

"Bet yer seventy-five cents he don't get 'em in time for Thanksgivin'," was another offer freely taken by Halpine's admirers.

"Pshaw! he may bring other birds just to cheat us," was somebody's suggestion.

"Fellers," cried Joel N., in great excitement, and springing upon a soap box, "Harry Halpine, of New York city, is a trump. He won't go back on friends who put up money on him. Say, Halpine, we've got to see that gal hand over the fowls. Why can't you hide us in Jessup's barn?"

"Yes! yes!" said a dozen voices. "Promise us that."

"All right," said Halpine, confidently, "I'll promise." Then the halves and quarters were slapped down in reckless profusion.

IV.

With so much hanging upon success, Mr. Halpine found it advisable to use the irresistible influence of a bright purple cravat, the effect of which he noted at once in Tildy's fluttered manner as she glanced up from ironing. "Gracious," was Halpine's reflection, "she's homelier than ever this morning. How pale she is!"

Presently old Ike appeared with a dozen querulous demands. "Tildy, where is my shoes?" "Tildy, tie my neckercher." "Tildy, put on my coat." Then he complained, "Deaf as I be, Mariar kep' me awake las' night with her coughin' an wheezin'. Tildy just lets her disturb the house."

"Did she set up last night?" asked Halpine.

"Set up!" replied Ike, angrily; "she sets up most every night; but why can't she stop Mariar's cough?—that what I say."

It was a particular busy day for Tildy, and not until twilight did Halpine miss the sound of her never-resting footsteps. He spied about and found her in a corner of the wood shed, seated on a log, feeding and caressing those turkeys. She stroked their glossy backs, called them "Poor Jess, pretty Lil, good old Ned," and somehow she seemed not half so plain or so awkward in the company of creatures that appreciated her care and love. Halpine, who had stolen upon her, crept away unseen.

But time was being lost, and in the evening it seemed necessary to hasten matters by means of the banjo again. Tildy was alone, busily darning stockings, but from the first chord that Halpine struck, the needle came more and more slowly. He posed after the model of the lover in a traveling show, and now and again the helpless girl stole a glance at his dark curls, the color on his cheek, or his silky moustache. At last, after due preluding, he fell into a song in which he adjured some fair creature,

"Leave me not to die of love."

Tildy's work dropped in her lap, and Mr. Halpine felt that she was at the mercy of his fascinations. He took her hand; it was particularly bony and unyielding; but he said softly, "Do you love me, Tildy?"

"Oh," cried the poor thing, more in anxious than delight, "who could help it?"

Halpine patted the callous palm and inquired, with peculiar gusto, "Why, do you see anything in particular about me, Tildy?"

"Yes," she replied, breathlessly, "you are so handsome, so—so wonderful, and so good!"

The fellow rather started at the last word, and if he had a conscience it must have spoken; but he went on presently, "I'm very much in love with you, Tildy."

"No, no," said Tildy; "I'm not worthy of you. I'm homely and ridic'lous. You ought to marry the best and beautifulest girl ever was born, and she wouldn't be half good enough."

Halpine hung his head a little before her belief in his uprightness, for he had been careful to avoid all mention of marrying. Then he said, boldly, "Come, Tildy, come give me a kiss."

She rose and drew away from him; then, meeting his eyes, bravely and seriously, answered, "I've got no right to take what belongs to your promised wife."

Silently Mr. Harry Halpine picked up his banjo and silently he left her.

V.

The next move in the game was the adoption of a black cravat and deep melancholy. Whenever his victim appeared, Halpine fell into attitudes of grief and desolation; sometimes sitting perfectly rigid and gazing at nothing. Tildy came and went as usual, in her unceasing toil; yet with anxious eyes she watched Halpine, who sighed profoundly whenever he caught her looking. At last she came and asked, simply:

"Are you in trouble? Can I help you?"

"Trouble enough," replied Halpine. "A money matter is weighing upon me. The fact is I'm in need of six or eight dollars. I'd sell my watch, but that was a present from my poor mother."

"Then," said Tildy, "you're not rich, as they say in the village."

"No; I'm a poor man. Well, there's only one way out of this trouble. I must sell my banjo. Oh, Tildy, it will be awful hard to part with that."

For the first time she came near to him voluntarily; her eyes were brimming with tears, and she laid a hand on his arm, with the words, "I can help you."

"Nonsense!" he answered. "You're poor as I am. Ah! the banjo must go. No more pleasant evenings with my old friend. No more comfort after my day's work. Oh, Tildy, it just hurts me to part with that dear old banjo!"

"You shall never do it!" she cried, her plain face all glowing with goodness, "I've got something that's worth money."

"Oh, no, my poor girl," sighed the hypocrite.

"I have—I have." But her voice faltered a little—"I've got my three turkeys."

"But, Tildy—" Halpine began, as if with some compunction.

"Hush! I'll give them to you to-morrow. Sell them, and you'll have the money."

"Bring them to me, then, in the barn, at dusk—say five o'clock."

"Yes," she said, "and don't be unhappy another instant."

When that evening Joel N. yelled out, "Time's going, Halpine—how about them tukkeys?" the painter answered, "You can all come to Jessup's barn at five o'clock to-morrow afternoon."

It was, however, somewhat to that young man's credit that he went about next day without his airs and graces, but quite quietly, almost humbly. As to Tildy, she was calmer than usual, and smiled on him gently and assuringly. When, about noon, he missed her for a few minutes, he knew where to look. With his eye at a knot-hole, he could see her in the corner of the wood shed, sitting with the three turkeys in her lap, they pecking at her hands, and she softly crying over them.

Halpine kept up a pretense of work until nearly five o'clock, then he heard a wagon coming on the road. At a little distance it stopped; then some shadows crept into the barn, and he followed them. Lydie S. exclaimed, "I shall die a-laughin'." And Joel N. informed him, "I've bet as much as twenty dollars on you." The gay young painter pushed a dozen of them behind the half-open barn doors. Then he waited. Sharp on five o'clock, Tildy's thin figure emerged from the house. She came swiftly to where Halpine stood, and laying a burden across his arms said:

"There they are. Sell them."

"What!" he exclaimed, "are they dead? Oh, Tildy, I didn't mean you should kill them. I—I only wanted to—to—"

"I didn't kill them," she interrupted, choking back a sob. "I couldn't. Ike done it for me." Then touching each one gently, she said, "Here's Ned, here's Jess, here's Lil. Don't think I grudge their lives to you. I'd do a thousand times as much." She turned to leave him, but something checked her, something like smothered laughter coming from behind the barn door.

"What's that?" she asked, sharply.

"Only some stray geese cackling," Halpine answered, in a loud voice. "Tildy," and he caught her about the waist, "I've seen how good you are, how patient you are, how innocent, and how modest. I wouldn't give one of your little, thin, hard-worked fingers for all the rich and handsome girls ever were born. Tildy, I began with making game of you, and I've ended with loving you honest and true." Before she could meet him with deprecation or denial, he had borne her off to the house. Somehow there was that in his eyes and voice which she was compelled to believe, and she could hardly falter out:

"But I'm so ridic'lous."

"I've seen you, Tildy," said her lover, "when you were beautiful."

The next time Halpine sauntered into the store, the boys looked very glum and dissatisfied.

"What yer mean, anyway?" asked Amos P., "by not having the fun out, and letting Tildy down slam-bang?"

"I kept my promise," said the painter. "You saw me get the turkeys, only I'm sorry the poor things were dead."

"But," began Joel N., "That ridic'lous Tildy is—"

"Take care," said Halpine, turning upon him with a glare in his black eyes; "you're mentioning the girl that is to be my wife."

When Mr. Harry Halpine settled down on the land bought from Farmer Hull, Lydie S., meeting him one day, remarked, sarcastically, "I've heard tell your wife was named after an old mare."

"Yes," he answered, coolly, looking her up and down—Eugenie mantilla, (No. 2297) and all—"yes, she was named after a kind, faithful, gentle creature, and I'm proud of it." For Halpine, under those gorgeous cravats had a heart in the right place, after all.

It was wonderful how Tildy, with the consciousness of being respected and loved, grew out of her awkwardness; and while nobody but her husband ever saw her look beautiful, many a stranger says, "She looks like goodness itself."

NEW JERSEY'S EDITORIAL ASSOCIATION.

Pres't. Robt. Gwynne, Jr., of the Salem Sunbeam called the annual meeting of the New Jersey Editorial Association to order at the State street House, Trenton, N. J., shortly after eleven a. m., Monday, Jan. 18, and Secretary Charles Bechtel called the roll of newspapers, showing thirty-five newspapers represented. The President appointed Messrs. Heston, Logan, Hyer, Ketchum and Winton as a Nominating Committee. Major Yard proposed for membership R. C. Penfield of the Shore Press. Mr. Vance in the course of complimentary remarks proposed for membership Mrs. Louis D. Voght, of Morristown, Mrs. Charles Folwell of Mount Holly, and Mrs. Fred W. Foote of Elizabeth were also proposed. Their husbands in life had been editors and the widows still conduct the papers. All of them were elected to honorary membership by acclamation. Secretary Bechtel announced the proposals for membership as follows: Augustus C. Studer, of the Montclair Times, E. S. Fogg, of the Woodstown Monitor, Theodore N. Patterson, of the Camden Courier, and R. C. Penfield, of Asbury Park Shore Press.

A communication was read from the National Editorial Association, requesting the presence of delegates from the New Jersey Society at the National Convention at Cincinnati, February 23d, 24th and 25th. Mr. Vance thought it unadvisable to send delegates, but in case any members desired to go to Cincinnati on their own account, he favored the issuance of credentials to them. Major Yard also opposed affiliation with the National Association lest it should tend to cripple the independence of the State Society. He agreed with Mr. Vance's suggestion which was adopted unanimously.

Chairman Heston of the Nominating Committee, presented its report, which was adopted as follows:

President—C. S. Robinson, of Princeton.

Vice Presidents—First District, Alex. Schlesinger, of Camden; Second District, A. M. Heston, of Atlantic county; Third District, E. S. Hammond, of Middlesex; Fourth District, R. F. Goodman, of Sussex; Fifth District, L. O. Stiles, of Morris; Sixth District, M. H. C. Vail, of Essex; Seventh District, E. Gardner, of Hudson.

Secretary—Charles Bechtel, of Trenton.

Treasurer—James S. Yard, of Monmouth.

Executive Committee,—S. Chew, of Camden; A. A. Vance, of Morris; L. S. Hyer, of Union; J. F. Babcock, of Middlesex, and James S. Yard, of Monmouth.

The report being adopted, President Gwynne made some pleasant remarks before vacating the chair. He closed by appointing Messrs. Heston and Ketcham to escort the newly-elected President to the chair. President Robinson thanked the Association for the honor conferred on him, and then proceeded with the regular order of business. The Executive Committee reported favorably on all the proposals for membership, and the gentlemen were elected. On motion, it was agreed to strike from the roll the names of gentlemen owing several years' dues.

Mr. Honeyman offered a resolution that to day and hereafter at all annual meetings of the Association there shall be a question box, into which any member may place questions, to be opened as soon as the regular order of business had been transacted. Answers are not to occupy more than 30 minutes. The resolution was adopted.

On Mr. Chew's motion, the rules were suspended to admit to membership J. L. Bunnell, of Deckertown Independent, J. J. Stanton of Deckertown, and Charles Hood, of the Palmyra Record.

Joseph T. Crowell, of Special Committee appointed at the last annual meeting to consider the subject of establishing a State Advertising Agency to protect the interests of publishers against the complicated and cunning devices of foreign advertising agents, reported that they had concluded, after mature consideration, that the proposition is impracticable.

Treasurer James B. Yard presented his annual report, which was received. The balance from last year was $1,121.50 and the receipts during the past year amount-

POLITICAL MANIACS.

Condemnation cannot be too sternly visited upon those political schemers who, for the ignoble purpose of manufacturing flimsy partisan capital, seek to revive the animosities of sectional strife which the result of battle settled twenty years ago.

To the disgrace of country, some such unprincipled politicians still cumber the earth.

Happily, however, they are growing fewer in number and more and more insignificant in influence.

One of the kind, hailing from the State of Maine, endeavored to renew the war in Congress the other day, but the merited castigation he received from the lips of an eloquent Virginia member thrust the Maniac into a very small hole, where he will probably remain for the balance of the session.

A fitting abode for one of his stripe.

The soldiers of the Union are for unbroken national harmony and the blessings of peace honorably won. They were in the field fighting when certain scurvy politicians were at home stealing.

The people of the United States, North and South, by an overwhelming majority are determined that amity and not discord shall prevail.

The people are honest and patriotic.

The three by five politician, sometimes called a statesman, who thinks he can now fire the popular heart by parading the obsolete issues of 1861, and thereby upward lift the ladder of political ambition, had better mind where he treads, for the rounds of such a structure are rotten to the core.

The people are neither fools nor knaves.

They can patiently stand a vast amount of humbug and wrong, but to hear mercenary political plotters yelp sectional war, when not the least cause exists therefor, but, on the contrary, every incentive for the preservation of national good will, is passing the line of virtuous forbearance.

The American people will not permit [illegible] hunting political rats, from Maine or Ohio, Senatorial or Representative, to eat up the rich harvest of peace and prosperity.

General Grant, the victor, and General Lee, the vanquished, ended the war forever.

They have both passed the portals of death.

The dying wish of General Grant was for never ending National Harmony.

And that will be faithfully carried out.

Let the Maniacs rave.

Mr. Franklin B. Gowen has again been elected President of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company.

President Cleveland attended the Charity Ball at Baltimore last Monday evening.

Many are on the anxious seat regarding Councilmanic appointments. Some will stay and others run to fight another day.

The Tammany Committee on Organization have re-elected Mr. John Kelly to the Chairmanship and selected Sheriff Hugh J. Grant as Vice Chairman.

Those aspirants for city offices who have not already sent in their names to the Mayor should do so at once. Time is most up. The boat starts next Monday night.

Mr. Boutelle was a very un-Wise man when he waved the bloody garment in the House of Representatives the other day. He found there was some one in "the house of his fathers who came to stay."

Mayor Rockfellow says he don't expect to please all in his nominations for City officials. He proposes to act for the city in the matter. Clean the [illegible], Mr. Mayor. It won't hurt the machine any.

Another firm, Samuel R. Bullock & Co., of 11 Wall street, New York city, will present propositions to the Common Council for a franchise to construct Water Works in Plainfield. Mr. E. [illegible], a resident of Liberty street, is connected with the firm.

It is not improbable that the question of introducing the water and sewage systems in Plainfield, will come prominently before the members of the Common Council of 1886. Propositions for constructing such will undoubtedly be presented. Mr. J. B. Low, a prominent engineer of Kingston, N. Y., has given several years study to the advantages and disadvantages of the system in Plainfield, and has made a perfect survey of our streets for the purpose. His plans make it perfectly feasible to introduce both systems. It is only a matter of time when Plainfield will have Water Works and Sewerage.

The action of the Ohio Republican Senators in endeavoring to expel Democratic members by squads is revolutionary in the extreme. It has but one object, and that is to reverse the result of a popular election legally declared. Availing themselves of a provision in the Ohio law which prevents a member voting upon his right to a seat, the Republicans have bunched four members under one resolution in order to utterly silence the entire Democratic majority in the Senate. Now and then occasions arise when mob law is valuable as a deterrent to equally arbitrary acts on the part of the authorities who are looked to for better things. It looks very much as if one of these occasions had arisen.—True American.

The nominations for City Officers to be sent to the Common Council by the Mayor for confirmation next Monday evening, are Corporation Counsel, Street Commissioner, City Physician, Overseer of Poor, and policemen, from among which one will be appointed to act as Capt. of Police. Among the candidates for nomination of Corporation Counsel are Wm. K. McClure and Walter L. Hetfield, Democrats, and the present Republican incumbent, Craig A. Marsh. For Street Commissioner the names of James O'Neil, William B. Warner and P. Mundoon, Democrats, Robert Simpson, Republican, Michael Cudal, Independent, and the present incumbent, George Angleman, are applicants. It is not unlikely that the name of the present excellent City Physician will again be sent in and confirmed. There are no legions of names for the office of Overseer of Poor, only the name of the present incumbent, J. Oakley Nodyne, being presented.

A 10-YEAR-OLD GIRL'S $20,000 VERDICT.

Ethel A. Spooner's right foot was caught in the track of the Morris and Essex railroad while she was playing in Greenwood avenue, East Orange, on August 19, 1884. A locomotive approached, and she lay down outside the track and sacrificed her leg to save her life. She sued the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad company, which had leased the Morris and Essex, and a jury in the Brooklyn supreme court on Wednesday of last week, before Justice Bartlett, gave her $20,000 damages on the ground of a lack of proper care of the tracks on the part of the company. The jury shook hands with the sweet faced ten-year-old child as they left the box, and many spectators did the same.

NEW JERSEY EDITORIAL ASSOCIATION.

At the annual meeting of the Association, held in Trenton on the 18th day of January, 1886, the following preamble and resolutions were offered by Mr. J. F. Babcock, adopted, and the Secretary instructed to have the same printed and forwarded to all the newspapers in the State:

WHEREAS, It is a very common practice for many newspaper publishers to insert in their local columns free complimentary notices of local entertainments, which have for their object the raising of money, such as exhibitions, lectures, concerts, fairs, festivals, picnics, socials, donations, dances, suppers, cards of thanks, obituary and society resolutions, etc., the publication of which entails considerable expense to the publishers for composition, etc.: therefore

Resolved, That we recommend all newspaper publishers to charge for all notices of entertainments which have for their object the raising of money for society, public or private purposes, a minimum rate of not less than five cents a line for local parties and ten cents a line for traveling companies; no notice for local parties to be inserted for less than twenty-five cents, and for traveling companies not less than fifty cents.

Resolved, That we recommend the publishers of each town to keep a standing notice to the above effect conspicuously inserted in their columns for at least one year, with the names of all the publishers of said town attached thereto.

That there is a vast amount of abuse in the free puffing business is too true. The evil, however, can be remedied by the publishers themselves. They can or need not, at their pleasure, give long puffs gratuitously. An advertiser is entitled to a notice in local-column calling attention to his adv. It is time, however, that some of the other abuses spoken of are abated, such as "puffing" sociables, entertainments, &c. without the accompanying adv. We are heartily in favor of co-operating on that score.

HON. ROBERT S. GREEN.

When the vote on the passage of the Hoar presidential succession bill was announced in the House of Representatives recently, it was found that two members voted against it, Hon. R. S. Green, of the Third District, this State, and a representative from North Carolina. Those who best knew Judge Green, were confident that his reasons for voting against the bill, were of a sound legal nature and founded on Democratic principles. In the Congressional Record of January 22d, the objections to the bill by Judge Green are given in full. We have only space for a portion of it. After citing opinions and writings of Jefferson, Hamilton and Madison, he continues his argument as follows:

"For the reasons stated and because of the objections which are now and were then urged, in my opinion the act of 1792 should, so far as it provides for the acting of the officers of the senate and house, be superseded, and the pending bill, in so far as it devolves those duties on the officers named therein, meets my approval, but in so far as its provisions permit such officers to act as president, not provisionally until a new election or some other resort to the people can be taken, but for the unexpired term for which the president had been elected, it seems to me to be radically wrong, presenting difficulties of greater importance even than the defects of the act sought to be repealed. Defects other than the one named, to which objection may be made, may be faults connected with the operation of the law, and might be corrected by amendment; but this feature is to my mind contrary to the theory of the government and not within the spirit, if it is within the letter, of the constitution. By this provision we have congress declaring that a person who happens to occupy a certain office shall, in case of a vacancy in the presidency and vice presidency, act as president for the unexpired term; it may be in a certain event the whole term of four years. This officer does not come from the people. He is appointed by the president with the advice and consent of the senate; and while it is proper that he should be selected to act provisionally until a new president can, under the forms of law, be chosen, that service should end as soon as a president from the people can be put in office. The theory of our system is that we are a government of the people, that they have the selection of their rulers, that we are a democracy. Let us as legislators bring the officer as near the people as possible, securing to him the confidence, sympathy, and support of the whole country. This fact ignores this theory entirely. Under it, as it stands, in the event of the death of the president and vice president elect between the declaration by congress of election and inauguration, the then secretary of state, or other cabinet officer, becomes president for four years, although it may be that the people have at the very election put their seal of condemnation upon the administration with which they have been identified, and declared that there should be a change. It perpetuates a policy the people have rebuked. It is no answer to say that such contingency is not likely to happen. It is true there is little probability of it happening from natural causes; let there be no incentive to bring about such a condition. The proceedings of the constitutional convention seem to me to demonstrate that it was never the purpose to permit congress by enactment of other action to fill the presidential office with its untrammeled choice for a term of years."

The Washington street bridge contest in Jersey City promises to be more lively this year than ever before. The reason for this, is found in the fact that, hitherto, it has been a mere contest between two railroads; while this year the public have themselves taken the matter in hand. Of course, there will be opposed to the demand the old story of the destruction of the water right of the West Line grant, but constant wear has given this bug-bear a thread-bare appearance.

A convention of National postmasters will be held in Chicago, Feb. 15, for the purpose of asking Congress to grant a fair compensation for the labors they perform. The postmasters of the third and fourth class believe that they are the hardest worked officials in the government in proportion to the salary they receive. There are 51,000 postmasters of the two classes, 49,000 of them belonging to the fourth class or lower grade. They are paid by a commission on stamps they cancel, and when the postage was reduced from three to two cents it cut off one third of their incomes. Their labors were increased while their compensation was reduced 33⅓ per cent. Thousands of tons of newspapers mailed by the press and for which the postmasters receive no compensation were thrown into the mails when the postage was reduced from two to one cent a pound, the express companies not being able to compete with the government, as they had formerly done. The postmasters want the first $100 received for stamps sold instead of the first $50, as at present. The postmasters of the third and fourth class want the revenue from the boxes.—Exchange.

Mr. William R. Wilson, Prosecutor of the Pleas of this county, whose term of office expires shortly, is again a candidate for the position. Mr. Wilson has made a most acceptable and capable official during his term, and his many friends in this section trust he may be honored by a re-appointment.

State Agricultural Society.

The annual meeting of the New Jersey State Agricultural Society was held at Trenton on January 20th. A large representation of stockholders came from Newark. Mr. E. G. Brown and Colonel Morrell, both active members of the society, were absent on account of sickness.

Amos Clark, jr., William McKinlay, Ferd. Blancke and J. Williams Crane were the only stockholders present from Elizabeth.

Mr. Thomas T. Kinney was chosen chairman. Reports were then in order. Mr. P. T. Quinn the corresponding secretary made a very able address telling what the society had accomplished during the past year.

Mr. W. A. Clark, the treasurer then submitted his report, showing that the receipts were $29,172.78, disbursements $25,704.75, leaving a balance in the Treasury of $3,469 03. Considerable discussion took place in regard to the committee appointed a year ago to audit the accounts of the late Treasurer, Mr. Manning. They said that they had not been called together by the chairman. This committee was continued to report to the Executive Committee immediately.

The following directors were then elected: Hon. N. S. Rue, Colonel William A. Morrell, William M. Force, General John S. Irick, Hon. William J. Sewell, Robert Thatcher, Hon. Amos Clark, jr., E. G. Brown, P. T. Quinn, Thomas T. Kinney, Hon. Henry C. Kelsey, Charles Heath, William F. Kidder, William McKinlay, A. V. Sargeant, Joseph Colyer, Hon. George A. Halsey, John I. Holly, William S. Taylor, Charles Kilburn, R. B Gaddis, R. H. Allen, Hon. Thomas H. Dudley, Ferdinand Blancke, E. W. Wilkinson, Wm. L. Tompkins, George B. Jenkinson, Hon. Franklin Murphy, Thomas W. Dawson, Henry P. Jones.

The directors were called together and the Hon. Amos Clark, jr., was elected President; W. M. Force, Recording Secretary; P. T Quinn, Corresponding Secretary, and Charles Kilburn, Treasurer.

The Newark directors stated that the treasurership had been held in Elizabeth for nine years, and they thought that Newark was now entitled to it.

Executive Committee, Wm. McKinlay, E G. Brown, H. P. Jones, R. B. Gaddis, Wm. L. Tompkins.

Right You Are, Both of You.

Governor Abbett's message is well spoken of by all parties, and sympathy is expressed that his excellency should not be as sound physically as he is mentally. It is brief, largely confined to the important subject of taxation, and outside of the State institutions and the fisheries, the only interest coming in for a slap is the newspaper profession, which deserves it for the letting down of the bars for access to the treasury of so many so-called newspapers. This round sum of $50,000 recommended is sufficient, and instead of being plastered over so many sheets, should be expended upon legitimate issues with proper discrimination.—Camden Post.

There is another point that ought to be made. No newspaper that publishes the laws from stereotype plates ought to receive them from the State authorities. The rates paid for them by the State are sufficiently remunerative to warrant the employment of journeyman printers, and that paper which desires to injure the labor of the State by the use of "Cheap John" methods should be tabooed by the Governor, the Secretary of State and the Comptroller.—Elizabeth Herald.

On Friday last the following commissions were issued to New Jersey postmasters:

George Roeder, at Milltown, and Chas. H. Ward, at New Market, both in Middlesex county; Wm. H. Smith, at Martinsville, Adam Hummer, at Millstone, Gilbert Lane, at Neshanic, and Ida C. Browne, at Basking Ridge, all in Somerset county. Lizzie N. Erickson, at Dias Creek, Cape May county; Amandias Goodrich, at Danville, Warren county; Wm. H. Vaniees, at Deerfield street, Cumberland county; Milton J. Craig, at Buttzville, Warren county, and Charles E. Clark, at Cliffwood.

The Legislature.

Among the important bills introduced into the Senate Monday night was one by Mr. Herring, a concurrent resolution instructing the Committee on the Reform School for boys at Jamesburg to investigate as to the alleged sectarian religious teaching at that school. It was referred to the Reform School Committee.

Also one by Senator Chase, which is a supplement to the General Railroad law, rendering it unlawful to construct bridges over navigable waters between this and any other State unless the plans of such bridge have first been submitted to and approved by the Legislature of New Jersey. The object of this act is undoubtedly to interfere with the plan of the Baltimore and Ohio to run across New Jersey to Staten Island.

Sandwiched in among a flood of unimportant acts was the Trades Union Bill for the appointment of four Deputy Labor Inspectors and a bill forbidding and charging of more than $1 a thousand feet for gas in any city.

Senators Youngblood and Fish had a lively sparring match of words on Tuesday, in which the former grew very angry.

The announcement that the cause of a bridge on Staten Island Sound in the interest of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company would be argued by a party of prominent lawyers before the Riparian Committee of the Assembly drew a large number of people to the Assembly Chamber Monday afternoon.

Among those in attendance were Messrs. Robeson, Keasby, Chapman, McCarter, M. R. Cowen. Mr. Keasby urged that the policy of the State had been to promote access to New York, and instanced it by reference to grants made in previous years to the great trunk lines. The Baltimore and Ohio was responsible and controlled a vast share of the traffic of the country. To shut her out of State would be the consummation of folly.

At the session of the House in the evening a resolution was offered summing up the arguments in favor of the bridge and declaring for its construction. It was referred to the Riparian Committee. In the Senate Mr. Chase offered a bill providing that no bridge shall be constructed on any navigable stream between New Jersey and any other State, unless the plans shall have been first submitted to and approved by the State Legislature.

Mr. Robeson, who followed, dwelt upon the value in State development of a new railroad, and then upon the fact that the State had already allowed a number of railroads to close the streets of its city and bridge the waters of its harbor. To refuse to extend this franchise would call out hostile criticism. He contended that anything that built up the trade and commerce of the metropolis contributed to the material wealth of New Jersey. He insisted that the erection of the bridge would not hurt the navigation. Ninety per cent. of the navigation of the Sound would have unobstructed passage under a 30 foot-draw. The other 10 per cent would have no difficulty to pass through the draw.

Counselor Cowen made a speech to the same effect.

Mr. Courtlandt Parker made an eloquent appeal against the bridge.

On Tuesday Senator Chattle, Monmouth county's temperance advocate, introduced two petitions from his constituents. One prays that the question of an amendment to the constitution prohibiting the sale of liquor may be submitted to the people, and the other asks for a law directing instruction in the public schools of the State in the subjects of hygiene physiology, particular attention to be given that the pupils may learn the effects of alcoholic stimulants upon the human system. These petitions were referred.

The following bills were passed in the Senate Tuesday:

S. 3, providing for additional room for Court of Chancery in Newark.

Senate No. 1, to authorize the Minard Home to sell real estate; S. 12, to increase capital stock of gas companies; S. 16, extending the time in which to complete certain railroads; S. 17, to authorize the building of a bridge over Raccoon creek, Gloucester county; S. 14, repealing sixth section of the act making changes in the government by the commissioners; S. 23, permitting justices to conduct bastardy cases in private. S. 8, increasing district court jurisdiction to county limits. Affects only the city of Newark.

In the House on Tuesday the following bills were passed:

H. 24, appropriating $4 000 to the Labor Bureau; H. 5, relative to school bonds; H. 32, relative to the funding of bonds due on account of annexed territory; H. 44, relative to judgments upon forfeited recognizance bills passed.

H. 47, amending the election law relative to registry list and tally of votes; H. 48, repealing that part of the Elizabeth charter which allows councilmen to receive salaries; H. 40, allowing prosecutors to employ assistants at their own expense; H. 43, providing for the division of township election districts; House amendments to the Newark Police and Fire Commission Law.

There was an exciting debate in the House on Wednesday over a substitute resolution for Mr. Parker's, which the Committee on Riparian Rights reported unanimously. The substitute strongly protested against the erection of a bridge over the Staten Island Sound, and against any action on the part of the Congress of the United States by statue or otherwise having for its object the erection of a bridge over said navigable waters, as being beyond the powers conferred by the Constitution of the United States, and a usurpation of a power exclusively belonging, so far as its own territory extends, to the State of New Jersey.

The resolution was adopted by the following vote:

Yeas—Messrs. Alcott, Armstrong, Banks, Besson, Condit, Corbin, Dayton, Doremus, Drake, Gangewer, Harrigan, Hudspeth, Hughes, Hutchinson, Jewett, Kinney, Laurence, Lennon, A. F. R. Martin, John Martin, McDonald, Noonan, Norwood, Parker, Pearson, Pelouber, Pfeiffer, Pintard, Potter, Rea, Schreiber, Seymour, Smith, Taylor, Ten Broeck, Throckmorton, Tumulty, Usterbilt, Vanderburgh, Whitaker, Wills, Winton—42.

Nays—Messrs. Arnwine, Baird, Beckwith, Bolton, Chamberlin, Gourley, Heyer, Hildreth, Low, Ossenberg, Peal, Scheele, Titus, Van Bossum, Wolverton—15.

Absent—Messrs. Budd, Lister, Vetterlein—3.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—My attention has just been called to the account of my Anniversary Sermon in your issue of Jan. 8. It appears as a quotation. As such it is unjust. The language is certainly not mine, and I have but half ownership in some of the thoughts; in others, none at all. Will you kindly give this statement a place in your columns.

Respectfully yours,

Jersey City Bridge.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—During the last fifteen years repeated efforts have been made to secure a bridge across the Morris canal basin, at the foot of Washington street, in Jersey City, and thus connect that place with the New Jersey Central Railroad and give this part of the State, as well as others, railroad communication with Jersey City; but through corruption, bribery and fraud in our Legislature, this measure which is so all important and beneficial to this section of the State, and to others, has been repeatedly defeated, and the Pennsylvania Railroad Company have continued to monopolize the Philadelphia travel, and Matthiessen & Wiechers who have their sugar house at the foot of the street in Jersey City where the bridge is sought to be built, have continued to use this street for store-house purposes to such an extent as to render the same impassable for blocks; and now at this time when our Senator and Member of Assembly (this bill having been introduced again last week providing for the building of this bridge,) are about to be called upon to vote on this measure which interests the farmers in this county so much, it does seem as if every man who grows hay and grain, and who has country produce to sell in this section of the State, should see to it, that the Senator and Member of Assembly of this county, are straight on this question, and that they vote for it and not absent themselves or dodge the question. It is important that we of Somerset county should have railroad communication with the largest city in our State, and one which is to-day the best hay and grain market and the best market for other products which we have for sale. To illustrate, (and I shall mention the source of my information, so as to challenge contradiction,) the hay merchant at North Branch tells the writer, that it costs him one dollar for every ton of hay he has carted around this basin; this does not come out of his pocket, nor will the buyer pay this extra tariff; it must come from the producer—from the farmer. The writer of this article further learned from the same source that it costs twelve dollars to cart a car load of corn around this basin. This extra tariff comes again from the farmer's pocket, he who grows the corn, and the same holds true of oats, and other products of this section of the State. Why Jersey City is the best market in New Jersey for hay, grain and milk, is easily explained. In Jersey City the United States Express Company of New York city, and the Adams Express Company, of the same city, have their immense stables, and besides, the grain elevators are there and the best prices can be obtained without passing through other hands. If this bridge were built, we of this part of the State could ship our milk direct to Jersey City, which is the home of thousands of men who own and operate milk routes in New York, and we could then sell direct to the men who retail in the city of New York, without going through a middle man. Can the reader of this article name a single State in the Union that has more than one-half of its counties cut off from railroad communication with the largest city of the State? Which is the case here, and all because two selfish corporations, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company and the sugar house above named, want a monopoly, and who by their bribery, corruption and political influence, have continued to defeat our interests. It is important that our Senator and Member of Assembly should be impressed with the importance of this bill and the farmers should see that their interests at this time are protected. If the Senator and Member of Assembly of this county should vote against this bill, or absent themselves, which is the same, they should never again be permitted to hold an office of trust in this community. Jersey City is the largest city in New Jersey to-day, and we want her markets made accessible to us who grow corn, hay, etc., etc. Farmers see to it, that your representatives in the Legislature vote for our interests.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

Mr. Pierre Lorillard announces that he will sell all his blooded running stock at Rancocas stud farm at auction Feb. 27th, and retire from the turf this season.

A Fish and Game Protection Association has been organized in Newton. It means business, and their motto will mean that the same law must govern all classes of hunters.

Despite the extreme cold of Saturday last, there was a fair attendance on the grounds of the Middlesex Gun Club, near Dunellen, to participate in the weekly shoot of the club.

L. D. Dunham of Newark drives a horse that wears spectacles. He found some time ago that the animal was near-sighted, though perfectly sound in every other way, and by the use of the glasses he has remedied the defect. The horse was at first averse to wearing the spectacles, but now manifests an unmistakable desire to have them put on every time he leaves the stable. The coachman says that the horse gains in speed in consequence.—Elizabeth Herald.

EDSALL'S! EDSALL'S!

Now is the time for the farmer and sportsman to lend their aid in the preservation of game birds, by depositing grain in such suitable places in the fields and coverts where quail are known to exist. The snow which covers the earth, and the extreme cold weather renders it a difficult matter for the few Bob Whites remaining to exist or subsist.

There is no foundation for a story going the rounds in shooting circles that Mr. Pierre Lorillard will give up his kennel of setters, and that his dogs will be sold. While the kennel, which was started at Jobstown about a year ago, has not met with the success expected, from the high prices paid for dogs, it will be continued but may be moved from the Rancocas Farm to Tuxedo Park, in Orange county, N. Y. Recently many of the young dogs and several of the old ones have died of malignant distemper. Mr. Lorillard contemplates the purchase of new stock, and some of it, it is said, will be secured in England. Mr. Henry S. Ohl is manager of the Kennel, his brother, Percy C., having resigned. Mr. Joseph Ohl is also a valued assistant in handling the dogs of the Kennel.

Already several bills, relative to changing the Game and Fish laws, have been introduced into our State Legislature and their passage urged. Two of them relate to the black bass law, and advocate making the "open" season commence on May 30th instead of June 1st, and to close Nov. 15th instead of Nov. 1st, as at present. Both changes will be acceptable to fishermen, but the season should close Dec. 1st instead of Nov. 15th. New Jersey's law would then conform with those of New York and Pennsylvania. No bill has been introduced, or is likely to be, prohibiting killing quail for three years. Such a law would be n. g.

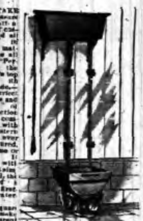
The "PERFECTION," All Porcelain.



WE TAKE pleasure in calling attention of our customers and all interested in sanitary matters to the all porcelain "Perfection," the only square top Hopper, with trap, made. For perfect cleanliness and simplicity of construction we invite comparison with any Closet ever manufactured, either home or foreign. It combines, with the utmost simplicity, all the points of a strictly first class water closet. The square top will make it apparent to all users, in doing away with drip tray, the wash at all times thoroughly scouring all parts, whereas in the drip tray it cannot help but become foul underneath. It has a real Trap of 1½ inches, and the soil pipe vent of 2 inches diameter, as will be seen in the above cut, will prevent all syphoning of Trap. The two local or seat vents of 1½ inches diameter are intended for right or left ventilation, the one not being used to be closed. The large handhole in front gives free access to all parts of trap.
Nos. 7 and 9 Somerset street.

AFTER DINNER.
Persons who suffer from Indigestion can arrest the progress of that painful malady by the use of an after-dinner pill, so compounded that it will give tone to the stomach, prevent heartburn, rouse the liver to healthful action, invigorate the kidneys, and thus, through the activity of these organs, promote the natural movement of the stomach and bowels. AYER'S PILLS are so compounded that their actions, though mild, effectually produce the above results. They are also, in curing Constipation, remove the cause of Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Kidney Disease, Rheumatism, and many other serious ailments.
AYER'S PILLS
contain no mineral nor poisonous substance, and do not gripe unless the bowels are irritated, and even then their influence is healing. To continue their effect in constipated or chronic cases, they need only be taken in diminishing instead of increasing doses. For seamen, and inhabitants or travelers in sparsely settled countries where physicians are not at hand, they are of incalculable value. There is hardly a sickness they will not alleviate, and in most cases cure, if taken promptly. To young girls just entering upon womanhood, and to women at the period of maternity, to those drawing to a close, Ayer's Pills, in moderate doses, merely sufficient to ensure regular action of the bowels, will be found of Incalculable Value.

Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

THIS is the "January Thaw" we have been having.

REGULAR meeting of the Common Council, next Monday evening.

FRANK C. Green is selling out his large stock of furniture at cost.

Is "Valentine's Day" to be celebrated on the 14th or 15th, this year?

THE Plainfield Turn Verein will hold a grand masquerade ball in the Casino rink building some time early in March.

MR. & MRS. JOHN S. HOPE, celebrate their fifth wedding anniversary at their residence on Fifth street, this evening.

KEEP your sidewalks clean of snow and ice. Some day the powers that be will wake up and you will be made to suffer.

THE Reform Club's Sunday evening meetings continue to be most interesting and successful, and result in the accomplishment of great and good work.

MR. M. UDHAL has returned from Jersey City and again is in readiness to undertake contracts for grading, etc., on the most reasonable terms for the best work.

THE tower lights have been replaced on The Crescent, and an additional lamp over the steps into the vestibule adds more light about the exterior of the building.

THE outside course of stone that faces the wall of the First Baptist church on the Northwest side below the street line, has broken loose and will have to be taken down.

THE most elegant specimen of the taste of the advertiser and the art of the lithographer, is that used by P. Lorillard & Co., for the announcement of their "Splendid" plug.

THE will of the late Oliva M. Smillie, of this city has been admitted to probate by Surrogate Gerber. Mr. George F. C. Smillie and Mrs. Elizabeth R. Smillie are named as executor and executrix.

THE new organ for the rooms of Anchor Lodge, No. 149, F. & A. M., has been placed in position by the builders, Midmer & Sons. It is a fine instrument and was used the first time last Tuesday.

WE can say for the Schwed Brothers, whose advertisement appears in another column, that they have thoroughly established, in this city, a reputation for fair dealing in selling the best of goods at the lowest of prices.

AT the Crescent avenue church, last Friday evening, the Young People's Association held one of its sociables, whereat two members of the Bicycle Club played the Babes in the Woods, and the ladies of the choir sang some beautiful selections.

NEXT Thursday evening in Music Hall the fifth of the Y. M. C. A. Course of Entertainments will then lecture on "The Evil One; or the Personality of Satan." General admission, 50 cents; reserved seats, 75 cents, to be selected at Reynolds' pharmacy.

THROUGH the inaccuracy of a shorthand reporter engaged by us for the purpose, Dr. Raymond's words upon the fifth anniversary of his charge of the Trinity Reformed church, were misquoted, and the speaker justly and naturally repudiates the same in a note published elsewhere.

A LARGE part of the bankrupt stock of the New York firm of Kaughran & Co., has been purchased by Messrs. James E. White & Son of this city, who are offering the great bargains to the public. On April 1st, this firm will remove to 18 West Front street, in the store now occupied by F. C. Green.

THE lecture on "Big Blunders" given in Music Hall, Thursday evening of last week, by the Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, under the management of the W. C. T. U., was attended by a house full in spite of the weather. Sometimes he was irreverent but always amusing, and the gathering of the clergy and the people, enjoyed his talk throughout.

THE 127th anniversary of the birth of the Scottish poet, Robert Burns, was celebrated throughout the country by his countrymen last Monday night. In this city there was a pleasant gathering at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. John Lindsley, on West Front street, at which Mr. Alex. Warnock, ex-Councilman Andrew Love, Sr., Alex. Kerr, and others, were present, and contributed largely to the evening's enjoyment.

ONE of the largest and best stocked job printing houses in central New York State is that of the old established firm of Curtiss & Childs, Utica. With their late increased facilities, including copper plate engraving, etc., and their large and commodious new quarters, Nos. 33 and 35 Charlotte street, the citizens of Utica and surrounding country feel justly proud of the above firm and its facilities for their accommodation.

THE new planing and moulding mill of county collector P. Sheridan at Elizabeth, erected on the site of the buildings burned some time ago, started up its machinery last week, Miss Lizzie, youngest daughter of Mr. Sheridan starting the ponderous forty horse power engine in motion for the first time. This large industry will give employment to over fifty workmen. Mr. Sheridan is a large contractor, and the loss of his mills by fire, seriously interferred with his business for a time. With increased facilities furnished by the new mills, the firm will now be better able than ever to meet the wants of the public.

THE foot-ball match at The Crescent, last Saturday evening, was brought to a close by a collision between two members of the Montclair team who came together in running for the ball. A doctor was called in to take a stitch or two in the temple of one, and the other was more or less stunned. The Plainfield boys not wishing to take any advantage of the accident surrendered the game as it stood at four points for the visitors. The playing was all done by the home team, and only by their carelessness did their competitors succeed in scoring. Only two of the original Montclair team were included in that of the second game.

MR. D. BOEHM, one of Plainfield's most popular merchants, having severed his connection with the firm of Boehm Bros., dry goods dealers, has removed with his family to New York city, where Mr. Boehm is engaged in an extensive business of the manufacture of ladies' cloaks, at No. 390 Broadway. Mr. Ignatz Boehm, his brother, continues the dry goods business in this city at the old stand on Front street, and will take up his residence in the flat over the store vacated by his late partner, after his marriage to an estimable young lady of New York city next Sunday. While the public regret the departure of such an upright business man and gentleman as Mr. D. Boehm, they heartily wish him continued success in his new field of operations.

THE gas-engine in Music Hall has not worked to advantage for some time, and its use is abandoned.

THE polo team from Rutgers' College will play a match against the Plainfield boys at The Crescent, to-morrow evening.

MISS MAGGIE E. BERNARD, daughter of Mrs. Richard Haveney, died at her home on West Second street, of consumption, Sunday morning last.

THE gentlemen of St. Joseph's parish, North Plainfield, will shortly tender an evening's entertainment to the ladies who accomplished the great success of the recent Church Fair.

THE Hon. Chauncey Shafer, of this city, was recently attacked with vertigo in a New York court room. He was brought to his residence here and has since been steadily improving.

THE finder of a small ivory one-foot measuring rule, much worn on one side, so as to obliterate figure marks, will receive a reward by leaving it at this office. The article is an heirloom.

THE children's service at the Congregational church, announced for next Sunday evening, will be postponed for one week on account of the Union service to be held in the Trinity Reformed church.

THE Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons met at Trenton, on Tuesday, and continued in session until Thursday evening. The attendance was large. We will give a list of officers elected next week.

HOW the Council will vote on the applications for liquor licenses at its meeting of Monday evening, is understood, but there is some discussion regarding just exactly who all will compose the minority.

FANNY LOUDEN, the young fifteen-year-old girl from Linden, Union county, who married a skating rink man at Rahway, and was afterwards deserted by him, has been found in a house of ill-fame in New York city.

THE eighteenth birthday of John Hibbits, son of Mr. Fistin Hibbits, was celebrated at the latter's residence on Liberty street, Saturday evening last. A large number of friends from out of town were present and the occasion made one of enjoyment.

THE Industrial Art Schools of the Metropolitan Museum of New York city, are under the Superintendency of Mr. John Ward Stimson of this city. These schools furnish superior opportunities (at moderate cost) for the thorough instruction of industrious and self supporting workers in art.

MR. WALLACE VAIL has disposed of the Hoppock farm, on Green Brook road, where he has resided for several months, to Mr. Adam Fritz, of North Plainfield, and is now ready to take another property to dispose of likewise. Real estate placed in his hands for sale or trade is generally disposed of on advantageous terms.

TOBOGGANING is rapidly becoming a famous winter sport, and toboggan slides have been constructed and clubs formed in this State and New York. At Orange the sport has become very popular. There are many points along the hill sides back of Plainfield for a fine toboggan slide, and plenty of material among our citizens from which to organize a good club. Why not?

THREE houses in Tarrytown, N. Y., were entered and robbed by four masked burglars last week. One of the residences was that of Mr. James S. See, who has been a Justice of the Peace for twenty years. The gang treated the Justice in a very rough manner and robbed him of considerable money. Mr. See is a brother of Peter E. See, of North Plainfield and is sixty-five years of age.

MME MODJESKA finds it more profitable to continue her successful career in the big city of New York, so her engagement to appear in Plainfield, this (Thursday) evening is cancelled, and a Wallack company in "Diplomacy" substituted. In the latter play will again be seen Miss Sophie Eyre, who was so much admired when she appeared last season with Mr. George Clark in "Victor Durand."

Union County Courts.

IN the Court of Quarter Sessions at Elizabeth Wednesday before Judge McCormick, William McConnell retracted a plea of not guilty to assault and battery and pleaded non vult. William Ebbe retracted a plea of not guilty to assault and battery and pleaded non vult. Both men will be sentenced on Saturday. The trial of John Burns for assault and battery was then begun. The jury were only out ten minutes when they brought in a verdict of guilty. Sentence will be pronounced on Saturday.

A Jolly Evening.

IN Cotter's Hall, during Thursday evening of last week, the Park Avenue Social Club held a most enjoyable entertainment of sociability and dancing, with music by Prof. Feasee and an accompanying supper. There was 60 couples in the Grand March, and the entire affair was both gratifying and successful. The Committee of Arrangements was composed of Messrs. James H. Huntington, Joseph C. Blimm and George Mehl, Jr. The Floor Committee included Messrs. John H. Blimm, J. C. Martin and E. C. Searing.

Hon. Geo. R. Wendling.

THE next lecture in the Y. M. C. A. Course will be on Thursday evening next, Feb. 4th, in the Music Hall, by the Hon. Geo. R. Wendling, the noted Western orator. His subject is, "The Evil One; or, the Personality of Satan." He has been ranked with Ingersoll and Joseph Cook as a logical and convincing speaker. Dr. Irenæus Prime, in the New York Observer, said of him: "His style is earnest, clear, impressive, and at times his utterance is tremendous, thrilling his audience with voice and manner, suited to the force and value of the great truth he brings." Go and hear him.

A Lecture on Electricity.

Prof. C. H. Bolles of the Electro-therapeutic College, Philadelphia, will lecture Tuesday evening, Feb. 2, at Reform Hall, on Electricity. The professor has devoted his whole time for the last 26 years to the study of this branch of science especially in its relation to the cure of diseased condition and is perhaps the most successful practitioner in the country. He has made some very important discoveries in the electrical law which are strongly endorsed by the medical profession to whom he has communicated them. His lectures are entertaining and instructive, and we would desire for him a full house. Read adv. in another column.

Personalia.

Judge Robert S. Green, Congressman from the Third District, attended the Union County Courts on Monday last, he being counsel in an important suit coming before Judge Van Syckle.

Charles Overbaugh, a former resident of Plainfield, and now located at Jacksonville, Fla., is visiting the North to purchase machinery to be used in preparing desiccated cocoanut, for which he holds patents.

The New York World of last Sunday contained among its illustrations a reproduction of the interior of the room at Yale College occupied by Mr. C. L. Hyde, '86, of this city, the furnishing of which cost over $2,000.

Mr. Alberti, of this city, who was so badly injured in a railroad accident of last summer, is still too ill to be removed from the place to which he was taken at the time, but his steady recovery gives hope that he may soon be brought home.

We are Proud of Her.

Here is a neat and complimentary notice of our beautiful and prosperous city, which is travelling through the State press:

"Plainfield is a city without a debt and with a balance in the treasury."

At The Union Club.

Under the auspices of the Entertainment Committee there will be a Progressive Euchre Party at the Club rooms, this evening. Tables will be filled at 8.30 o'clock. Later in the evening there will be dancing, and supper will be served.

Union Service.

There will be a Union Service on Sunday evening next, in Trinity Reformed church, in the interest of the McCall Mission. Monsieur Bertrand, who has been engaged in the work from its inception, will speak. He is warmly endorsed by the leading clergymen of all denominations.

High License and the Whipping Post.

A meeting was held in Trenton last week and presided over by Judge Nixon, of the United States court, to take measures for the suppression of the liquor traffic. Bishop Scarborough made an address favoring high license, and recommended the whipping post or tread-mill for a man who drank rum and refused to support his family.

Rutgers College vs. Plainfield.

To-morrow evening at The Crescent, the "Independent" polo team of Rutgers College, will play against the "Crescents" of this city. The visitors are all fine players and, in consequence, a most exciting and interesting match may be witnessed. The Crescents also have challenges from the "Temples" of Elizabeth, the "Excelsiors" of New Brunswick and others—all of which are under consideration and will result in a number of closely contested matches in this city.

Electric Lights.

The residents of Washington Park, North Plainfield, fully appreciate the benefits of street lighting by electricity. In a short time the amount required to pay for twenty lights will be subscribed for. The residents of Duer street are also alive to improvements, and some lights will be located there. The Plainfield Electric Light Company has consented to light North Plainfield, and burn all the dark hours of the night, as soon as the twenty lights are subscribed for, irrespective of what Plainfield may do towards lighting by electricity.

Can't Be Excelled.

Mr. John M. Stout, the Chautauquan who appeared at The Crescent during the first three days of this week, cannot be excelled by any expert that has exhibited the possibilities of skill on the Star bicycle before the public. Many of his feats are his own, and no other professional attempts them. Those who supposed that all that could be accomplished had been seen, were convinced of their mistake in that particular. Mr. Stout introduced a number of new acts, never before attained, while here; among which were jumping his machine over the face of a watch and spinning around on the large wheel on top of a log.

A Great Meeting in a Great Cause.

The Home Rule Club of this city held a big meeting in St. Mary's Hall last Sunday evening, and listened to addresses for the cause from many prominent and fluent speakers. The audience was a large and enthusiastic one, and the platform was occupied by all the most influential Irish-Americans of the city. No greater sympathy with a subject was ever evidenced by a gathering, and future results such as are desired will surely be the outcome of so much of the right kind of interest. Arrangements are being perfected for a grand mass meeting, Wednesday evening, February 10th, which is to be held in Reform Hall that the large audience may be accommodated.

"My Partner."

The next attraction that is to be presented at Music Hall is down for Tuesday evening of next week, when Mr. Louis Aldrich appears in "My Partner" with a good cast as his support. The old part that was so successfully filled in the past many years run of the piece by Mr Chas. Parsloe, is now taken by Mr. John Ince, who acts the Chinaman to perfection, in place of the former who retired with $65,000 as his remuneration for the representation. The others of the company who are mostly to fill in the frame around the star, are capable of the work. Mr. Aldrich makes such a great part of the character of "Joe Saunders," and has so much talent and personal magnetism, that his audiences are always charmed and satisfied.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

The first of the course of entertainments to be given by the Young Men's Christian Association on E. Front street, will be held next Monday evening, Jan. 1, commencing at 8 o'clock. The programme will include instrumental and vocal music, recitation and an informal social time. These entertainments are for men only. Admission will be entirely by ticket. Tickets for the course may be obtained free of the General Secretary at the rooms. Members of the Association will be admitted without ticket. We give below dates, etc., of the whole course: Monday evening, Feb. 1, Social; Monday evening, March 1, talk by A. M. Powell, Esq., on "Glimpses of Europe;" Monday evening, April 5, talk by Dr. J. H. Vincent, subject—"How to Care for One's Self;" Monday evening, May 3d, talk by Dr. J. L. Hurlbut, subject—"Right Use of Leisure Time;" Monday evening, June 7—Reception. This is one of the best course of entertainments ever given in this city, and a rare opportunity for young men. Drop in at the rooms and get a ticket.

Middlesex Gun Club.

A meeting of the Middlesex Gun Club was held at the law offices of Suydam & Stillman, this city, on Saturday evening last, and final arrangements perfected whereby the organization became complete. Changes have been made in the Board of Directors, which now consists of the following named gentlemen:

Messrs. E. H. Robinson, A. Worden, of Dunellen; F. R. Stevens, Chas. B. Theirs, Geo. P. Suydam, S. G. Smith, Dan Terry, of Plainfield; John D. Voorhees, Bound Brook; John Day, Jersey City; M. W. Mulford, Elizabeth; J. Blandermann, New York.

President—E. H. Robinson.
Secretary—M. W. Mulford.
Treasurer—George P. Suydam.

A constitution and by-laws have been adopted and a committee appointed with power to immediately lease grounds near Dunellen and at once commence the erection of a substantial club house thereon, more than sufficient funds now being in the hands of the Treasurer for that purpose. The building will be erected and fitted up appropriately for the use of shooters by early next week. The regular weekly shoots of the Club are at present on Saturdays. Live and clay pigeons and glass balls are furnished in abundance. The initiation fee is fixed at five dollars with fifty cents monthly dues. Life members are constituted by the payment of $25 each. A large number of prominent sportsmen have already become members. This Club, while laboring under difficulties in its formation, starts out under most favorable circumstances, and promises to eventually be a prominent organization of the State.

Wedding Bells!

On Wednesday afternoon last at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Smith Garretson, their daughter Minnie S., was united in the holy bonds of wedlock to Mr. Jeremiah Van Winkle, Jr., son of City Treasurer VanWinkle, by the Rev. A. V. V. Raymond. After the ceremony the newly wedded couple left on their wedding trip to New York state, on the 7 p. m. train, amid happy congratulations. The presents on the occasion were numerous and costly. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Van Winkle will take up their residence in North Plainfield, on Duer street, with the bride's grandfather, "Uncle Freeman" Shotwell. The best wishes of a host of friends go with the young couple on their new departure in life.

Cranberry Growers' Meeting.

Some details of the secret meeting of the American Cranberry association, held recently, has just been made public. The statistician's estimate of the crop of the country, made in August, at the time of the annual convention, 560,000 bushels, or about 70,000 bushels more than the largest crop on record. An estimate was taken of amount still in the hands of growers, which aggregated 45,125 barrels, showing a discrepancy between the estimate and the actual crop of only 3,872 bushels.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Dr. J. H. Brakeley, Bordentown; first vice president, Hon. Theodore Budd, Pemberton; second vice president, C. L. Holman, esq., Lakewood; secretary and treasurer, A. J. Rider, Trenton; statistician, N. R. French, Elizabeth; representative in State Board of Agriculture, Dr. J. H. Brakeley, Bordentown.

Deserving Support.

The Plainfield District Telegraph and Fire Alarm Co. has expended, and is still expending, considerable money to perfect its service in this city, and there is due to such efforts the financial support of the community that is directly and indirectly benefitted. The Company has concluded its arrangement with the Baltimore & Ohio Telegraph Co., whereby messages from this city to New York are now sent over its wires at the rate of 15 cents for ten words, and to all other points as low or lower than competing lines. Telegrams from subscribers are called for without charge for the messenger service.

All this is done for the people's benefit, and to give as extensive inducements as possible so as to command their support. Such little failures as have occurred in the service while it was being completed and put in smooth working order, have been promptly remedied. Therefore the scheme deserves the endorsement and patronage of the people.

Oh, for Gates!

The following lines have been handed us for publication by one of our prominent citizens. As they speak no disrespect to our excellent Board of Managers of the State's favorite amusement Hall, we give them publicity, and heartily commend the idea of Gates. Oh for gates.

WHERE, OH WHERE!

BY J. C. B.

Kind friend, will you direct me true
To that Music Hall so nice and new;
Does its dome rise high in beauty grand,
Or has it sunk in the Jersey sand?
Where! Oh where is that beautiful hall?
I've heard so much of but don't see at all!

Just down the street, near Laing's Hotel,
Why any one down that way will tell,
You will see a tombstone majestic and tall,
And hear the large boys yell and small ones bawl;
Then you will see the hole in the wall
That is the entrance to Music Hall.

Perhaps the wind has been having a blow,
And the papers and sand, and "beautiful snow"
Is piled so high you will hardly know
When you enter the hall what direction to go.
But never you fear for if loudly you call,
You'll be answered back by the hole in the wall.

It is said that once was proposed a gate,
Of architectural beauty great,
An ornament to city and State;
But the directors thought they had better wait,
And the small boys protested one and all
Against closing up the hole in the wall.

Somerset County Courts.

At the adjourned session of the Somerset Courts on Tuesday the indictment against Israel Coon of North Plainfield, for selling liquor on Sunday, was moved by the Prosecutor and tried before a jury. The defendant was in court, but being hard of hearing was represented by his proxy, Isaac Brokaw, Vice President of the Plainfield Reform Club. It was shown that defendant kept a grocery store and sold cider by the quart—sometimes on Sunday. His counsel (Hon. A. A. Clark) insisted that the sale of cider was not prohibited by law, and he further quoted the opinion of Chief Justice Beasley, in The State v. Bacorn (reversing opinion of Justice Magie), wherein the Chief Justice holds that it is not an indictable offense to sell beer by the quart and allow it to be drank on the premises. A verdict of acquittal was rendered.

John Fry, indicted April term, 1883, as Louis Den, was tried and found guilty of assault and battery on Mrs. Elizabeth Snyder of Mt. Bethel.

George Ewing, a Neshanic lad, was tried and acquitted on an indictment for stealing a horse. Mr. A. Dixon for defendant.

All the jury appeals were either settled or went off for the term, except the case of Drake v. Howlett. A jury was impanelled in this case, which is still on. The other jurors were all discharged for the term. The appeals before the Court remain to be tried.—Messenger

"The Great Republic.

Preparations, we learn, for the production of this splendid spectacular, musical and dramatic entertainment to be given at Music Hall, next week, Friday and Saturday evening and a matinee Saturday afternoon by over 300 of our talented youths, are progressing on a grand scale. The allegory illustrates our national history from the landing of Columbus to the present time in songs and choruses, recitations, dialogues, tableaux, etc., and is not only very amusing, but instructive as well. This exhibition has acquired a national reputation, having been produced in over two hundred of the principal cities of twenty-six States of the Union from Maine to California, during the past twenty-five years. It is very complimentary to Plainfield, that the Professor visits us, as he only produces his drama in large cities. Our city certainly affords him as good facilities for his preparations, and as fine an Opera House for producing the Allegory, as any large city in the country, and we are pleased to learn from him that he regards the talent here as first-class. This popular and unique entertainment must prove the great event of the season here, as it has in other cities. The Brooklyn Eagle of October 20, 1885, contained the following:

"The Academy of Music was crowded with Brooklyn's very best people at the matinee of the 'Great Republic' allegory on Saturday. This is the fifteenth season and the forty-sixth presentation in this city of the famous allegory, with its gorgeous tableaux. Professor Hagar has great reason to feel gratified by the success which has attended his efforts to make the allegory popular in Brooklyn. The confidence which the citizens have manifested in their townsman, and their increased interest in his entertainments for so many years have, reversed the adage that 'a prophet is not without honor save in his own country.' The last was the finest presentation that the Professor has ever given in this city."

Reserved seats at Shaw's drug store, Saturday morning, Jan. 30. A word to the wise is sufficient.

Buddensick in Jersey.

The attention of the Union county Courts was taken up on Monday last, before Judge Van Syckle, with the case of Butler & Constant vs. Charles A. Buddensick. The plaintiffs are hardware merchants, doing business in New York. They sold the defendant hardware for building purposes, for which he, so they claim, owes them $9,625. He having disposed of his property in New York State and owning property near Woodbridge, which is located in this and Middlesex county, they have brought suit in our court for the recovery of their claim. The defendant is the well-known builder mentioned in all the New York newspapers in the early Summer, and who was found guilty of negligence in not properly constructing his building, it being claimed that proper materials were not used. He was sentenced to several years, but is now under bail on appeal. Some very distinguished talent was engaged on this case. For the plaintiffs the Hon. Robert S. Green, of Elizabeth, and Mr. Carmichael, of New York city, were the counsel, and for the defendants ex Senator Schenck, of New Brunswick, Mr. Lipman, of New York city, and Mr. Garret Berry, of Rahway were the counsel. The case was ended on Tuesday and Judge Van Syckle reserved his decision.

We Predicted It So.

We knew and predicted that the ice men were not asleep, but on the contrary, laying their heads together to devise some scheme whereby the price of their commodity could not be furnished their customers any cheaper, whether the ice crop was prolific or a failure. The ice worm has been long a mythical object. It now seems to have come to stay. Read the following from an exchange:

A NEW SPECIES OF JERSEY WORM.

At a meeting of the Burlington county Medical Society, Dr. Thornton of Moorestown presented an interesting discovery of a new species of worm in water. It appears that one day last summer Dr. Thornton's cook called his attention to the fact that there were innumerable small worms in his refrigerator, for which no account could be given. The doctor investigated the matter and found that they existed in the ice and could not be discovered until the ice melted. He examined the ice from various ponds about Moorestown this Winter and found the same animalculae existed in all of it. It seemed perfectly clear before the melting, in fact, was so transparent that on one occasion a workman dropped his axe in the pond through a hole in the ice and could easily perceive it lying on the bottom. On being reduced to water, however, millions of little worms, some of them measuring as much as half an inch in length, could be discovered with the naked eye. A glassful of water contained many thousands of them. The worms are covered with a sort of hair or bristles. The doctor sent a pailful of broken ice to Prof. Joseph Leidy, of the University of Pennsylvania, who examined it carefully and says it is something entirely new, never having been discovered before. He gives the animalculae a name, but can give no reason for their appearance, but thinks the cause is entirely local, as numerous underdrains flow into the ponds and they doubtless come from these. He thinks they live on drops of unfrozen water in the ice. As eminent professors have heretofore thought that ice water is always the purest, the discovery is apt to make a little stir in the profession.

The Success of the "Three Wonders."

Three thousand people gathered within the walls of the Crescent, Monday evening, despite the unpleasant and uncomfortable weather outside, and experienced the excitement, pleasures and marvellous feats of the grand Tournament of Wheelmen that had been arranged through the efforts and labors of the "Three Wonders"—Messrs. Burr, Cooley and Crane of the Plainfield Bicycle Club—and the liberality of Mr. Clark W. Evans, the owner of The Crescent. Before the doors opened, the large vestibule was crowded, and as the entrance commenced at seven o'clock, even the strength and skill of the gallant Officer Lynch could not keep the unprecedented gathering from crushing itself through the opening in a most uncomfortable manner. About 700 reserved seats had been sold the previous week, and before 7.30 every other available place was occupied including 300 camp chairs that were speedily bought up by the continually increasing crowd. With the exception of that which gathered at The Crescent Carnival of Dec. 14th, so large an attendance had never been brought together before in this city—all of which is due to the attractive programme that had been arranged and the reputation of the building.

The list of enjoyable, original and novel features and feats that were promised, took place without a hitch owing to the perfection of management, and as those present left the building after 11 o'clock, not a word of fault nor anything but praise was uttered. For once at least a Plainfield audience was satisfied. It is needless for us to enumerate the excellence of the separate attractions, as everybody was present to see for him or herself. The Club race, however, deserves special mention by reason of the pluck displayed by the contestants and the hard luck of some. Lack of experience possessed by the riders in turning short curves on a board floor, resulted in many falls that changed the result; but as it was, the medals awarded by the management and Mr. Evans were gallantly won by Mr. Fred Yates and Mr. F. L. Martin respectively. Other races will probably be the outcome before the title of the fastest man is settled without a question. The financial result of it all is most satisfactory to those concerned, and the Club's treasury is swelled accordingly.

LITERARY NOTES.

The bright and attractive February Magazine of American History is filled with timely articles of fresh and absorbing interest. The whole number is a continual feast. It opens with a strong, well written article by Frederick G. Mather, on the "City of Albany," with unique illustrations of the old and the new, showing the progress for two centuries of that quaint old State capital; and Major William Howard Mills (U. S. A.) treats of the reorganization of the "Army of the Potomac under Hooker," furnishing a letter of President Lincoln, which no American reader can afford to miss. General "Baldy" Smith adds some highly interesting and significant data in connection with Major Mills' article on "Burnside," in the January number of this popular publication. The original documents, notes, and other departments, are crowded with matter of importance and entertainment. Price $5 a year in advance. Published at 30 Lafayette Place, New York City.

The February issue of the Electric Magazine contains an excellent exhibit of the best contents of the foreign magazines. The opening article, "The Origin of the Alphabet," by A. H. Sayce, the eminent Orientalist and historian, will be found highly interesting to scholars. "Poetry, Politics and Conservatism," by George N. Curzon, is a bright and entertaining criticism of recent politics in England, and "The Coming Contests of the World," from the Fortnightly, is full of meaty suggestions. Huxley is represented by a vigorous paper under the title of "The Interpreters of Genesis and the Interpreters of Nature." Prof. Seely's paper, "Our Insular Ignorance," is worthy of the author's fame, which may also be said of Max Muller's "Solar Myths." There is a suggestive paper on "Love's Labor Lost," by Walter Pater, and a very spicy criticism on "Superfine English," from Cornhill. "Merlin and Kentigern," from Blackwood's, is a vigorous ballad poem, treating one of the grand old British legends.

SCOTCH PLAINS SCRATCHINGS.

Linus Marsh has returned from his trip to Corsicana, Tex. He has gained several pounds, both sterling and avoirdupois.

Puff came near being fined one day this week. He drove so slow he was in people's way. Tom, where did you get him?

The sound of the trowel is no longer heard on the Mount-in Drive Hotel. What means this quiet? Has there been a confusion of tongues?

Larry Wallace, alias McFadden, proved very unfilial towards his parents by stealing fifteen dollars from them; money that had been hard earned. This is not his first offence. They say they will let law take its "course."

"Have you signed anyone's application for license yet?" is the question asked by the polite landlords to the innocent freeholders. And great is the anxiety depicted on their countenances until they get a favorable answer. Reason—liquor places numerous; freeholders scarce.

Those three worthies from the Jerusalem road, when they come to the village and imbibe an overdose of tanglefoot, as they did one evening last week, had better not repeat their ribald songs, and blasphemous, insulting language on their return down Westfield avenue. They are well known, and the jail doors yearn for such as they.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

A number of our young folks held a very social party at the residence of Mr. William O. Morton on Tuesday evening last. A large number were present.

The U. S. C., held a sociable in Arcanum Hall on Monday evening last. Every one present was well pleased with the evening's enjoyment. The music was from New York city.

This is the last week for those in arrears for their taxes on real estate to settle them in before they are sent to the County Clerk's office for record, which the Collector will do on Monday next.

The death of Mary Vreeland at the residence of her mother on Central avenue occurred on Saturday last after a lingering illness. The funeral took place on Monday. Interment in Fairview cemetery.

Barney McGowan and Bridget, his wife, were indicted for the disturbance in Justice Jaques office a short time ago. Their plea was not guilty. They were held in bail to await trial, which is set down for next week.

John Kane, who was indicted for assault and battery at the last term of the Grand Jury was arranged before the Court of Quarter Sessions and plead guilty to the indictment. Sentenced postponed until (Saturday) to-morrow.

The old folks social to be held in Arcanum Hall on Tuesday evening, Feb 2d, will be a grand affair judging from the preparations that are being made. It is the third one of the season. Those interested anticipate a splendid time. Music by Prof. Messina of New York.

During the past week a corps of engineers were engaged in surveying a route across the Amos P. Scudder farm, about two miles south of our town. It is no doubt one of the many surveys made for the new line of railroads which has been exercising the minds of many of our farmers in the southerly end of the township.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

A DAY AHEAD.

The night before my wedding day! Was ever night so full of hours—were ever hours so full of dreary minutes, that seemed to crawl after each other through its dead, cold gloom?

Yet it was by my own consent, to be my wedding day to-morrow. I had said it; I had not only said it, but I had said I should never repent.

As the early dawn breaks through the gloom of night, I hear the old cock in the farm yard give a dismal hoot preparatory to the first crow of the new day. And, utterly tired out, I fell asleep.

One—two—three—four—five—six—seven—eight beats of the tall old clock on the stair head outside my door, and I jumped wildly to my feet.

"At nine o'clock, then," he said.

I had only one hour—only one hour to be Norah Glennie. At the time that clock struck ten I should be Norah Mapleson—a wife, a true wife to a true husband. I re-arrange my dress with feverish taste.

I only stop to drink a cup of milk ere I leave the house, only just in time to catch the country train as it passes our country station. I am in time. Once more my hand clasped in his.

We say no word; only hurry through the sleepy streets till we enter the dingy office, where, by some strange method, we are made man and wife. All is a dream to me.

I wonder vaguely where are my bridesmaids, where are my father and mother? Bah! Why of course they are dead, long, long ago. I have only my uncle, and he lying bedridden at Norlington farm.

How could he be here? The only thing that seems real to me is the shining ring on my finger.

I look at it in a kind of fear as I draw my old kid glove over it before leaving the house into which Norah Glennie had gone a few moments ago, and out of which now a white, startled woman was issuing—Norah Mapleson.

"Don't be so distressed, my darling! Don't look so, or I cannot bear it!"

I draw a deep breath; I stretch out my hand a little wildly, I suppose, for he takes it firmly in his, and lays it on his arm as he hurries me through the streets back again in the direction of the railway station.

Once more we are in the train.

"Mine—mine forever! I do not fear the future now!" is all my husband says; but there is a world of love in his eyes.

Poor William! in a week's time he will be on the ocean, and we will have parted for many months—perhaps years.

He lets me rest quietly on his arms during the very short journey back again to Norlington. I get out of the train alone, as he is going on some business two stations further on; then he will come back for the rest of the week to the farm.

"Before you go into his room, wife, darling, you will take it off!"—and he touches my finger, on which the bright new wedding ring glitters.

"I cannot!" I say, shuddering. "It is unlucky to remove a wedding ring."

"But, my darling, his sharp eyes will—"

The train goes on, and I am alone. I see his face looking at me from the window, alarmed and anxious; but I nod reassuringly and he smiles.

It causes no remark that I have been out so early this morning, for everything lately is so upset by reason of uncle's illness and William's near departure.

Then, again, there is only old Betty in the kitchen; and perhaps she scarcely knows I have been out; and, if the nurse who has been called in to attend uncle, knows, she doubtless thinks I have been into town on some household errand.

About my ring, I must hide it; but I cannot take it off. I hurry up into my room and hurriedly turn over the contents of an old musty dressing case that had been my father's.

Where can it be? That old garnet ring, with the queer undergroove in it, that I feel sure will let this thin wedding ring into it, and so keep my secret from prying eyes.

Ah! with hot, trembling fingers I find it; it slides exactly as I thought it would do.

With that broad old ring always on, I need fear no discovery. None but myself would ever know that under it lay another, the tiny circulet of gold, binding me stronger than iron bands could do to my "dear love."

During the day my old uncle is taken much worse, and he will let no one be near him but me.

William comes in and out of the room, but I am tied to it all the day, till toward evening uncle falls into a deep sleep, and I can safely leave him with his nurse.

It was a rambling old house, Norlington farm, and it had been my only home now for nearly seven years, all of which time William Mapleson had lived as my uncle's steward and helper under the same roof.

It had been a hard, self-denying life for him, perhaps; but for me—or rather for his love of me—he would never have borne it. Till latterly, the hard old man had never discovered our love, and when he had, there was no peace under his roof.

He had raged and stormed, declaring that no niece of his should marry William Mapleson on pain of disinheritance.

Mine was always a weak, timid nature. Perhaps some women (I was no longer a young girl; my thirtieth birthday had come and gone) would have actively resented his tyranny, and asserted their rights; I could not. I was in his power, for when my parents died he had taken me in a penniless girl, and had from that time given me, in his peculiar, hard way, all that I needed to live—not but what some would have felt that they fully earned such keep.

I scarcely ever looked at it in that way.

I had been weak and helpless, alone in the world, not very strong in health, when he had come to my father's funeral; and, after paying all expenses, had simply said: "Now go and pack up your kit. You must come with me to Norlington farm. Can't say, I'm sure, what old Betty will say, but there's nothing else, as I see, to be done. Remember, my girl, 'tis not a lady's life I'm offering you; but I suppose you are not too fine a lady to know what work means?"

If I had been then, all was corrected by now. During these seven years I have worked hard and lived hard.

Yet there are those who say old Peter Glennie is worth half a million of money.

My golden week of happiness is gone, but, although William is gone, I am strangely content.

I do not regret the step I have taken.

Since the morning after my marriage, my uncle had been better and quieter. Old Mr. Baines, the lawyer, had been with him a full hour that morning, and old Jenkins had been called into his room to sign his name to some document, together with the hired nurse.

"He's a miserable old man," she said to me that same day. "I suppose it's his will we signed. What a grudge he seems to have against marriage. He growls continually in his sleep about fools getting married."

"Ah," I said, "he has never married."

"No," she laughed, "I should not say any one was the loser by that, either."

He had called her at this moment, and I was left alone to overhear a conversation between old Jenkins and Betty, who, being both deaf, were talking over the same matter in the kitchen.

"Ah, well, Betty, it's a hard day for the farm when William goes away; and how'll the old master do with a new steward at his time of life, I wonder?"

"He knows what he's about, never you fear. Do'ee think for a moment as how he don't know a letting him go is the only way o' preventing a marriage between he and Miss Nora?"

As I hear her cunning old laugh at my expense I sit hugging my love to my heart.

Old Betty always owed me a grudge for coming to Norlington farm, although she had been compelled to show me ordinary civility.

How little she knew we were married only yesterday, under her very nose, as it were. So far I had deceived him and the few other people I knew—deceived him through his own hardness. So far as I was concerned, I would have told him, only I knew, and my husband knew, that any sudden shock would, in all probability, kill him.

We should not have parted and kept true faith to each other if my strength had not been weakened when the good offer to go to Granada had come so suddenly. Then he had prayed me to marry him before he started, so that if my uncle died I might at once come out to him as his wife.

And now William was gone. The ship had sailed and I was alone, but happier far than if I had denied him his prayer.

Since the day after my marriage, when Mr. Baines had been with my uncle, he had been more quiet, but strangely anxious not to let me out of his sight.

All through the week I had not been once out of the house. Of this he seemed to take full care by keeping me near him by every pretence he could think of.

The ship had sailed only one week when my uncle died suddenly, and then on the day of his lonely funeral came the reading of the old miser's will.

I came down with my wedding ring exposed for the first time.

It was noticed at once.

Miss Glennie and Mr. Baines looked aghast at me. The doctor, who attended my poor old uncle, looked horrified, as well he might, knowing that it meant disinheritance if I married.

Old Betty's eyes had a wicked gleam in them as she said: "Perhaps you didn't know, you and William Mapleson, that you'd lose everything if you married?"

"We did not care to think of it," I said. "I should have sailed with him had not my duty kept me with your master."

At that moment I could not say "my uncle," old Betty looked so malicious.

"And so," she said, "you have gone and lost a fortune—lost a fortune to get married?"

I cannot describe the insolent sneer with which she hissed out the words.

"I made his will the 27th of this month, my dear lady, decreeing it so. When were you married?"

"On the 26th, Mr. Baines."

The old gentleman stared at me, then rapidly read the short will.

I was to be disinherited of more than half a million of money if I married from that date—so it was worded.

I was married the day before.

A knowledge of the worst is seldom so hard to bear as the suspense which precedes it.

A snob is that man or woman who is always pretending to be something better—especially richer or more fashionable—than they are.

"Parlez vous Francais?"
"No."
"Sprechen sie Deutsch?"
"Nop."
"Habla usted Espanol?"
"Nary."
"Do you speak, English?"
"Naw, I'm a Minneapolis newspaper man."

A woman, from her sex and character, has a claim to many things beside her shelter, food and clothing. She is not less a woman for being wedded; and the man who is fit to be trusted with a good wife recollects all which this implies, and shows himself at all times chivalrous, sweet spoken, considerate and deferential.

ed to $156. The Treasurer paid out during the year $138.35, leaving a balance of $1,140.24. Under the head of excursion account, the report shows $3,080 received from sale of tickets. The expenses of the excursion were $3,116.98. The deficiency of $36.98 in the excursion account was made up from the general society fund.

Col. Morris R. Hamilton, State Librarian, who had been appointed at the last meeting of the Association to prepare a paper, was called upon. The Colonel responded with an extremely interesting sketch of his thirty-five years active newspaper service as editor, correspondent and reporter.

Appropriate memorials of the late Col. E. F. Applegate, of the Monmouth Inquirer, and of Franklin S. Mills were read by Major Yard and Chas. Bechtel, respectively.

John F. Babcock of the New Brunswick Fredonian, brought up the question of "puffing" local entertainments of various characters, and offered a resolution recommending that free notices be hereafter excluded from the local columns. Mr. Killgore, of Hunterdon, said it was his custom to refuse all tickets to entertainments; he paid for all he used and made those managing the entertainments pay for their reading notices. The resolution recommending a discontinuance of free notices was adopted. Mr. Babcock offered a similar resolution against advertising agencies which demanded positions "top of column next to reading matter." It was favorably discussed, but no action was taken.

Joseph T. Crowell of Rahway, and H. D. Winton of Bergen, were appointed to read papers at the next annual meeting. Messrs. Vance and Henryman were appointed to answer questions proposed in the question box.

The Association adjourned to the State Street House dining-room, where a fine dinner closed the annual reunion.

CLEVELAND'S
SUPERIOR TO ROYAL.

Rutgers College (the New Jersey State Scientific College)
New Brunswick, N. J., July 7, 1885.

Analyses and careful examinations of Cleveland's Superior and Royal Baking Powders enable us to bear testimony to the superiority of Cleveland's. It yields more carbonic acid gas than the Royal, and contains no ammonia salts.

Cleveland's Baking Powder is made of pure substances and is absolutely free from any kind of adulteration. We endorse it most cordially as an honest and efficient article, and one that will give entirely satisfactory results.

CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND & PACIFIC RAILWAY
By reason of its central position and close relation to all principal lines East and West, at initial and terminal points, constitutes the most important mid-continental link in that system of through transportation which invites and facilitates travel and traffic between cities of the Atlantic and Pacific Coasts. It is also the favorite and best route to and from points East, Northeast and Southeast, and corresponding points West, Northwest and Southwest.

The Rock Island system includes in its main line and branches, Chicago, Joliet, Ottawa, La Salle, Peoria, Geneseo, Moline and Rock Island, in Illinois; Davenport, Muscatine, Washington, Fairfield, Ottumwa, Oskaloosa, West Liberty, Iowa City, Des Moines, Indianola, Winterset, Atlantic, Knoxville, Audubon, Harlan, Guthrie Centre and Council Bluffs, in Iowa; Gallatin, Trenton, Cameron and Kansas City, in Missouri; Leavenworth and Atchison, in Kansas; Albert Lea, Minneapolis and St. Paul, in Minnesota; Watertown in Dakota, and hundreds of intermediate cities, towns, villages and stations.

THE GREAT ROCK ISLAND ROUTE
Guarantees its patrons that sense of personal security afforded by a solid, thoroughly ballasted road-bed; smooth tracks of continuous steel rail; substantially built culverts and bridges; rolling stock as near perfection as human skill can make it; the safety appliances of patent buffers, platforms and air-brakes; and that exacting discipline which governs the practical operation of all its trains. Other specialties of this route are Transfers at all connecting points in Union Depots, and the unsurpassed comforts and luxuries of its Passenger Equipment.

The Fast Express Trains between Chicago and the Missouri River are composed of well ventilated, finely upholstered Day Coaches, Magnificent Pullman Palace Sleepers of the latest design, and sumptuous Dining Cars, in which elaborately cooked meals are leisurely eaten. "Good Digestion waiting on Appetite, and Health on both." Between Chicago and Kansas City and Atchison, are also run the Celebrated Reclining Chair Cars.

THE FAMOUS ALBERT LEA ROUTE
Is the direct and favorite line between Chicago and Minneapolis and St. Paul, where connections are made in Union Depots for all points in the Territories and British Provinces. Over this route Fast Express Trains are run to the watering places, summer resorts, picturesque localities, and hunting and fishing grounds of Iowa and Minnesota. It is also the most desirable route to the rich wheat fields and pastoral lands of interior Dakota.

Still another DIRECT LINE, via Seneca and Kankakee, has been opened between Newport News, Richmond, Cincinnati, Indianapolis and Lafayette, and Council Bluffs, Kansas City, Minneapolis and St. Paul and intermediate points.

PYÆMIA
Is the most virulent form of blood-poisoning. Less speedily fatal, but not less certainly so, is the vitiation of the blood of which the first symptoms are Pimples, Sties, Boils, and Cutaneous Eruptions. When the taint of Scrofula gives warning of its presence by such indications, no time should be lost in using AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, the only perfect and reliable medicine for the purification of the blood.

SCROFULA
Is a foul corruption in the blood that rots out all the machinery of life. Nothing will eradicate it from the system and prevent its transmission to offspring but AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. This preparation is also the only one that will cleanse the blood of Mercurial poison and the taint of Contagious Diseases. Impoverished blood is productive of

ANÆMIA,
A wretched condition indicated by Pallid Skin, Flaccid Muscles, Shattered Nerves, and Melancholy. Its first symptoms are Weakness, Languor, Loss of Nerve Force, and Mental Dejection. Its course, unchecked, leads inevitably to insanity or death. Women frequently suffer from it. The only medicine that, while purifying the blood, enriches it with new vitality, and invigorates the whole system, is

Poetry.

THE WAY OF THE WORLD.

Laugh, and the world laughs with you,
  Weep, and you weep all alone,
For the brave old earth must borrow its mirth,
  It has trouble enough of its own.
Sing, and the hills will answer,
  Sigh, it is lost on the air;
The echoes rebound to a joyful sound
  And shrink from voicing care.

Rejoice and men will seek you,
  Grieve, and they turn and go;
They want full measure of all your pleasure,
  But they do not want your woe.
Be glad, and your friends are many,
  Be sad, and you lose them all;
There are none to decline your nectared wine,
  But alone you must drink life's gall.

Feast and your halls are crowded,
  Fast, and the world goes by,
Forget and forgive—it helps you to live,
  But no man can help you to die!
There is room in the halls of pleasure
  For a long and lordly train,
But, one by one, we must all march on
  Through the narrow aisle of pain.

MISTAKEN.

Thoughtless Words and the Results They Wrought in Two Young Lives.

A cool breeze blew up from the river, It played among the reeds and tall grasses on the bank and ran lightly up the slope toward the white mansion on the hillside, fluttering the vines that fringed the wide piazza where a group of young girls sat chatting, resting, or busying themselves with dainty needle-work.

"What a delicious breeze!" exclaimed Florence Freeman, rising as she spoke. The slender, thoughtful-looking young man reclining unseen in the depths of a large easy chair just within one of the long windows glanced up from the pages of a book in which he had been absorbed, and his dark eyes followed her graceful figure admiringly.

"It sets me wild to be doing something," she continued, pacing up and down the long porch. "Do you know, girls," pausing abruptly, "we're a set of slaves?"

"O, Florry?" exclaimed a laughing voice, "now don't give us a lecture on woman's rights!"

"Never fear; that isn't what I was thinking of. We are hindered by circumstances from being and doing what we feel is within us to be and do."

"Listen, girls," interrupted another voice, "Florry is on her high horse. Now we shall see some prancing."

"Laugh away," returned Florence. "I'm in earnest. Why must we, because we happen to have drifted into a certain channel, or because a particular course is marked out for us by friends, drift on down the stream or keep on in the same course to the bitter end, even though we must smother the best there is in our natures in doing so?"

Intense feeling emphasized her words, and her unseen listener found himself wondering what personal experience had prompted them. Amy Gray lifted her eyes.

"Duty is often unpleasant," she said, "but it is best, after all, to have a settled plan and purpose and cling to them through everything. Think what a chaos would result if we all followed our own inclinations, and, worse than that, whatever might for the moment be our ruling passion."

Florence did not answer for a moment; her eyes were roving across the wide sweep of the river, where a white sail glimmered in the afternoon sunshine.

"O, yes; there must be plans, of course, and they must be carried out or nothing would be accomplished. But take special cases. There is cousin Dora, for instance. Why must she give up her painting to marry Fred Long, merely because she promised to when a mere child, and didn't know what she wanted? Of course I don't say anything against Fred. He is as good as gold, but he can't appreciate her talents. Why, he has begun to interfere with her plans already. Says she works too steadily, and wants her to give up some work she had undertaken in order to be married sooner. She only laughed over it. Of course she wouldn't say anything, but we can all see she doesn't love him. How can she, when he has no sympathy with her on that subject? Now, why can't she say so, and be free?

"She feels her responsibility," said Amy's soft voice. "She knows how devoted Mr. Long is to her."

"Sh-h! here she comes," whispered Edith Stanley as a bright-faced girl fluttered up from the garden, like a dainty white butterfly, and perched herself on the steps. A dead silence fell on the group for a moment, and then Dora turned her laughing face toward her cousin: "Go on, Florry. You were giving a lecture, weren't you? I could hear you 'orating,' but couldn't catch a word of the discourse."

"It's ended now," said Florence cooly, mentally resolving never to be so careless again in mentioning "special cases," "and unless some one has taken notes you can never hope to know anything about it, for it was quite impromptu." And, taking her cousin's arm, she marched her up and down the piazza humming a gay air.

Meanwhile within the windows the young man sat motionless, his fingers still between the pages that only a few moments ago held him spellbound, although his world had fallen in ruin about him since Florence began her "lecture." Outside the breeze rang among the tree tops and ruffled the shining bosom of the river. The August sunshine lay mellow on the grass, but he heard nothing, saw nothing.

The tea bell rang suddenly and started him out of his meditations. The girls disappeared with much chatter and gay laughter, and he rose mechanically and walked like one in a dream down through the garden and on into a little grove beyond, his one thought to be alone where no human eye could add to his torment with its questioning glance. There, under the trees, where he and Dora played in childhood, he walked to and fro, one sentence ringing in his ears like a sentence of doom: "We can all see she doesn't love him." It was hard to come down from the pinnacle where he had imagined himself crowned king of one heart.

When Dora, only 15 then, had given him her hand so confidingly as they walked together in this very grove—only it was morning then, and spring-time, and the air was filled with the scent of wild crab-apple blooms, and she wore them at her throat; how plainly he could see her now, all in white, and the pink of her cheek so like the dainty blossoms—he had taken the gift unquestioningly, and no doubts had ever assailed him. He knew her devotion to art and was proud of her success, but he had never dreamed that it would be his rival in her affections.

"Have I been so blind?" he questioned. "O, my little Dora!"

Something must be done, and that at once. Should he go to Dora and ask if these things were true. That would be like saying "Have you been deceiving me all these years?" He could not do it. He must wait, with what patience he could, until he could decide for himself. He was very thankful that Dora had not quite decided to be married in the fall, as that would be one test he could put her to. It is something to have an idea that can be acted upon at once, and he retraced his steps toward the house with this one purpose in view. How shall he find a minute in which to speak alone with Dora? He feels that he cannot bear the suspense until another day shall come, and then mutters to himself, "Fool! what if it must last a lifetime? What if I am never to know?"

As he reached the piazza a girlish voice cried out eagerly, "O, Mr. Long! where have you been hiding yourself?" and in an instant he was surrounded by a laughing group, who scolded and questioned with such vivacity that their victim found it unnecessary to say a word; it was, in fact, impossible. Then Dora rose from the piano.

"Here, Dora!" cried Edith Stanly, "here is the deserter. What shall be done to him?" And they led him before his bright-eyed judge.

Dora had never before seemed to him just as she did at that moment—so far away, as if a great gulf were fixed between them. He could scarcely believe in her bright looks, everything seemed so unreal, his life was so shaken to its foundations. It was only by a great effort that he aroused himself to make some commonplace excuse.

Dora's first careless glance at his pallid face changed to one of alarm. The light from an open window fell upon it and she saw its deadly pallor. "Why, Fred!" she cried, "you careless boy! You will be sick again. Come and have some tea." And she led the way to the dining-room. How he longed to say, "Come, Dora, I have something to tell you," and then, having her all to himself, pour out these miserable doubts and fears in her ears and so be free from them. But no; here was this crowd of chattering girls—besides, she must not know he had such doubts. Even if she said, "I love you," could he be sure she was not saying it because she believed it to be her duty. And so he finished the evening as best he could, and all night long his heart tormented him with ceaseless questionings.

Several days passed before he found an opportunity to speak alone with Dora. The house was filled with a number of young guests, and Dora must be everywhere.

Fred Long was just now taking a well-earned vacation. After years of hard work and months of illness he had come back to the home of his childhood to regain lost health and strength. He had called this the happiest summer he had known, but now an untimely frost had spoiled its beauty. Among the friends whom Dora was entertaining her cousin Florence Freeman was the only one he had previously known. Naturally they drifted together during these miserable days. With Dora he was suddenly ill at ease and restless; her quick eyes noted the change, and she looked about for a cause. Those same quick eyes soon noticed the walks and talks with cousin Florence. "No wonder she admires him," she said, with a sharp little pang at her heart, mentally contrasting tall handsome Florence with her own little self.

Presently the flock of merry school girls took flight. "Only Florence, and you, and I," said Dora; "just as it used to be." But for both the old charm was destroyed.

One day they walked together along the river bank, and Dora said, "Our playtime is done."

"Yes," he answered, "I must go back to my law books and you must have time for your painting."

A light came into her eyes. "Then I am to go on painting."

"Yes," he said, slowly. "I am making this sacrifice for you. I do not wish you to marry me until you have finished this work you have set your heart upon. It will occupy your whole winter?"

"Yes; perhaps more. Give me a year," she said, eagerly, quite unconscious of the pain her words inflicted, and only anxious for the time wherein to prove whether, after all these years of devotion, Fred could be won from her.

"Very well," came the answer, calm and steady. No trembling in the quiet tones to betray the heart's unutterable anguish as it whispered to itself, "How glad she is to be free even for a year."

As for Dora her heart was saying, "He does not care."

And then they talked of indifferent matters, these two foolish ones, and the precious hours in which they might have understood each other slipped away and were gone forever.

Once more apart, their letters were exchanged at regular intervals—Fred's kind and loving. "Of course," said Dora, "it is his duty," while Dora's were a curious study had her lover but known. Each one a little cooler, a little briefer than the last, until by the time spring had dressed the fields and woods in green again poor Fred had well-nigh made up his mind that Florence was right. Dora's heart was all in her painting; she had grown quite weary of him.

"This suspense is killing me," he would say; "but I'll wait—it is better—it will soon be over."

And Dora, working herself to a shadow over her painting, would think: "The end cannot be far off. He will soon be free."

Early in the summer Fred found himself again in the old familiar haunts, but, alas! the old joyous light was wanting everywhere. A shade, a mist, seemed hanging over anything, and Dora was farther away than ever. There was no merry guests to divide her attention; but, so absorbed, so silent, did she seem, he could hardly believe it was the same Dora he had known in other days.

A week passed by—a week of mingled paradise and torment. Sometimes he would be on the point of saying to her: "Dora, I will stand in your way no longer," but a faint hope still lingered, and he could not crush it so ruthlessly. At other times he could almost believe himself mistaken—all these months a fearful dream—when her eyes met his so earnestly and seemed filled for a moment with the old, warm light.

They sat together one day upon a little rustic seat, chatting and resting after a walk. Fred had taken some letters from his pocket which he wished to show to Dora. A picture fell from among them. Dora stooped to recover it. "Cousin Florry," she murmured, and Fred began making some commonplace remark upon its correctness. Then, glancing at his companion's face, he was startled by its deadly pallor. "Dora!" he cried. You are ill. We walked too far. You must rest."

"No, I'm not ill," she said almost sharply. "How lovely Florence is."

"Yes, indeed. She is well-nigh perfect. But there is only one Dora in all the world," taking her little cold hand in his. "Without Dora the world is meaningless to me."

Dora's eyes were scanning the distant hills. She made no reply. She was steeling her heart against him. "He wants to be true," she said, "but I will have no such love."

"Dora, you are not happy."

She started. "Not perfectly so. What mortal is?"

"It seems to me I would be if only things could be as they once were between us."

This was the first allusion he had made to the fact that he noticed any change in their relations.

Dora realized that a crisis was coming. She simply awaited in silence. She would neither strive to avert nor to hasten it.

"I have sometimes feared that you and I have been mistaken. That is the word, I think. If so, I love you too well to ask you to keep a promise which has become hateful to you."

Dora rose from her seat; a sudden fire flamed in her pale cheek. She held her hand out toward him—the dear little hand that wore his ring. Something in her air bewildered him. He stood a moment motionless, then seized the hand in both his own. She shook him off impatiently and drew the ring from her finger. Now he understood.

"Without a word, Dora?" he said, struggling for self-command as a man might battle for life against the waves of a sea.

"What is there to say?" asked Dora, her voice clear as a silver bell, while her eyes shone like two stars. And again he told himself that lie: "She is glad."

And so they parted. The tie formed almost in childhood was broken, and they went their separate ways.

Day after day Dora's pale, resolute face bent over her canvass, and she steadied her trembling hand for greater achievements. She worked too hard, they said. She was too ambitious; she put too much of her life-blood into the strokes of her brush, and a few months ended the struggle.

He came again to the dear old house beside the river; a crowd of friends had gathered there, but Dora gave them no welcome. Pale and silent she lay and stirred not a finger nor an eyelash for any of their tears. He stood there with Florence, and that still form between them; its smiling lips were no more silent now than they had been in life. A dumb patience was marked on the sweet face, but they never guessed its meaning.

"If she might only have lived!" sobbed Florence.

Fred spoke not, but the bitter cry of his heart was, "If I could only know that she loved me!"

And they never dreamed, these two—her nearest and dearest—that they had slain her.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—A statement in the New York World that Samuel Woodworth was the author of the "Old Oaken Bucket" recalls to my mind the following reminiscence of my boyhood days: Woodworth worked as a journeyman printer on the Commercial Journal, published in New Haven, my native place; one Sunday afternoon he took a walk and in his perambulations was met by the then venerable Dr. Skinner, at that period High Constable of the town. Woodworth was arrested the next day for a violation of the Sunday law which made it a penal offence for any person to go between the rising and setting of the sun on the Sabbath day anywhere except to church, or on an errand of mercy, which was to go for a doctor, or nurse, or to the druggist for medicine, and was fined one dollar and costs. He paid the fine and was so disgusted at the law that he left the State and went to work, I think, on the Commercial Advertiser, in Chatham Square, New York city. Woodworth was not an intemperate man, nor was he drunk when he wrote the "Bucket" as some of the papers have recently stated. In those days it was customary for journeymen mechanics at 11 a. m., to go out and get a drink of liquor—that was before the drugging of liquor, when, if you purchased ale, beer or grog, the article was pure and unadulterated. How it has since changed! Woodworth and a fellow journeyman while taking a "11 a. m. outing" visited a saloon across the street from their place for a glass of beer. The proprietor had just tapped a new cask and his companion remarked that "it was the nicest beer he ever tasted" and asked Woodworth if he had ever tasted anything so good, whereupon Woodworth replied that he had. He said that the most palatable and highly pleasing drink he had ever tasted was from his father's well after he had been at work in the field. Returning to his work and while at his case he set up the "Bucket" which was published in the paper. Lafayette when in New York in 1824, visited the lodge of Free Masons of which Woodworth was a member. It was then Woodworth wrote the following song, which was sung by the lodge to the tune of "Hail to the Chief":

Dark was the hour when Columbia despairing,
  Breathed her petitions for succor in vain;
While in her valleys the war-torch was glaring,
  Sweeping her hamlets and cots from the plain.
Wounded and bleeding her sons were retiring,
  Flushed with success the foeman pursued;
Freedom and hope seemed in tortures expiring,
  Heroes were sleeping in death unsubdued.

Great source of light she cried,
No more thy presence hide,
Is there no hope we surely [illegible]
As soon as the mourner spoke
Bright rays of glory broke
Around a young hero, the brave Lafayette.

Washington saw, and with wisdom elated
  Pressed to his bosom the chivalrous boy,
Tyranny saw, and with fury unabated
  Sought like a Herod the youth to destroy.

Hail, friend of Washington!
Hail, gallic God-like son,
Friend and companion in each dear [illegible],
Hail, friend of Washington!
Hail, gallic God like son,
Long may Free Masons thee hail Lafayette.

CHARLES S. A. DAVIS.
Plainfield, New Jersey.

PATCHED ELBOWS.

"Look, mother, those interesting elbows are out again! I don't know what old Toppleton will say."

As he spoke, Dave Baldwin turned about and showed his mother the rents where two very active elbows had worked themselves out of the prison. Mrs. Baldwin was frying griddle-cakes for Dave's breakfast. She looked up and said in her pleasant way:

"Well, Dave, the thing that made the trouble will cure it. Work did it, and work will cure it, and next month you will be able, from your earnings, to have a new coat, so that again you can say, what made holes will cover them. In a few minutes I will sew up those holes."

"Sorry to make you so much trouble mother. I'm an awful boy."

Thereupon Mother Baldwin told him she would stop his mouth with a griddle-cake if he did not stop that style of talking.

"I shouldn't object, mother, to looking as well as Frank Thompson."

"I should if I thought you got your clothes the same way. I was at the Thompsons the other day, and Mrs. Thompson groaned and said she should be glad when Frank got his bills paid, but clerks must dress in any store, she supposed. Before you and Frank went into Toppleton's store you and he were glad to pick greens in the city lots and bring them home for dinner, and I would rather you'd be a little dandelion-picker for life, rather than having you owing everybody and never paying them."

To this sentiment Mother Baldwin gave emphasis by the vigorous landing of another griddle-cake on Dave's plate.

"I think young people ought to grow up with a horror of debt, for it is one kind of dishonesty if you owe people because you have bought something you know you may not pay for. Then, if you expect when you buy to be able to pay, but still don't pay, and so keep people out of their just due, after a while conscience gets easy on this debt subject, and says: 'Oh any time will do,' and who knows? If I get easy about what I owe a man, I may get easy on the subject of taking something outright from him. No, Dave, I want to bring you up right."

Still again did Mother Baldwin give emphasis to her words by the prompt and hearty landing of a griddle-cake on the hungry boy's plate.

"That's good, mother. You give 'em big and hot. I'll promise to be honest."

"If you don't young man," said Mother Baldwin, with a ringing laugh, "you may speak for another cook. The very first evening I possibly can, I will engage to cover those active elbows with two as neat patches as I can put on. They will do till you can buy a new coat."

Dave and Frank that morning walked together to Toppleton's "Dry Goods Bazar," where they were clerks.

"Oh, that is a beauty!" exclaimed Dave, noticing one of Frank's sleeve buttons. The style was that of a blue stone in a cross form, set within a rich gold band.

"Like it?" asked Frank. "The ladies all think it very fine. When I sell 'em a piece of silk, I just carelessly lay my hand on it and say: 'It shows well against jewelry,' and it is just—just—irresistible."

"Must have cost something."

"Hem—well! 'Taint paid for yet, but that is all right. By wearing it I'm advertising jewelry for the firm where I got it, and that is pay."

"Don't know about it, but seems to me I feel easier when I pay for a thing."

"Oh, nonsense," replied Frank, sharply. He did not wish to be reminded of the subject of debt, and why should his old companion in days of dandelion picking worry him with his sensitive conscience?

That night Dave's mother covered his "enterprising elbows" with two very neat patches. Only a pair of sharp eyes would have detected these honest covers.

"Say, Dave," said Frank, the next day, eyeing closely his fellow-clerk, "are those patched elbows paid for?"

"Patched elbows?" asked Jim Blake, a clerk, with a rough voice. "Paid-for? Has Dave any strange notions about the subject of debt?"

"Yes," said Dave, coolly and pleasantly, "and I am not ashamed of them, or my clothes either."

"Indeed!" said Frank, contemptuously.

"Come, boys! Attend to your work!" exclaimed a voice.

The clerks all looked up. It was Toppleton himself. There was an awful silence in that part of the store.

"Guess I made a mistake," exclaimed Frank. "I'll look out for the old man next time."

A very serious mistake, that night, Toppleton thought somebody was making. Almost all of his clerks had left. Chancing to look out of his counting-room he saw an arm that, reaching round the corner of a set of shelves on which were expensive broadcloths, abstracted a fragment and then was quickly withdrawn.

"Indeed!" thought Toppleton. "That was a neat operation. Look here! What did I see on that arm, or the wrist, rather? Something blue? Humph!"

The next day the clerks wondered why Toppleton seemed to be bowing so much when near them, stooping down to the level of their hands.

"Funny," said Jim Blake "I thought Toppleton would turn cannibal and eat my hands to-day."

"I thought he was going off with my sleeve-buttons," remarked Frank. "He said they were a pretty pattern, and eyed them covetously."

Toppleton himself said. "If that thief is round to-night fishing cloth off from that shelf, he may have an unexpected bite."

That night, when almost all the clerks had left the store, that same arm began to slyly fish round the corner of the shelves on which were sorted the expensive cloths, and there was indeed an "unexpected bite." It was vigorously grappled by somebody hidden under the counter. When the "fisherman" and his "game" were brought face to face, Frank Thompson saw Toppleton on the end of his line! It was the last day that Frank had a chance to "fish" or do any work in Toppleton's store.

The next evening Dave Baldwin said to his mother: "I am sorry to report that elbows show a rent, not in the patches, but one side."

"Don't you worry. I saw it was giving way when I put the patches on, but I couldn't mend it then. I'll slip a needle through it in a jiffy. Let me take it now."

"What shall I put on?"

"Oh—oh—throw on my sack, if you can't do better. You needn't be ashamed of it. It's paid for," said the debt-hating mother.

"Good evening."

It was a man's voice. In astonishment Dave and Mother Baldwin looked up.

"Excuse me. You did not seem to hear my rap at the front door, and as it was open I thought I would step in and rap here—but excuse me."

"It's Toppleton!" whispered Dave, "Dear me! Dear me! Let me get behind you! No, I won't!" Then Dave came forward, boldly and manfully, arrayed in his mother's sack.

"Mother, this is Mr. Toppleton. Excuse my looks. I—I—"

"Fact is, Mr. Toppleton, I was just mending his coat, and he—he"

"Oh, no apologies, madam," said Mr. Toppleton, grinning and rubbing his hands. "I couldn't help hearing you say it was paid for, and that is not a bad motto to follow—to pay for what you buy as soon as possible. I wish one of my clerks had followed that rule; but I suppose you know about it, and I won't say anything more on that point. I came to say that I thought young David was a trusty boy, and I would like to promote him. There is an open place in a higher department, and he is welcome to it."

The next day Dave took his new position in the store. Various explanations were given by his fellow-clerks.

"There," said Jim Blake, "I can explain it all. It is owing to the fact that Toppleton heard our talk in the store about 'patched elbows.' I mean to put a patch on mine right off."

He did not by any means, but the next week bought an expensive suit which, at the end of two years, he had not paid for.

QUIET NEIGHBORS.

"I have so much trouble with my neighbors," said Spook to a stranger the other day, "they are such persistent borrowers, such tattling gossips, and such critical fault-finding people there is no living with them."

"Well, that is strange," replied the stranger, "I have no trouble whatever with my neighbors."

"Don't they borrow?"

"No."

"Nor gossip?"

"No."

"Nor shoot your dog?"

"No."

"Well where do you live?"

"I'm a keeper of the cemetery. I live in a grave-yard."

REMEDIES AND THEIR RESULTS.

"Good morning, sir."

"Morning."

"I—er—beg your pardon."

"I beg yours, sir."

"May I ask you what you gave your horse for the botts?"

"Turpentine, sir."

"Oh, thanks—er—er—good morning."

"Good morning."

"Good morning, sir."

"Good morning."

"Beg pardon, but did I understand you to say that you gave your horse turpentine for the botts?"

"Yes; sir."

"Well, I tried it and it killed my horse."

"It killed mine, sir."

"Oh—er—er—good morning."

"Good morning."

A CURIOUS EPITAPH.

The subjoined epitaph appears in Mr. James Payn's novel, "Thicker than Water." In his story two ladies are rambling about a country churchyard and come upon a tombstone to the memory of Sarah Dempster:

Here lies a poor woman who always was tired,
Who lived in a house where help was not hired;
Her last words on earth were—"Dear friends, I am going,
Where washing ain't done, nor sweeping, nor sewing;
But everything there is exact to my wishes,
For where they don't eat there is no washing up dishes.
I'll be where loud anthems will always be ringing,
But having no voice I'll get clear of the singing.
Don't mourn for me now, don't mourn for me never,
I'm going to do nothing for ever and ever."

One feels with what delight many a poor woman would hail the prospect of "doing nothing for ever." The wife of an ordinary laboring man spends her time in cooking, scouring, washing, mending; except on Sundays, and perhaps on Saturday nights, she never stirs outside her own dwelling. The proverbial mill horse, compared with her, leads an easy life, and the want of rest, want of color, want of freshness, material and mental, always strikes me as about the saddest wants in a working woman's life. Therefore we must not blame poor Sarah Dempster if "doing nothing for ever and ever" was her ideal of happiness in the future life.—London Society.

SHORT COURTSHIP.

Some one has estimated that the time thrown away in this world courting the girl you want to marry, and who is ready to marry you, would build all the railroads and bridges and tunnels and factories and public buildings. The white race should take a lesson in this from the colored people. The other day a likely young colored man stood at a gate at Birmingham, Ala. A likely young colored woman came along with a dog.

"Hi, dar!" he called, "mebbe you want to sell dat dog?"

"No, sah."

"Mebbe your name is Lucinda?"

"Yes sah."

"I allers dote on that name. Ize called Gawge."

"Dat's pleasin."

"Iz lookin', you know?"

"Yes-yes."

"Got money saved up, an' a stidy job ahead. Shall I speak to de old man?"

"He's in Orleans."

"Den I'll see de ole woman."

"She's dead."

"Wall, den I'll ax you to be my wife right now."

"You's foolin'."

"Deed no."

"Hain't got nobody else?"

"Nobody, tall."

"Reckon we'll hitch?"

"Co'se we will—can't help it."

"Wall, den, I'll say yes, an' to-night you come down to Mrs. Grumley's kitchen an' we'll sot de day an' sorter get acquainted."

"Lucinda, I—"

"Go 'long, Gawge! Ize dun said yes, an' dat's nuff. Come airly."

"So long, 'Cinda!"

"By-by, Gawge!"

"My dear, what makes a train move?" asked McSwilligen of his spouse.

"The engine, of course," replied Mrs. McS.

"Mistaken," said her husband.

"What is it, then, I'd like to know?"

"The freight, my dear, makes the cargo."

* * *

Flossy—Come Johnnie, let's play we's married.

Johnnie—Very well, Flossy.

Flossy—Come, den, come into dinner. How do you like de dinner to-day, my dear?"

Johnnie—It is a good dinner. A very good dinner indeed.

Flossy—Oh! you musn't say dat. You must say it ain't wuf a damn. If I couldn't cook better dan dat I would hire myself out for a shape in a dry goods store.

STATE SOVEREIGNTY.

The matter of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company's application, now before Congress, asking national authority to bridge Staten Island Sound for the purpose of securing a natural and eligible water terminus for that company's transportation business, appears to have created a lively contest in New Jersey.

Arguments for and against the project were heard by a Committee of the House of Assembly at Trenton the other day, and among those who spoke earnestly and eloquently in opposition to the bridge was a lawyer of distinction and well known as a Republican partisan of loyal pretensions. Towering to the height of his accustomed dignity, with thundering voice he cried aloud—"The State of New Jersey is a sovereignty as well as the United States."

He spoke the truth then and there.

Did the gentleman know or think that by advocating such a doctrine he was thoroughly endorsing what he and kindred Republican leaders had time and again bitterly denounced as the Democratic heresy of State Rights, as opposed to their own cherished and avowed idea of a Nation.

The Democratic party has ever maintained, and continues to maintain, that all powers not clearly vested in the General Government by the Constitution belong exclusively to the respective States, to be legislated upon, adjudicated and controlled by such States as individual sovereignties.

That is Constitutional Democracy.

Therein exists a radical difference between the Democratic and Republican parties.

It is orthodox Democracy to say that "New Jersey is a sovereignty."

Whether the powers granted by the Constitution to Congress are sufficient to legally authorize the building of a bridge to connect New Jersey with New York without State consent, we do not purpose at this time to discuss, but we are sure that New Jersey possesses many sovereign rights, and duty bids her official guardians to see that those rights are in no manner trampled upon or endangered.

The Democratic party would not abstract from the General Government a single granted privilege, but, at the same time, it would as carefully preserve to each State every particle of reserved power.

That makes New Jersey sovereign under the Constitution.

That and that alone can perpetuate the Union.

New Jersey is sovereign, yet, if the partisan Republican claim, so often put forth, that we are a Consolidated Nation instead of a Union of co-equal sovereign States was carried into governing effect, her independence would soon become a thing of the past, swallowed up by despotic centralization.

To hear the sound old Democratic doctrine of State Rights now eulogized and commended as a safe refuge by partisan Republican lips is certainly refreshing, and proves beyond a doubt, that intelligence and truth are on the onward march.

The world moves.

Democracy lives.

New Jersey is a sovereignty.

So is each of her sister States.

THE JERSEY CENTRAL LOSES.

Opinions were delivered Tuesday morning, at Trenton, in the State Court of Chancery. The most important case decided was that of Alfred Mills, et al. executors, against the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey. The result is the setting aside of the New Jersey Central lease to the Reading Road. The plaintiffs are executors of Stephen Vail, and the bill in the suit was filed Aug. 29, 1883. The complainants, as executors, held 2,048 shares and were opposed to the lease, and the question was whether the directors had a right to make the lease with so many shares opposing. Chancellor Runyon, after discussing the case at length, decides that the complainants are entitled to relief in equity, and there is no evidence that they ever acquiesced in the lease. The Chancellor strongly upholds the right of a minority of stockholders to a voice in actions affecting their rights so vitally as this does. No body less powerful than the Legislature could rob them of this right. If the majority act in defiance of the minority's wishes they do so at their peril. There is a decree entered declaring the lease null and void.

Mr. Gladstone will form a new Cabinet. John Morley will be Chief Secretary for Ireland.

John W. Morris, of New Brunswick, sold to the Chicago Museum the smallest pair of horses in the world. The price paid was the modest little sum of $800.

The Irish-American desires to know why Mr. Blaine has nothing to say or give for Ireland and the national cause there, when last year he was so vigorously paraded as the Irishman's friend?

Congressman Green has ordered the apportionment of seeds distributed by the commissioners of agriculture, and the farmers of the district should send for their quota to their County Agricultural Societies.

The Postmaster General has decided to fill the places of the hundred Presidential Postmasters whose commissions have already expired, before taking up other cases. During the present month the commissions of fifty-one Presidential Postmasters will expire.

A bill has been prepared and presented at this session of the Legislature, providing for a Jury Commission of three from each county, to be selected in joint session and to have entire charge of the drawing and selecting of jurors. A fine Republican scheme, which will fail to pass.

The whole country again sympathizes with Secretary Bayard in his sudden bereavement by the death of his wife, which occurred at her home in Washington, on Sunday last. The recent tragic death of her daughter proved too great a shock for her, in her invalid state. The funeral ceremonies on Tuesday were largely attended.

In the House of Representatives on Monday last, under the call of States, Mr. McAdoo, of New Jersey, introduced a bill to limit the hours of United States letter carriers. Mr. McAdoo will vigorously push the bill so that it will probably be passed at this session of Congress. The bill limits the work of the letter carrier to eight hours a day.

A GRAVE MISTAKE.

In spite of the varied opinions and expectations of men of many minds, the nominations of His Honor, the Mayor, as communicated to the Council, at its last meeting, for approval and confirmation, were not so surprising as was thought possible and probable. Dr. W. C. Boone, who has so satisfactorily filled the office of City Physician for the past year, was unanimously reconfirmed; while the position of Overseer of the Poor was given to L. F. Wadsworth, Esq., than whom no more competent officer could have been named. Mr. James Mullen for Street Commissioner was rejected, and the present Corporation Counsel, Mr. Craig A. Marsh, was accepted by the endorsement of seven votes.

The presentation of the name of the last, we feel justified in saying, was against the wishes and preferences of a large number of our community. No one will deny that the case of the City has never been more ably nor oftener successfully represented in the courts of the State than by the counselor of whom we speak, but his renomination was not in accordance with the sentiment of the people at large. Leaving the question of politics out of the affair —although the Democratic party to which the Mayor belongs, and which has been given the controlling vote in the Council by the act of the people, should justly be allowed the command of so important an office—it was right and proper that a change should be made, and some other equally efficient lawyer nominated as the Counsel to the Corporation. The people are reasonable enough to realize that in offices of minor importance, the right of the victors and the reward due the victorious should be considered, and it was not proposed to thrust the will of the people forward in interference with the power and the personal preferences of the Mayor, but in the appointment of which we speak the demand of the people for a change was especially emphatic and particularly proper.

Mayor Rockfellow was just entering upon the last year of his term with the respect and endorsement of the community whose interests he had cared for so carefully and so satisfactorily. During his reign the city has increased in health, wealth and numbers. Plainfield was never so prosperous, nor has its growth in fine store buildings and residences ever been equalled in past years. Yet by reason of his recent action all credit due the Mayor is overlooked, the endorsement of the people is overcome, and the gratitude of the community is overshadowed.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Both branches of the legislature met at Trenton last Monday night at the usual hour, and a large number of the "third house" also put in an appearance. In the house the hearing of the Clark-McDonald contested election case was taken up. Fraud was charged by both sides, and the ranging of the testimony showed that neither was much out of the way.

Mr. A. F. R. Martin introduced a bill which makes provision for the sale of lands in fee for unpaid taxes. It provides that the common council or other legislative body of any city may make application to the circuit court for the appointment of three freeholders as commissioners of adjustment, to be paid for their services whatever compensation the court may fix. They shall have full power to investigate all assessments, and water rents, and to order the sale of land in fee whenever they deem the same legal and necessary. The purchaser of such lands is to be amply protected in every way by the city, in case any invalidity of the title should be discovered. This law applies to all lands, etc., where the taxes remain unpaid for the space of one year.

This bill has been prepared with the advice and consent of counsel for the cities of Elizabeth, Rahway, Newark and other cities in order to compel the payment of taxes, and is deemed satisfactory to all parties concerned.

Mr. Martin introduced another bill to extend the provisions of the law to the opening of streets, as well as to the improvements of the same. Also, another leaving it optional with common councils of cities to abolish poll tax. This bill also provides for the publication of the personal tax delinquents in the newspapers, in the same way as the real estate delinquents.

These bills have the approval of the legislative committee of the Newark common council, and are not in the least of a partisan character.

It is rumored that the joint committee on State prison intend investigating the discipline of that institution, with the object of ascertaining why it is that male and female convicts are allowed such liberties as have been acknowledged to exist.

In the Senate the Parker resolutions, petitioning congress against the bridging of the Arthur Kill, were laid over until Thursday in the senate, on motion of Mr. Youngblood, by the following vote: Yeas —Bogert, Chattle, Fish, Griggs, Hanes, Large, Moon, Nichols, Thompson, Vanderbilt, Youngblood—11. Nays—Brinkerhoff, Carter, Chase, Cramer, Gardner, Herring, Livingston, McBride, Pancoast, Miller—10. Gardner fought hard for their instant adoption. Youngblood, Fish and Vanderbilt favored delay, at the same time saying that they would vote for them next day. They wanted decent consideration and there was no reason for such haste as was proposed.

A substitute was reported for Martin's arrears of taxes bill.

Resolutions of sympathy with the struggle for home rule in Ireland were offered by Mr. Tenuity, and referred to the committee on federal relations.

Resolutions for the immediate examination of the Soldiers' home in Newark were referred. The bill extending the jurisdiction of the Newark District court to Essex county was laid over, on motion of Mr. Harrigan. Mr. Peal withdrew his bill prohibiting the use of fire arms in theatres. Only one bill was passed—that extending the time for the completion of railroads to two years.

Among the bills introduced were the following: Enabling street car companies to use the cable system for motive power; and providing a general system of elevated roads in cities, a general act against pool selling, etc., fixing district clerks $25 for charging for drawing papers.

Mr. Doremus introduced, in behalf of a Newark ward improvement association, a bill which revokes all licenses in cities on July 1 following the granting of such licenses, and requiring thereafter that no applications shall be granted unless indorsed by at least three freeholders.

In the senate Mr. Nichols' local option bill was passed to a second reading, and in all probability will pass the senate. Senator Fish introduced two bills, one to abolish the office of county auditor in Essex, and the other to condemn land for a public market in Newark. Senator Gardner's tenure of office bill passed the senate and will reach the house to-day. Senator Herring introduced a bill for a German interpreter in counties having 5,000 German population.

In the Senate on Tuesday, the Parker substitute resolution opposing the bridging the Arthur Kills, created quite a breeze. Senators Fish, Vanderbilt and Nichols opposed its passage in long speeches. Senator Gardner made an argument in favor of the resolution that was very similar to the arguments already advanced in the House. He had no new ideas, and necessarily on this question very few old ones. He tried his hand at ridicule, but the funniest things he said failed to raise a laugh. After some more desultory discussion the amendments were voted on and killed by a vote of 5 to 15, Senators Bogert, Fish, Nichols, Vanderbilt and Youngblood voting for them, and all the other Senators except Mr. Miller, who was absent, against them. The resolution was then adopted by the following vote: In the affirmative—Messrs. Brinkerhoff, Chase, Carter, Chattle, Cramer, Gardner, Griggs, Hanes, Herring, Large, Livingston, McBride, Moon, Pancoast, Thompson and Youngblood—16.

In the negative—Messrs. Bogert, Fish, Nichols and Vanderbilt—4.

Absent—Mr. Miller.

In the House on Tuesday the following bills were introduced:

Mr. Gonnenberg—Extending to boroughs the provisions of the Police Tenure of Office law.

Mr. Hudspeth—To provide for a board of assessors to consist of three persons to be appointed by the Mayor for three years each, no more than a majority to belong to any political party; they are to have an annual salary of $1,500.

Mr. Dayton—Provides that every indictment shall be tried at the term in which issue is joined, unless the Court for good cause shall allow further time, and if such indictment is not tried the defendant shall be discharged. In all cases the Prosecutor must give two days' notice of trial.

Mr. Pfeiffer—Provides for the payment of county tax out of the first moneys received by cities, towns and townships.

Mr. Pfeiffer—Relative to private draws on bridges, providing that they shall be twenty-five feet wide; to be opened at all practicable times for the passage of all vessels, to have a suitable person to attend to each, etc.

Mr. Besson—Enabling cities having less than fifty policemen to increase to that number (refers to Hoboken).

Mr. Besson—Authorizing cities to purchase as much land within their territory as they may deem necessary for a public park, the expense incurred not to exceed the proportion of $5,000 to each 1,000 inhabitants.

Mr. Besson—Providing for the biennial election of Mayors where they are now elected annually.

Mr. Besson—Authorizing cities to appropriate money to assist and maintain charity hospitals.

Mr. Besson—Enabling cities bordering on rivers to construct and maintain public baths.

Mr. Ten Broeck—Providing for the appointment of County Auditors by Boards of Freeholders.

Mr. Ten Broeck.—Provides that in suits for the enforcement of liens persons claiming interest on the property involved shall have their liens bound by proceedings and judgment.

Mr. Winton.—Authorizing Boards of Improvement Commissioners to change the time of annual election.

The Assembly Committee on Fisheries gave a hearing in Mr. Pintard's bills against steam dredging for oysters and clams. Mr. Pintard himself spoke for the bill and declared that it was designed for the benefit of every oyster dealer from South Amboy to Sandy Hook. The steam dredges, if permitted to go on, would monopolize and ruin the business of these men. Capt. Brown, of Keyport, also spoke for the bill. Mr. Hudspeth, a member of the house, appeared before the committee on behalf of a few New Jersey and many New York oyster dealers. He said the bill was a vicious one and designed to exclude New Yorkers altogether. Joseph Elsworth and Joseph Simmons, extensive dealers, also addressed the committee against the bill. The hearing was then adjourned till next week.

Mr. Harrigan tried to revive his "gas resolutions," but the effort failed.

Mr. Hudspeth introduced a bill authorizing a change of the name of the Reform church of Greenville, N. J., to "the Greenville Reform church of Jersey City, N. J.," and one amending the act of 1874 regarding limitations of actions.

Bills extending the jurisdiction of the Newark City District Court and extending the time for the completion of railroads whose terms expire this year were passed.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

Now is the time to scatter food among the copses and covers for the benefit of the quail.

The Club House of the Middlesex Gun Club on the grounds near Dunellen, is about completed. The regular weekly shoots of the club are on Saturdays.

Game Protective Societies are being organized all over the State. We hear of two new ones—"The Rumson Game and Fish Protective Society" of Rumson's Neck, Monmouth county, and the "Camden County Game Protective Society" of Haddonfield, Camden county.

The Midway Gun Club, of Matawan and South Amboy, have elected the following officers: President, James Lambertson; Vice-President, E. F. Taylor; Treasurer, James Van Brackle; Trustees, James Lambertson, James G. Ivins, Charles Brown. The prizes offered for the year are: First prize, club badge or $30; second, silver pitcher; third, dozen silver spoons; fourth, cake basket.

The Elizabeth Gun Club has broken ground for its new club house, to be located on Irvington avenue in that city. The building, when completed, will be a handsome structure, capable of furnishing every accommodation to the wants of shooters. The club now numbers over one hundred members, and includes in its ranks several crack shots. Its finances are in excellent condition and the membership constantly increasing.—Herald.

W. W. Lever of Elizabeth shot a match last Saturday afternoon on Erb's grounds, near Newark, with Samuel Badgly of Montclair for $200 a side, twenty-five birds, one barrel, find trap, and handle. Lever was to stand twenty-eight yards from the traps, and his opponent twenty-five yards. Badgley put on his shooting cap, bet some more money on himself, and shot out Lever on the twenty-fourth bird. The score reads:

Bodgly ..11101, 11111, 11111, 11110 0011—Killed, 20
Lever....11011, 01111, 11101, 11111, 1000.—Killed, 18

It will be seen that the winner killed 18 birds out of 19, and that in the face of a heavy snow storm.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

There is to be a wedding in high life in a short time.

Our Town Committee meets on Saturday evening next.

Our post office is still in charge of Postmaster Decker.

A Mechanics' Ball is advertised in Arcanum Hall for Wednesday evening, Feb. 17. Prof. Eugene Reily will furnish music.

The Old Folks' Sociable was largely attended on Tuesday evening last, and all present pronounced it the best one of the season.

The annual election for officers of our fire department will be held on next Tuesday evening. There is not the same excitement over the election as last year.

In the matter of the opening of North avenue the Court of Common Pleas at the present term decided the manner of assessment of damages wrong, and gave the applicants a right to review the assessment and correct the returns.

At the regular monthly meeting of Bucket and Engine Co., No. 1, held on last Tuesday evening, John N. Wilcox was nominated for Chief of the Fire Department, Benjamin H. Woodruff for 1st Asst., and Anson Smith for 2d Asst.

Miss M. E. Fallow of Hackensack, N. J., has been engaged as teacher and took charge on last Monday of the department in our public school, which Miss S. Spicer has occupied for a number of years, she having resigned her charge.

The loss by fire of Mr. Henry Hosford's property a short time ago has been amicably adjusted by Mr. Joseph Moffett of Westfield, and Mr. Edward Smith of New York city. They fix the amount at $7 575. The loss on furniture was adjusted some time ago.

J. Warren Brown has given out the contract for his new dwelling house on the corner of Dudley and Lawrence avenues. The cellar is being excavated. Mr. Johnson has the carpenter work and William Smith the mason work. The house is to be of Queen Ann style of architecture.

At the regular monthly meeting of Empire Engine Co., No. 2, held on Tuesday evening last, Isaac Seely was elected Foreman; Patrick Traynor, 1st Asst.; Wm. Stitt, 2d Asst.; George W. Peek, Secretary. The company also placed in nomination for officers of the Fire Department, Patrick Traynor for Chief; T. H. Lov. 1st Ass't., and George Todd 2d Assistant.

IT is now fashionable for women to scent themselves with perfumery to indicate their condition in life. The maiden is distinguished by violet, the bride by roses, the widow by lavender, the betrothed girl by heliotrope. There isn't much of a market for heliotrope in this city just now.

BISHOP O'FARRELL, of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Trenton, has appointed Rev. Mr. Lawler to succeed Rev. T. J. O'Hanlon of the borough as the pastor of St. John's church in Dunellen. Rev. T. J. O'Hanlon, the former pastor, will still retain charge of St. Joseph's church in North Plainfield.

THE most perfect cast in any play that has been presented at Music Hall since its opening, was that which rendered Sardou's emotional drama of "Diplomacy," Thursday evening of last week. Without exception all were talented and skillful, while, besides, the ladies and the costumes were unusually handsome.

BUT a light house attended the presentation of "My Partner" at Music Hall, Tuesday evening. Louis Aldrich was as strong in his part of the tender hearted lion of a miner as ever, while Miss Dora Goldthwaite was as pathetic and penitent as possible in face and action. The other members of the cast were some good and some—bad.

ONE of Plainfields young residents has become quite noted for his athletic and acrobatic feats in skating rink entertainments. We allude to Frank Cook, who does some very creditable work in his new act—"Caledonian Sports and Scottish Pastimes." His feats consist mainly of high kicking and vaulting. We learn that he intends traveling with Forepaugh's Circus in the Spring.

HAVING defeated Rutgers College and worried the Somerville boys, the Crescent polo team will try its chances against the "Temples" of Elizabeth, to-morrow evening. The match which is to take place at The Crescent, is the first of a series of five that are to be played; and although the visitors are a much heavier lot of men than the home team, yet a close and exciting game seems probable.

THE New Jersey Central Division of the P. & R. Railroad employees organized a benefit organization Thursday night of last week, with the following officers: President, J. S. One Church's Pew Rents.

The recently published financial statement of the Crescent avenue church, shows a most enviable condition of affairs, brought about by a steady increase in the rental of the pews. Last year's rental was $9,465 12, which is probably more than any other two churches combined.

Somerset County Teacher's Association.

The next meeting of the Somerset County Teacher's Association, will be held in the Bound Brook public school building, to-morrow morning, beginning at 10 o'clock. Mr. Charles E. Boss, Principal of the North Plainfield school, and Miss Bainbridge of his staff, will contribute to the programme articles on "Practical Work" and "Introductory Geography," respectively.

County Ratables.

The preliminary report of State Comptroller Anderson has been printed, and gives important and interesting statistics. The abstract of ratables or valuations of real estate and personal property throughout the State is given, and shows a large increase. The total valuation in the State is $[illegible]3,955.84, an increase of $10 709 [illegible]. Union county valuation $24,883,000 00; increase $328,900.00.

The Church Organ Breaks Down.

The organ of the Crescent avenue church is ashamed of itself, it seems, even if the congregation is not; and so the organ has refused to work any longer. Consequently the melodeon from the School room was used during the services of last Sunday, and the Trustees will probably save enough in time off the blower's account to make up the few hundreds needed to complete the small fund necessary for a new church organ.

Gas or Electricity.

We publish in our proceedings of the Council meeting of Monday evening, a communication from the Plainfield Gas Light Co.; that with the same noticeable enterprise shown in the building of its new works, purposes to have its say in furnishing electric light for the city if the gas must go. We also present in the same place, the proposition of the Plainfield Electric Light Co., which states what it is ready to do, how and where it will do it, and the cost.

A Home Rule Mass Meeting.

The Home Rule Club of Plainfield will hold a mass meeting in Reform Hall, Wednesday evening of next week, at 8 o'clock. Mayor Rockfellow will preside, Gen'l James R. O'Beirne will deliver the address of the occasion, and several other gentlemen have also consented to speak. The object of the meeting is to express sympathy and give material aid to the Irish Parliamentary Party now struggling to obtain through honest legislation, a fair government for their long oppressed country.

Peace Declared.

We thought the easiest way would prove the only and the best. The 'phones removed from the Truck and Hose houses have been returned, and thus was accomplished what might have been accomplished in the same way some time ago. The Company didn't treat the Chairman of the Lamps Committee with the courtesy he deserved and which is also his due; consequently the latter was not disposed to give way to any desire for a certain line of courteous treatment laid out by the Company as its right. Arbitration, however, has amicably settled the matter to the satisfaction of those whose dignities were concerned, and the convenience of the firemen.

Anderson—Ketcham.

At the Crescent avenue church, Thursday evening of last week, Mr. Robert Willis Anderson and Miss Fanny T. Ketcham of this city, were united in marriage by the Rev. Mr. Noble of Cornwall, N. Y., a brother-in-law of the bride. The church was filled with invited guests and others, including some of the most prominent society people of Plainfield. Before the ceremony the audience was charmed with selections on the organ from the popular compositions of the day, among which was a waltz by the groom that had been dedicated to the Plainfield Bicycle Club of which he is a member and from which the bride received one of the most valuable and serviceable of the many wedding guests.

On the Other Foot.

Somebody connected with the Public Schools wanted the adoption by the Council of an ordinance restricting the distribution of circulars to a certain distance from the Schools. Yet during the past week the residents all about have been called to their front doors by scores of school children with tickets to sell, and circulars to hand out. Six times a day is often enough for servants and housekeepers to be called from their work to say NO to the question "Won't yer-buy-er-ticket, Missus." Restrict such nuisance to "within two blocks of the schools".

New New Jersey Postmasters.

A commission was forwarded Saturday last to Fred. B. Bardon to be Postmaster at Madison, Morris county. This is a Presidential office and pays a salary of $1,400 per annum. Commissions were forwarded at the same time to Enoch H. Opdyke, to be Postmaster at Everittstown, Hunterdon county, and Sarah De P. Tompkins to be Acting Postmistress at the town of Anglesea. The Postmaster General has also appointed the following fourth-class Postmasters in New Jersey: At Neshanic Station, Calvin Corle; at Peapack, William W. Horton; at Valley, Charles Opdyke.

The Best Liar.

A party of hunters were gathered around the fire of a well-known hostelry not far from Scotch Plains the other evening, spinning some pretty tall sporting yarns, which finally turned on rabbits, when an old residenter broke in: "When ye talk about ket-hin' rabbits, b'gosh, I kin lay ye all out. When the last snow cum, I cut down several good sized trees an' painted holes in the butts of 'em an' I'm dod durned if more'n three dozen rabbits didn't knock their brains out tryin' to jump into 'em." There was a painful silence followed by an invitation to drink, when the old man said "Apple."

Death of Senator Livingston's Father.

From an obituary notice published in the New York Saratogian we learn the sad news that Postmaster R. W. Livingston, the venerable father of State Senator Robert L. Livingston, of this city, departed this life Wednesday of last week. At the time of his decease Mr. Livingston was postmaster of Elizabethtown, Essex county, N Y. Mr. L. was a veteran of the late war for the Union and was a Captain in the 118th regiment, N. Y. Volunteers. He was wounded at Drury's Bluff and was a pensioner. He was universally respected for his admirable qualities of head and heart, and we extend our sympathies to his bereaved son and relatives in this their hour of bereavement.

The Great Republic.

From the talk in town our citizens have all made up their minds that they cannot afford to miss the presentation of this great work at Music Hall, Friday and Saturday evenings and the matinee on Saturday afternoon. Our bright boys and girls will be turned for the time being into Indian soothsayers, Pilgrim fathers, Columbuses, William Penns, States of the Union, Soldiers, Germans, Irishmen, Africans, and people of all nations will move by hundreds upon the scene. And there will be music and speeches "from grave to gay" and there will groupings that Rogers might well put into clay if he could, and a grand final tableaux that will bring the house and the curtain down together. Reserved seats at Shaw's drug store.

A Night's Fun

We want to say a good word for that musical absurdity "Crazy Patch", which is to be brought here direct from a big success in New York, and presented with all its original cast, at Music Hall, next Tuesday evening. Those who delight in a long laugh, a hearty laugh and a laugh all the evening, should not miss the rare chance offered. Miss Kate Castleton is the bright particular star who has surpassed Lotta in this new piece, and she is supported by many an artist all joined together in a continuous round of fun. The Music Hall itself has not yet presented any of the laughable farces of which "Crazy Patch" is one of the best; so it seems assured that those who love the ludicrous will seize this opportunity of getting their fill. And, besides, the entertainment is for the benefit of Mr. W. R. M. Mattox, the able and affable stage manager of our Opera House.

Democratic Association.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Plainfield Democratic Association held in their rooms on Front street, last Tuesday evening. President Martine announced the following Committees for the ensuing year:

Executive Committee—Jas. S. Vosseller, Tell A. Beguelin, Rowland M. Stover, Jos. W. Yates, Jas. Clark, Robt. L. Livingston and William L. Force.

Document Committee—Nathan Harper, Jos. W. Yates and Daniel Van Buren.

Committee on Naturalization—William E. Gardner, Louis F. Wadsworth and Vincent L. Frazee.

Finance Committee—Joseph W. Yates, Gilford Mayer and James Clark.

Printing Committee—Jas. Taylor, Wm. L. Force and John Rafferty.

Committee on Public Meetings—Rowland M. Stover, Robert L. Livingston and Wm. H. Voorhees.

Canvassing Committee—First Ward—John Finley and Louis F. Wadsworth; Second Ward—Louis M. Stover and Richard L. Merritt; Third Ward—Jas. Mullen and James Whalen; Fourth Ward—Wm. E. Gardner and Jas. Conneely.

The County Records of Union County.

During the past two months there have been two bookbinders binding the records at the county clerk's office. The records consist of the books in which the deeds, mortgages, judgments, bonds, etc., are recorded, and it is very important to the public that they should be kept in the best state of preservation, as the loss of a leaf, or the erasure of a line, would cause endless litigation. About half the books needing repairing have been rebound, but the work has been stopped as far as this other half is concerned on account of the smallness of the appropriation. The county officers could not do a better thing than to have the other books that need repairing done at once. To show how strict the officials are in guarding those records, placards are hung up at short intervals bearing the following notice: "Notice—The use of ink or stylographic pens is prohibited in this department. Parties using books will please handle them with care, and when done, return them to their proper places." The room in which the records are kept is fire proof throughout, with the exception of the shelves, which contain the books and the necessary desks, and is 20 by 100 feet in length.—Elizabeth Herald.

Another Hearthstone Fire.

The wood work beneath the hearthstone under a grate in the residence of Mr. Agustus Van Deventer, at Washington and Myrtle avenues, North Plainfield, caught fire during the afternoon of Wednesday last, and by its smoke betrayed the danger. The inmates of the house with unusual presence of mind, sent word quietly to the Chief of the Fire Department, with the request that firemen be sent to assist in quenching the conflagration, but that no general alarm be given. Ex-chief Doane with Messrs James Martin and Hickey, hurried to the scene, and after taking down the mantel and tearing up the hearth, succeeded in entirely effacing all danger.

A Brave Councilman.

Councilman John B. Dumont, to whom is due the great improvements in our streets made during his term as Chairman of the Committee on Streets of '85, was the only Councilman brave enough, Monday evening, to rise up in his place and protest against saddling upon the city the unnecessary expense of an additional official paper. Mr. Dumont should be careful. He should remember the treatment given the gentleman on his right for neglecting to report on a petition to the same effect as soon as pleased the petitioner. He was maliciously defamed, villified and lied about. A majority of Mr. Dumont's colleagues seem to have taken the warning and will vote the extra and needless expense under constraint to protect themselves from public defamation. We trust, however, that this explanation of the condition of the facts in the matter, may save Mr. Dumont from the vituperation his act might otherwise call forth, but which his honorable character and bravery would condemn as untrue and undeserved.

Recognition to be Proud Of.

We recently published upon the authority of their respective managers, the annual statements of the German American Fire, and the Prudential Life Insurance companies—the largest in the matter of their own particular lines of business in the country. This shows a recognition of our leadership in circulation, influence and character, by those of judgment and clear-sightedness. To-day we are authorized to present the annual statement of the Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York, the largest capitalized corporation in the World. It has now nearly $110,000,000 in well invested assets, and has upon its books over 120,000 policies in force. It paid its policy holders during the year past $14,402,049.90 and received in premiums $14 768,901 93 and in interest and rents $5,446,052 35. The Mutual Life does not operate in foreign countries, confining its business to the United States. Its form of policy has proved exceedingly popular, offering as it does every benefit consistent with safety and every advantage that time and experience have shown to be possible and assuring the policy holders the most liberal treatment.

Presentation of Thanks.

The Committee appointed for the purpose—Fire Commissioners Brower, Jones and Cutter—visited the Somerville Eng. Co. No. 1, last Monday evening, and presented the resolutions of thanks passed by the Board of this city to the Company's members for their gallant assistance during the late disastrous fire in Cook's lumber yard and its surroundings. The occasion was one of mutual courtesy and reciprocation of good feeling. The following are the resolutions:

WHEREAS, On the 21st day of November last, when the Plainfield Fire Department was in a crippled condition, Plainfield was visited with the most disastrous conflagration in its history, and the compactly built portion of the city was in danger of destruction; and whereas, to the city's call for aid in this great emergency, the Somerville Fire Department responded with an alacrity equalled only by the skill and training of its members in their conflict with the flames; and whereas, despite the heroism and unrequited labor of the Somerville firemen, to which in a large measure the safety of our city was due, it is stated that there were some few citizens so utterly lost to all sense of honor and gratitude as to seek to cast a slur on the fair name of their rescuers;

Resolved, That in common with all good citizens of Plainfield, we do hereby record our abhorrence of the shameless vilification referred to; that a full investigation instituted by the Plainfield Fire Department has made manifest the absolute falsity of the defamation, and at the same time revealed the fact that among the people of our city there exists towards the Somerville Fire Department but one sentiment—that of profound esteem and gratitude.

—That the foregoing preamble and resolution be spread upon the minutes of the Board and a copy thereof forwarded to the Somerville Fire Department.

Interesting Baptist Statistics.

The annual report of the New Jersey Baptist State Convention has just been published. The general summary shows that the number of Baptist communicants in the state is 33,820. There are 185 churches and 153 pastors, and 46 ordained ministers who are not pastors.

The largest church in the state is the Newark First with a membership of 920, the next largest is the Trenton First with a membership of 892, and the third largest is the Plainfield First with 817 members. Then follows as the next largest the Orange North with 671 members; Newark North, 601; Jersey City First, 592; Flemington, 501; Paterson First, 485. The number of baptisms for the year was 1,593.

Several of the churches are very old. Three were founded in the 17th century and several near the middle and at the close of the 18th century, as the following dates show:

	Founded.
Middletown Church	1688
Piscataway	1686
Cohansey	1690
Cape May, First	1712
Hightstown	1745
Scotch Plains	1747
Wantage, near Deckertown	1750
Morristown	1752
Schooley's Mountain	1753
Salem, First	1755
Dividing Creek	1761
Pemberton	1764
Upper Freehold	1766
Mount Bethel	1767
Lyons Farms	1769
Manahawkin	1770
Hittsgrove	1771
Jacobstown	1785
Northfield	1786
New Brooklyn	1792
Flemington	1798

The first churches organized in the 19th century were the Newark First in 1801; Burlington, 1801; Mount Holly, 1801; Trenton First, 1805; Princeton, 1812; New Brunswick First, 1816; Plainfield First, 1818. In the latter year several churches were founded, as the Camden First, Haddonfield, Canton and Perth Amboy.

THE Classis of Newark met at the Trinity Reformed church, Wednesday afternoon last, but that had nothing to do with the spell of weather that set in at the same time.

HERE is an idea from the agricultural writer of a Hartford paper. "Apples, in salted, limed and whitewashed cellars, are keeping better, they say, than their over-ripe condition in the Fall gave reason to expect."

As the Hungarian Gypsy Band is unable to keep its engagement to appear in the W. C. T. U. Course, Miss Marie Bowen, who was down for March 24th, will take its place and give an evening's entertainment of readings and impersonations at Reform Hall, Tuesday evening, the 16th inst.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

MONDAY EVENING, Feb. 1st.

The Council met in regular meeting.

Present — President Beguelin and Messrs. Bowers, Cox, Dumont, Dunham, Gallup, Goddard, Marsh, Simpson, Voorhees—10.

Absent—Mr. Cuthbert—1.

The minutes of the previous meetings were approved as read.

A petition by J. Oldman, for a pedler's license, was referred to License Com.

Also the petition of Chas. Bock, of Ea. Second street, for a saloon license.

A number of communications were read protesting against the granting of liquor licenses, signed by many temperance men and women. Referred as above.

A communication was received from the Plainfield Gas Light Co., as follows:

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Jan. 21, 1886.

R. O. BOWERS, Esq., Chairman Committee Fire, Water and Lamps:

DEAR SIR:—I have your favor of 19th inst., and in reply beg to say that this Company will run the lamps all night or until such hours of the morning as would average till four o'clock, a. m., for twenty-four cents more than the present price per month, which would make the price $1.95 per lamp per month. We will light the lamps extra nights at the same rate, or 10 5-6 cents per lamp per night, provided we are notified in time to get our lamp-lighters ready. If you would like to have a price for lighting the lamps every night in the year, we will make a liberal figure on that.

I am exceedingly obliged to you for communicating with me in reference to the electric light. I think that if the people of this City demand the electric light for their streets, this Company should be prepared to furnish it provided it can be done so as to return us a reasonable profit for the investment of materials and labor; but permit me to express my conviction that forty arc lamps will not cover satisfactorily the district now lighted by gas. I fancy this will be apparent to any one who will try to locate the forty lamps over this district.

I will send you in a few days our prices on lighting the City by electricity.

Yours very truly,
H. G. RUNKLE, Treasurer.

The N. Y. & N. J. Gas Light Co., promised to remedy defects complained of in their lamps, and both communications were referred to the Lamps Com.

A walk was requested on Fifth street, by property owners, which matter was referred to Streets Com.

The following was referred to the Lamps Com.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Jan. 30, 1886.

To the Honorable the Common Council of the city of Plainfield:

GENTLEMEN—The subscribers respectively petition your honorable body for a contract to light by electricity that portion of the city of Plainfield as is now lighted by gas, and which is embraced in the accompanying map, together with a list of the names of the streets and avenues which have been selected to place the lights so as to give the best results; and which will give more than double the light than by the present method of lighting.

Your petitioner respectively submits the following proposal: That we will agree to place forty (40) electric lights of "The Thompson-Houston Electric Light Co's" system. (The same as is now in use in a number of stores in Plainfield, and also on exhibition on Grove street in North Plainfield) at the corners of the streets and avenues mentioned in the list herewith, and will burn said lights during the dark hours, for one year, averaging eighteen nights per month; lights to burn on moonless nights and nights when the moon is obscured by clouds; the price for same to be at the rate of forty cents (40 cents) per light, per night, which is $2.88 per month or $3,456 per year.

These conditions are little more than one-half the cost to larger cities, but the general desire for better lighted streets in Plainfield, especially a light to burn all the dark hours of the night, induces this proposition, which is extremely reasonable.

The city shall have the option of renewing the contract upon the same terms for an extra period of three or five years, and any additional lights required by the city will be furnished at same prices and terms, provided they are on the line of first circuit.

In the event of a contract being awarded the subscribers for the lighting by electricity of the streets and avenues mentioned, we respectfully petition your honorable body for permission to erect such poles as will be necessary to enable us to carry out this proposal, said poles to be placed, and the wires strung under the supervision of the Street Commissioner, or other person or persons designated by your honorable body.

It is intended to use poles similar to those erected in Grove street, North Plainfield, and which have met with the unanimous approval of the property owners there.

For the convenience of your honorable body and other citizens of the city of Plainfield, one of these poles has been erected in front of Mr. M. M. Thorn's real estate office, opposite the depot, so that all may have the opportunity of seeing the style of pole which will be used in the event of a contract being awarded. The petitioners court the closest investigation as to the light—the locations—the method proposed for locating the lamps and such other information as may be desired by your honorable body relating to this proposal.

Will furnish a satisfactory bond for the faithful performance of contract.

The Plainfield Electric Light Co.,
EDWIN D. MULLEN, Gen'l Manager.

The following claims were referred to the proper committees: M. A. Cooper, $22; K. Conway, $12; W. S. Morse, $42; W. R. Jennings, $20; D. S Cole, $4 50; M. Dady, $8; J. O. Nodyne, $65 75; Relief Asso., $32 25; C. W. Dodd, $58 34; G. W. Grant, $50; T. McCoe, $50; P. Lynch $50; Times Pub. Co., $67 50; T. W. Morrison, $22 50; W. L. Force & Bro, $62 75; T. W. Morrison, $35; N. Y. & N. J. Globe Co., $149 52; J. P. Homan, $40.84; G. Angleman, $22.92; $64.50; F. A. Dunham, $2 66; $11 67; J. N. Jenkins, $15; John Johnson, $271 85; $14 54; Jas. Clark, $105; J. H. Piatt, $25.

The January reports of the Treasurer and the Collector, and the quarterly report of the City Physcian, were read and filed.

His Honor presented the following nominations for confirmation.

For Corporation Counsel, C. A. Marsh.

For Street Commissioner, Jas. Mullen.

For Overseer of the Poor, Judge Wadsworth.

For City Physician, Dr. W. C. Boone.

On motion tabled.

Mr. Dunham of the License Com., presented a protest from John H. French and others, against the granting of certain of the saloon licenses applied for, because a number of the signers were women and as such were not eligible for that purpose. Filed.

Mr. Dunham also presented a "minority report," recommending that licenses for the sale of liquor's be not granted. Tabled

Mr. Voorhees moved that the applications for licenses be taken up in their order, and voted upon. Seconded by Mr. Bowers. Withdrawn.

Another minority report from Mr. Dunham was read on the applications of Jas. H. Force, E. P. Thorn, and others, recommending that they be not granted, the same not complying with the law. Mr. Dunham stated that outside of the question of a woman's right to citizenship, the applications were correct.

Mr. Marsh, seconded by Mr. Dunham, moved that the report be received and its recommendation adopted. Lost.

The report of a majority of the Committee signed by Messrs. Dunham and Voorhees, was read to the effect that the applications of Jos. B. Miller, F. Casper and John Rafferty were correct.

A motion was carried providing that action thereon be taken at once.

The applications were granted by the following vote:

Ayes—Beguelin, Bowers, Cox, Dumont, Gallup, Goddard, Simpson, Voorhees—8.

Nays—Dunham, Marsh—2.

The applications of Messrs. Blimm, Day and Staats, were reported as not complying with the ordinance, by Mr. Dunham — Ret'd back.

In reply to the question of Mr. Marsh, the name of Johanna Malay was stated as that of a woman who had been dead two years, and that her signature was witnessed by John T. Day.

Mr. Marsh, seconded by Mr. Dumont, moved that the Com. on License be directed to investigate the matter, and if necessary bring charges against anyone guilty of perjury in the case.

Messrs. Voorhees and Dunham both said that Mr. Day was mistaken, supposing "Bridget" Malay was "Johanna" Malay. Mr. Dunham also stated that Mr. Conway and Mrs. Malay had said that they had not personally made their "marks."

Mr. Marsh's motion was carried, and also a motion that the applications be referred back to the applicants for correction.

The application of Mr. Muldowney, was reported against by Mr. Dunham, and Mr. Dumont moved, seconded by Mr. Marsh, that the petition be returned and the application refused.

Carried by the following vote:

Aye—Bowers, Cox, Dumont, Dunham, Goddard, Marsh, Simpson, Voorhees—8.

Nays—Beguelin, Gallup—2.

The applications of Messrs. Force, Thorn, Smith, Conneely and Sullivan were reported as correct by Mr. Voorhees.

Mr. Marsh seconded by Mr. Dumont, moved that the application of Mr. Sullivan be referred back to the Committee, for further investigation. Carried.

The applications of Messrs. E. P. Thorn, Jas. Conneely, Chas. H. Smith and J. H. Force, were granted by a vote of 8 to 2, as in the case of others.

New applications of Messrs. J. Blimm, James Muldowney, John H. Staats and P. Day, were presented.

The petitions of Messrs. Blimm, Day and Staats were referred to the License Com., and that of Mr. Muldowney was ignored, being already refused.

The Printing Com. reported that only certain ordinances were necessary to be published, and recommended that THE CONSTITUTIONALIST and Central Times be designated as the official papers.

Mr. Dumont, seconded by Mr. Marsh, moved that the Com. on Printing be requested to solicit proposals from the city's newspapers, for the publication of the ordinances and legal notices. Carried.

The Com. on Lamps, Police, Printing, Salaries and Finance reported as correct claims in hand. Ref'd to Aud. Com.

Mr. Goddard presented an amendment to Rule 39, striking out the requirement of certain advertising. Ref'd to Laws Com.

On motion of Mr. Dumont, a commission of 2½ per cent. was allowed the Collector for the collection of all delinquent taxes, after Jan. 30th, 1886. Carried.

Mr. Goddard stated that as the Telephone Co. had returned the removed instruments, he would not call up the ordinance in relation to the restriction of the erection of poles and stringing of wires.

A motion was adopted designating Mr. John Johnson as the Collector of delinquent taxes, and directing the City Judge to issue the warrants therefore and thereto.

The nominations of the Mayor were taken up, on motion, and acted upon.

Messrs. Dumont and Gallup were appointed as tellers, and the results were as follows:

Corporation Counsel, Craig A. Marsh—7 For; 1 Against; 1, Blank; 1, W. L. Hetfield.

City Physician, Dr. W. C. Boone—10 For.

Street Commissioner, James Mullen—2 For; 5 Against; 3 Blanks.

Overseer of the Poor, Judge Wadsworth—6 For; 4 Against.

It was moved that when the Council adjourn, it be to meet Monday evening, Feb. 15th.

The application of J. Oldman, for a peddler's license, was granted.

The Auditing Com. reported all claims correct, and warrants were ordered drawn in payment thereof.

The Council then adjourned.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

LITTLE KATE AND I.

We didn't wait for an income to marry on, little Kate and I. We had no rich relations to leave us legacies of [illegible] pearl necklaces, diamond ornaments, or thousand-dollar bonds for wedding presents. I was simply a brakeman on the Eastern Michigan Railway, a long and lonely stretch of rails over desolate marshes, steep mountain grades, and solitary sweeps of prairie land; she was the bright-eyed waitress in one of the restaurants along the line. But when I fell from the platform when the great accident happened, you heard of the great accident I suppose, when there was such a shocking loss of life—it was Kate's care and nothing else that brought me back into the world I had so nearly quitted for good and all!

"I would have done it for anybody, Mark," said she, when I tried to thank her.

"Would you?" said I. "But it isn't everybody that would have done it for me, Kate!"

So I asked her to marry me, and she said "yes." And I took a little cottage on the edge of the Swampscott woods, and furnished it as well as I could, with red carpet, cheese-cloth curtains at the windows, and a set of walnut chairs that I made myself, with seats of rushes, woven in by old Billy, the Indian, who carried his baskets and mats around the country; and Mrs. Perkins, the parson's wife, made us a wedding cake, and so we got married. Pretty soon I found that Kate was pining a little.

"What is it, sweetheart?" said I. "Remember, it was a contract between us that we were to have no secrets from each other! Are you not perfectly happy?"

"Oh, yes, yes!" cried Kate, hiding her face on my shoulder. "But it's my mother, Mark. She's getting old, and if I could only go East to see her, just once before the Lord takes her away!"

It was then I felt the sting of my poverty most. If I had only been a rich man to have handed her out a check and said: "Go at once!" I think I would have been quite happy.

"Never mind, sweetheart," said I, stroking her hair. "We'll lay up a few dollars from month to month, and you shall go out to see her before she dies!"

And with that little Kate was forced to be content. But there was a hungry, homesick look upon her face which went to my heart to see.

One stormy Autumn night we were belated on the road, for the wind was terrific, shaking the century old pines and oaks, as if they were nothing more than tall swamp grasses, and driving through the ravines with a shriek and a howl like a whole pack of hungry wolves. And the heavy rains had raised the streams so that we were compelled to go carefully and slowly over the bridges and keep a long look ahead for fear of accidents.

I was standing at my post in front of the second passenger car, stamping my feet on the platform to keep them warm, and hoping little Kate would not be perturbed at my long absence when the news agent came chuckling out.

"We're to stop to Stumpville station," said he.

"Nonsense," said I, "I know better. This train never stops short of Waukesha way, least of all when we are running to make up for lost time, as we are to-night."

"Only that this is an exceptional occasion," said Johnny Mills (which was the news agent's name). "We're going to set an old woman out. She has lost her ticket, she says. More likely she never had one. Goes on as though she had her pockets picked."

"Which is the one?" said I, turning to look at the end window of the car which was at the rear.

"Don't you see? The old party at the back of the two fat women in the red shawls. She is haranguing Jones now."

"I see," said I. It was a little old woman in a black silk-poke bonnet, a respectable cloth cloak, bordered with ancient fur, and a long green veil, who was earnestly talking and gesticulating with the conductor. But he shook his head and passed on, and she sank back in a helpless little heap behind the green veil, and I could see her take a small handkerchief from a small basket and put it piteously to her eyes.

"It's too bad," said I. "Jones might remember, that he once had—if he hasn't now—a mother of his own."

"And lose his place on the road," said Mills. "No, no, old fellow; all that sort of thing does very well to talk about, but it don't work in real life."

So he went into the next car, and the signal to slack up came presently. I turned to Mr. Jones, the conductor, who just then stepped out on the platform.

"Is it for that old lady?" He answered "yes." Said I, "How far does she want to go?" "To Swampscott," said he.

"You needn't stop, Mr. Jones," said I. "I'll pay her fare."

"You!" he echoed.

"Yes, I," said I. "I'll take her to my own house until she can telegraph to her friends or something. My wife will be glad to see her, I know, for the sake of her own old mother out East!"

"Just as you please," said Mr. Jones.

We did not stop at Stumpville station after all, but put on more steam and ran as fast as it was safe to drive the engine—and when, a little past midnight, we reached Swampscott, where we were due at 7.30. Pierre Rene, the Frenchman, came on board to relieve me, and I helped my old lady off the train, flat basket, traveling bag and all.

"Am I to be put off, after all!" said she, with a scared look round her.

"Cheer up ma'am," said I. "You are all right. Now, then—look out for the step! Here we are."

"And you are the kind man who paid my fare?" said she. "But my daughter and her husband will repay you when—"

"All right, ma'am," said I. "And now, if you'll just take my arm, we'll be home in a quarter of an hour."

"But," said she, "why can't I go directly to my destination?"

"It's middling late, ma'am," said I, "and the houses don't stand shoulder to shoulder in Swampscott. My nearest neighbor is a mile and a half away. But never fear ma'am, I've a wife that will be glad to bid you welcome for the sake of her own mother."

She murmured a few words of thanks, but she was old and weary, and the path was rough and uneven, in the very teeth of a keen November blast—and walking wasn't an easy task. Presently, we came to the little cottage on the edge of Swampscott woods, where the light glowed warmly through the Turkey red curtains.

"Oh, Mark, dearest, how late you are!" cried Kate, making haste to open the door. "Come in quick, out of the wind. Supper is all ready, and—but who is that with you?"

In a hurried whisper I told her all.

"Did I do right, Kate?" I asked.

"Right? Of course you did. Ask her to come in at once, and I'll put another cup and saucer on the table."

Tenderly I assisted the chilled and wearied old lady across the threshold.

"Here's my wife," said I. "And here's a cup of smoking hot coffee and some of Kate's own biscuits and chicken pie! You'll be all right when the cold is out of your joints a bit."

"You are very, very welcome," said Kate, brightly, as she advanced to untie our visitor's veil and loosen the folds of her cloak. But all of a sudden, I heard a cry, "Mother, oh, mother!"

"Hold on, Kate!" said I, with the coffee-pot still in my hand, as I had been lifting it from the fire. "This is never—"

"But it is, Mark!" cried out Kate, breathlessly. "It's mother; my own mother! Oh! help me, dearest, quickly, she has fainted away!"

But she was all right again, presently, sitting by the fire with her feet on one of the warm cushions, which Kate had knit with wooden needles, and drinking hot coffee.

It was all true. The unfortunate passenger whose pocket had been picked on the train, and to whose rescue I had come, was no other than my wife's own mother, who had determined to risk the perils of a journey to the far West to see her child once again.

THE RETORT COURTEOUS.

"My dear fellow," says an Indiana Sheriff to the prisoner, "I must apologize to you for the sanitary condition of this jail. Several of the prisoners are down with the measles, but I assure you that it is not my fault."

"Oh, no excuses," replies the prisoner. "It was my intention to break out as soon as possible, anyway."

AN IMPRUDENT YOUNG MAN.

Judge Annis brings home from England a story that he thinks may be old enough to be started on its second round.

An old lawyer had brought up his son to the law, and the young man had succeeded to the father's practice. One day the old gentleman asked his son how he was getting along.

"Oh, first rate, father. You know that old Chesford estate that has been hanging on so long?"

"Yes, my son; what of it?"

"Well, I've settled it all up and the heirs have their property."

"Great heavens, my son! Is it possible? Why, I raised my entire family off the fees in that case, and here you have gone and settled it in your first year."

A HORSE DOCTOR.

"You don't mean to say that he prescribed for his patient without asking him a single question?"

"Yes, he did."

"And did not even feel his pulse?"

"No."

"Or look at his tongue?"

"No."

"Why, the man's a fool; he's even worse, he's a quack."

"But he has the name of being a very good doctor. He seldom loses a case."

"All luck, and nothing else. He couldn't doctor me."

"Of course not; nor me. He's not my kind of a doctor."

"What kind of a doctor do you consider him?"

"Me? I consider him a horse doctor—and so he is."

WHEREAS, IT BEING THE NEW YEAR,

Resolved, That I will pay as I go; on the railroad.

That I will honestly and closely scan my neighbor's faults and help him to correct them.

That I will not spend so much money on clothes, for my wife.

That I will quit smoking in places where it is positively forbidden.

That I will not write any reminiscences of the war.

That I will make shorter prayers and longer subscriptions.

That I will not say, "I beg your pardon," to my neighbor's wife, and "Huh" to my own.

That I will not play lawn tennis for at least three months.

That I will not bite off more than I can chew.

That I will not worry and fret about what would become of the other eight or nine billions of people in the world, if I should die.

That I will not slop over.

That I will study my lessons and keep my face clean.

That if I fail in any of these resolutions, it will be somebody else's fault.

That I can get along well enough with everybody but myself.

That I will be most wretchedly sorry for a thousand things by next December.

That they shan't be the same things I was sorry for last December.

That I have money to bet they will be.—Burdette.

BILL NYE'S OWN EXPERIENCE.

When I was young and used to roam around over the country gathering watermelons in the dark of the moon, I used to think I could milk anybody's cow, but I don't think so now. I do not milk a cow now unless the sign is right, and it hasn't been right for a good many years.

The last cow I tried to milk was a common cow, born in obscurity; kind of a self-made cow. I remember her brow was low, but she wore her tail high, and she was haughty, oh, so haughty.

I made a common-place remark to her, one that is used in the very best of society, one that need not have given offence anywhere. I said "so," and she "soed." Then I told her to "hist," and she "histed." But I thought she over-did it. She put too much expression in it.

Just then I heard something crash through the window of the barn and fall with a dull sickening thud on the outside. The neighbors came to see what it was that caused the noise. They found I had done it in getting through the window.

I asked the neighbors if the barn was still standing. They said it was. Then I asked if the cow was injured much. They said she seemed to be quite robust. Then I requested them to go in and calm the cow a little and see if they could get my plug hat off her horns.

I am buying all my milk now of a milkman. I select a gentle milkman who will not kick, and I feel as though I could trust him. Then if he feels as though he could trust me it is all right.

HOW AN OWL WAS CAUGHT.

Shortly after an east-bound accommodation train left Auburndale a large gray owl flew through the open window of the engine cab and alighted on the head of the fireman. After recovering from his surprise the fireman attempted, with the help of the engineer, to capture the bewildered bird, and succeeded after a severe struggle. The owl measured 30 inches from tip to tip.

BROWN AND THE NEW MINISTER.

"Have you called on the Browns yet?" she asked, as the new minister was about to take his leave after making a call.

"I'm just going," he replied. "It's the third house from the corner, I believe."

"Yes—third house. They are very, very nice people, and I know you'll like 'em."

When the minister rang the bell there was some delay in answering it. Meanwhile the screen doors permitted him to hear from the interior. Brown, who seemed to be up stairs, called over the bannisters:

"Say, Helen, where in thunder is that old vest I spoke of?"

"Who are you talking to?" demanded a voice from below.

"To you, of course! If you were any sort of a wife you'd put things where they could be found."

"Solomon Brown, don't you cast any slurs on me. If I don't know more about housekeeping than all the Browns on earth I'll commit suicide."

"You do, eh? What did the pauper Smiths have to keep house on?"

"Solomon, you are a vile wretch!"

"Much obliged, but it's living with you that's done it!"

At this juncture the minister was ushered in, and Mrs. Brown soon entered the parlor, extended both hands and gayly exclaimed:

"Ah, I'm so glad! Solomon and I both wanted to see you so much! Solomon—Solly, dear, hurry up and come down—our new preacher is here!"

And Solomon came down, painted a grin on his face and greeted the good man with:

"Well, well, but this is good of you! Wifey and I were just wishing you'd call. We want to see if an effort can't be made to increase the interest in the Thursday evening prayer meetings."

A ROMANCE OF THE DIAMOND.

The marriage of Williamson, the proficient third baseman of the Chicago nine, was a very romantic and happy one. His wife was a beautiful New Orleans girl of good extraction. The Chicago club was playing an exhibition game in that city, and Flint, the catcher, and his wife accidently met the young lady at her hotel. Mrs. Flint invited her to witness the game. She had never seen one, and knew nothing of and cared little for the pastime, but she consented to go if Mrs. Flint would promise not to introduce her to any baseball people. The promise was given and the ladies attended the game. The young lady became considerably interested in the playing, and seemed to have her heart set on having the Chicagos win. The champions, however, were getting worsted, and it depended on a good batsman to win the game for them. They had the final innings, and three men on bases would be left there if the striker failed. Williamson came to the bat, and the young lady unconsciously arose from her seat in her excitement. She took in the situation, and pulling off her corsage bouquet said to Mrs. Flint: "If he brings those men in I'll throw him these flowers." Others were as excited as she. There was not a sound. Williamson was the only cool one there. He got the ball he wanted, and sent it "kiting." The result was three tallies by the other men and a home run himself. Williamson made that home run straight into the girl's heart. As he touched the home plate and sped farther on by the momentum of his run he came panting underneath the girl with the bouquet. She raised it aloft and tossed it at his feet. He picked it up as the cheers of the spectators rent the air, and he bent low in a bow to his admirer. Blushing at her own audacity, she sat down and buried her face in Flint's shoulder. Her exploit, however, was lost sight of in the rejoicing of those who had bet their money on the victorious club. That night there was a reception to the club at the hotel, and she was presented to the home-runner. They looked into each other's eyes, and the Umpire Cupid cried out, "One strike."—Chicago News.

Men who have been eating onions.

Men who smoke bad cigars on the front platform.

Men who chew and expectorate in the cars.

Peddlers who fill the cars with their wares and smell badly.

Men who whistle.

The stareful dude.

The awful masher.

Men who talk so loudly that no one else can hope to be heard by his neighbor.

Men who sit sideways when people are looking for seats.

Men who crowd the platform so that people are squeezed nearly to death in getting on or off the cars.

Men who pick their teeth in public.

Men who clean their fingers in public.

Juveniles who insist on sky-larking.

Boys who eat peanuts.

The small boy who, on muddy days, insists on kneeling on the seats.

Squalling babies.

Men who hum all the way.

Men who want to know where the car is going to when they get there.

Women who flirt with the wrong fellow.

The girl who hangs on to him all the way.

The bundle women.

The lady that has just been doing a little shopping and bought out the store.

Giggling girls.

The umbrella fiend who always pokes the driver in the back or the conductor in the stomach.

The stout lady who, when the car lurches, subsides in one's lap.

The shrill-voiced female.

The mother of six who brings the whole six along.

The lady who will mistake the bell-rope for the strap.

The gum-eating girl.

The woman who, after stopping the car only takes five minutes to kiss and say good-bye.

The old young girl.

The musical enthusiast.

The stage struck girl.

The girl who captures the conductor's attention so that he has no eyes or ears left for business.

The women who paint.

CLEVELAND'S
SUPERIOR TO ROYAL.

Rutgers College (the New Jersey State Scientific College)
New Brunswick, N. J., July 7, 1885.

Analyses and careful examinations of Cleveland's Superior and Royal Baking Powders enable us to bear testimony to the superiority of Cleveland's. It yields more carbonic acid gas than the Royal, and contains no ammonia salts.

Cleveland's Baking Powder is made of pure substances and is absolutely free from any kind of adulteration. We endorse it most cordially as an honest and efficient article, and one that will give entirely satisfactory results.

CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND & PACIFIC RAILWAY

By reason of its central position and close relation to all principal lines East and West, at initial and terminal points, constitutes the most important mid-continental link in that system of through transportation which invites and facilitates travel and traffic between cities of the Atlantic and Pacific Coasts. It is also the favorite and best route to and from points East, Northeast and Southeast, and corresponding points West, Northwest and Southwest.

The Rock Island system includes in its main line and branches, Chicago, Joliet, Ottawa, La Salle, Peoria, Geneseo, Moline and Rock Island, in Illinois; Davenport, Muscatine, Washington, Fairfield, Ottumwa, Oskaloosa, West Liberty, Iowa City, Des Moines, Indianola, Winterset, Atlantic, Knoxville, Audubon, Harlan, Guthrie Centre and Council Bluffs, in Iowa; Gallatin, Trenton, Cameron and Kansas City, in Missouri; Leavenworth and Atchison, in Kansas; Albert Lea, Minneapolis and St. Paul, in Minnesota; Watertown in Dakota, and hundreds of intermediate cities, towns, villages and stations.

THE GREAT ROCK ISLAND ROUTE

Guarantees its patrons that sense of personal security afforded by a solid, thoroughly ballasted road-bed; smooth tracks of continuous steel rail; substantially built culverts and bridges; rolling stock as near perfection as human skill can make it; the safety appliances of patent buffers, platforms and air-brakes; and that exacting discipline which governs the practical operation of all its trains. Other specialties of this route are Transfers at all connecting points in Union Depots, and the unsurpassed comforts and luxuries of its Passenger Equipment.

The Fast Express Trains between Chicago and the Missouri River are composed of well ventilated, finely upholstered Day Coaches, Magnificent Pullman Palace Sleepers of the latest design, and sumptuous Dining Cars, in which elaborately cooked meals are leisurely eaten. [illegible] Between Chicago and Kansas City and Atchison, are also run the Celebrated Reclining Chair Cars.

THE FAMOUS ALBERT LEA ROUTE

Is the direct and favorite line between Chicago and Minneapolis and St. Paul, where connections are made in Union Depots for all points in the Territories and British Provinces. Over this route, Fast Express Trains are run to the watering places, summer resorts, picturesque localities, and hunting and fishing grounds of Iowa and Minnesota. It is also the most desirable route to the rich wheat fields and pastoral lands of interior Dakota.

Still another DIRECT LINE, via Seneca and Kankakee, has been opened between [illegible], Cincinnati, Indianapolis, and Lafayette and Council Bluffs, Kansas City, Minneapolis and St. Paul and intermediate points.

The "PERFECTION," All Porcelain.

WE TAKE pleasure in calling attention of our customers and all interested in sanitary matters to the all porcelain "Perfection," the only square top Hopper, with trap, made.—For perfect cleanliness and simplicity of construction we invite comparison with any Closet ever manufactured, either home or foreign. It combines, with the utmost simplicity, all the points of a strictly first-class water-closet. The square top will make itself apparent to all users, in doing away with drip tray, the wash at all times thoroughly scouring all parts, whereas in the drip tray it cannot help but become foul underneath. It has a seal in Trap of 1½ inches, and the soil pipe vent of 2 inches diameter, as will be seen in the above cut, will prevent all syphoning of Trap. The two bent or horn vents of [illegible] inches diameter are intended for right or left ventilation, the one not being used to be closed. The large handhole in front gives free access to all parts of trap.

From Pole to Pole
AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has demonstrated its power of cure for all diseases of the blood.
The Harpooner's Story.
New Bedford, June 1, 1882.
DR. J. C. AYER & CO.—Twenty years ago I was a harpooner in the North Pacific, when five others of the crew and myself were laid up with scurvy. Our bodies were bloated, gums swollen and bleeding, teeth loose, purple blotches all over us, and our breath seemed rotten. Take it by and large we were pretty badly off. All our lime-juice was accidentally destroyed, but the captain had a couple dozen bottles of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA and gave us that. We recovered on it quicker than I have ever seen men brought about by any other treatment for Scurvy, and I've seen a good deal of it. Seeing no mention in your Almanac of your Sarsaparilla being good for scurvy, I thought you ought to know of this, and so send you the facts.
Respectfully yours, RALPH V. WINGATE.
The Trooper's Experience.
Masera, Basutoland (S. Africa), March 7, 1883.
DR. J. C. AYER & CO.—Gentlemen: I have much pleasure in testifying to the great value of your Sarsaparilla. We have been stationed here for over two years, during which time we had to live on [illegible]. Being under canvas for such a time brought on what is called in this country "veldt-sores." I had those sores for some time. I was advised to take your Sarsaparilla, two bottles of which made my sores disappear rapidly, and I am now quite well.
Yours truly, T. E. BODEN,
Trooper, Cape Mounted Riflemen.
Ayer's Sarsaparilla
Is the only thoroughly effective blood-purifier, the only medicine that eradicates the poisons of Scrofula, Mercury, and Contagious Disease from the system.

Dyspepsia.
GENTS:—I feel it my duty to say respecting Burdock Blood Bitters, that it is the best medicine I ever took. I suffered two or three years from stomach troubles and dyspepsia as well as from liver and kidney complaint. I was not able to attend to my business. My wife was afflicted in much the same way. We read of your Bitters in the papers and made up our minds that we would try them. The result is my wife and I began to improve at once, and I am now able to do more hard work than before in ten years. It relieved my kidney troubles as well. We both wish you, the makers of it, Godspeed.

ERIN'S APPEAL.

An appeal has come from mother Erin—
From our home across the sea—
To her exiled sons and daughters
In Columbia, great and free,
For aid to break the cruel chains
That bind her fettered hands,
And rescue, from the tyrant's grasp,
Her green and fertile lands.

From fair Liffey's verdant banks,
From where the noble Shannon flows,
From every hill and valley
Where our own loved shamrock grows,
They call on us to aid them
To break the galling chains
That drive her children into exile
And desolate her plains.

When our own loved mother calls for aid,
Shall we pass her coldly by?
And close our ears and steel our hearts
Unto her plaintive cry?
Where is our love of Freedom—
Our boasted love of mother land—
If we aid her not in trial,
If we wear the traitor's band?

Shame on Erin's faithless children,
Who would calmly rest at home
While across the mighty ocean,
O'er the white and sparkling foam,
Comes the battle cry of kindred,
Fighting 'gainst the tyrant crew
Who would drive them from their birthright,
As they've driven me and you.

This is no time to stand aloof;
Away with doubt and fear!
Come forth, and join the Irish League,
The tried and true are here!
There is work for every Irish child,
'Neath heaven's silvery dome.
Hark! They're calling, o'er the waters,
From our far-off island home!

From the green hillsides of Erin,
Where, uncoffin'd, lie the dead
Who perished in the famine years,
Hark, from their lowly bed,
The cry is raised for justice,
Unto their God on high
'Gainst those who tore their roof-trees down,
And left them there to die!

From beneath the broad Atlantic,
Where lie the victims' bones,
Of those who died in the fever ships,
List! to their wailing moans!
They are calling on their kindred
Beyond the ocean's spray
To stop the landlord's cruel hands
And wrest from him his prey.

Oh, you who live in Freedom's light
Beside Atlantic's waves
Will you list to their appealing cry,
Or let them live as slaves?
In the name of human freedom
Of a cause both great and grand
Rise and help them in their struggle
To redeem their native land.

MISCELLANEOUS READING

JAKE, THE COWBOY.

BY BELLE C. GREENE.

It was a cold, uncomfortable day. The wind blew in gusts down the chimney of our little school-house, putting out the fire and making the question of keeping warm hopeless one.

The half-naked children huddled about the stove and patiently conned their lessons. Poor things, they were so used to cold and suffering, that even the dreary school-house was comfort compared to their miserable homes!

I missed my big boy, Jake. If he were only here, I could send him to the woods for fuel. He was always our dependence in a cold or rainy day. He had wonderful luck with the rickety old stove, and could make the fire burn when nobody else could.

Jake was my favorite scholar. He was only a rough cowboy, and had borne a terrible reputation, but he always behaved himself in school, and was so kind and helpful, that I had come to rely upon him as my right hand man.

On the day I opened my school he came to me, and, tucking an enormous quid of tobacco away in his cheek, said awkwardly, "I wan'ter jine your school. I ain't nothin' but a cowboy, but I've tuk a notion lately ter learn to read. I reckon I should like to know how to read," he added, with a wistful glance into my face.

His evident earnestness and his simplicity touched me, and I answered cordially, "I shall be glad to have you come, and I have no doubt you will learn to read very fast. I will do all I can for you, and you must help me. We will help each other."

He seemed embarassed; dropped his eyes, shifted his quid, then spat dextrously into a corner of the room, and wiped his lips on the back of one great hand.

"I reckon you hain't never hearn o' me," he said, finally, with an uneasy laugh. "I ain't ginerally 'counted much good round here."

"But I wouldn't wonder," he continued, looking me over with the air of a connoisseur about to bargain for a pup or a horse, "I wouldn't wonder now, if you'n me tuk to one another, teacher."

"I think we shall," I said, good naturedly, "and you look as if you might be a friend worth having, if you chose."

He was a noble, great fellow, fully six feet tall, with limbs like the trunks of trees, and the head and shoulders of a young Hercules.

At my remarks he blushed a tawny red, up to the roots of his hair, and made a sudden movement, as if to offer me his hand; then drew back and choked, struggling to speak.

"I can be, and I will be!" he muttered at last, hoarsely, and strode away to a seat closely followed by his dog—a savage, ugly-looking cur, which seemed inseparable from his master, and came to school as regularly from that day. The dog's name was Tige, and I noticed that Jake was always considerate of him, sharing his own dinner with him when he was so fortunate as to have any; and once when the poor brute came in wet and shaking with the cold, he gave up his own warm place by the fire, muttering by way of apology, as his eyes met mine, that "the little cuss was gittin' old." There seemed to be an almost human sympathy between them.

One afternoon Jake came in covered with blood. He had evidently been fighting, and what was more remarkable, had got worsted; but he went composedly to his seat as if nothing had happened. Indeed, quarrels were so common among the scholars, that if they did not bring them into school, I took but little notice of them. So on this occasion I said nothing, but I saw Tige crawl to his master's feet and look up into his face with a questioning whine. He had been dozing comfortably by the fire all the noontime, and so had not shared his master's trouble, whatever it was.

Receiving no attention, he finally squatted down in front of him and patiently watched his angry, downcast face; nor did he have to watch long.

Jake suddenly lifted his eyes and flashed a lightning glance at a boy who sat opposite him on the other side of the room. Then, clearing the distance with one bound, the dog was at the offender's throat! And I knew it was with him—Tom Canes—that Jake had quarreled.

"Call off the brute!" gasped the fellow with a terrible oath.

Jake spoke to the dog, who reluctantly loosened his hold, and rising to his feet, stretched out one brawny arm toward his foe; "I call him off," he said, "because you'n me will settle our own little difficulty. It lays 'twixt you'n me—not you'n the dog—and I'll have it out with ye, and soon, too!" with a threatening shake of his fist.

I heard no more of the matter; but a few days afterward Jake was absent from school, for the first time, and I missed him, as I said in the beginning of this sketch. I made inquiries of the scholars, but no one knew anything about him. Tim Canes was also absent, but I thought nothing of that, as he was always irregular in his attendance.

My oldest scholar among the girls—Jinny by name—she was the brightest and most advanced pupil I had.

The other girls both hated and admired her, seeming to regard her superiority as as a reproach and insult to themselves.

Judging from her appearance Jinny must have been at that time eighteen or twenty years of age, but she did not know how old she was, nor did she care.

"What's the odds?" she said, with a shrug of indifference, when I questioned her in regard to the matter.

She had the pale, sallow complexion common to her class, and her speech and manners were uncouth enough, but there was a charm about her, after all. There was a wild grace and freedom in her movements, a magnetism in her dark eyes when she turned them full upon you, a consciousness of power in her saucy, defiant ways, that fascinated all who came in contact with her.

I myself was strongly attracted by her; what wonder then that Jake and Tim Canes became her abject slaves.

I had often amused myself watching the three, feeling about the same kind of interest—half amusement, half fear—in their fierce, rude love making, their jealousies and quarrels, that I would in the gambols of a trio of wild animals.

The days passed on, but my two big boys came to school no more. At last I began to wonder if Jinny had anything to do with their absence. Evidently there was something wrong with the girl; she seemed sullen and depressed, and sat in her seat frowning, silent; and when I questioned her she shut her teeth fiercely together, and answered not a word.

But soon there came a change; one afternoon I noticed that she was terribly restless and excited, and her great eyes, no longer defiant, sought mine continually, with an expression of mute appeal, such as we see in the eyes of a dumb animal when in pain.

My heart ached for her, but I had been so often repulsed, that I thought best to wait for her to speak. When the scholars were dismissed she lingered behind, and as the door closed on the last one she sprang forward, and throwing herself at my feet, with tears and groans and incoherent cries, made known the cause of her wretchedness.

"I've killed Jake, marm! I've killed Jake!" she moaned, rocking herself to and fro.

"How—how is that?" I asked, recoiling from her instinctively.

"Why, 'twas me Jake and Tim fit over, that day they came in kivered with blood! I set 'em at it, and laughed ter see it go on. Then a few days ago they a few days ago they begun again—and I might 'a stopped 'em with a word and I didn't! Somehow I couldn't. But I wish I had! Oh, how I wish I had! If it was only Tim a dyin' now, instead o' Jake, I wouldn't care!" she muttered fiercely. "I allers hated Tim—allers!"

"But, Jinny," said I, wishing to divert her, "are you quite sure Jake will die?"

"Oh, yes marm, they say so; and I fear it here," laying her hand on her heart. I made inquiries as to the nature of Jake's injury, but could gather nothing definite, except that it was a wound from a pistol shot, and that for some unaccountable reason he had made scarcely any show of defending himself according to those who witnessed the encounter, "he seemed all at once spilin' to get killed."

"Perhaps you would like to go to him?" I suggested.

"Oh, I would, I would," she exclaimed eagerly. "I hadn't seen him yet, I hung round the place all last night, fearful to go inside! Yes, I will go!" she cried, with sudden vehemence, her pale cheek flushing, "and I'll die with him, too! One grave shall kiver us—me and Jake!"

An idea occurred to me. "I have had some experience with such wounds," I said. "I might do something for him. Shall I go with you?"

"Oh, yes, yes. Come!" She hurried me out and led the way along a cross road through the woods.

Never a good walker, I soon began to feel weariness, and Jinny noticed that I lagged behind.

"Mebby you're a tired, marm," she remarked. "I don't mind miles o' trampin' myself. I'm used to it. Lem me kerry ye, mum!" And before I could remonstrate she picked me up and shouldered me as if I had been a sack of corn. "'Pears like it'll do me good," she muttered as she strode along seemingly little encumbered by her burden.

At last we reached the miserable hut that Jake called his home. We pushed open the door and looked in. A very old woman crouched by a smoky fire, and on a rude bed in the corner of the room lay Jake, his immense proportions sharply outlined through the scanty covering.

Tige, the dog, crouched at his feet, and took no notice of our approach.

A handsome rifle and a brace of pistols hung against the wall beside the bed; for the cowboy of the Southwest is seldom so poor that he does not own handsome firearms.

As we entered the old woman, who proved to be Jake's mother, got upon her feet with great difficulty, and came toward us. But Jinny laid her finger on her lips and glided swiftly past her to the bed.

Clasping both hands tightly behind her, she leaned over Jake, softly calling his name.

At the sound of her voice he opened his eyes and gazed wildly about, without seeming to see the face so near his own. He turned his head and caught sight of me, and knew me. Brushing his hand slowly across his eyes, he said:

"I didn't know I'd fell asleep, marm," evidently thinking he was in school.

Jinny dropped on her knees beside him and clasped his hands to her bosom. "Oh, Jake, Jake!" she cried in agony, "don't yer see me? Don't yer know your poor Jinny?"

Then his bewildered eyes met hers. "Why, why, Jinny, gal, how's this, how's this?" he muttered; then seeing her tears, he smiled strangely. "Cryin'?" he said. "I allers knowed you had a kind heart. I knowed it, Jinny; thar thar, soothingly. But that wan't no sign that you liked me, was it? I see it all now. But somehow, that day when I found 'twas Tim, for sure," raising his voice, and moving his head restlessly on the pillow, "why then I just laid off and let him kill me, as it were. What's life to me widout Jinny? says I ter myself."

The girl seemed suddenly to have lost all power of speech. She was still kneeling beside him with her face buried in her hands, but no longer sobbing, and as motionless as if she heard him not.

He turned to me. "Can you tell me, marm," he said, with great earnestness, "if so be there's directions in the book—the Test'ment, you know, that you give me—for settlin' such difficulty as mine was? I looked, but I couldn't find no word—no orders."

"If I could only a' gone by the book," he repeated, wistfully, "but as it was we had ter settle it in the old way—pistils and bowie knives. But what's the use o' talkin', it's all squar now." He sighed wearily, and closed his eyes, muttering again to himself, "all squar'!"

I laid my hand on his head and tried to soothe him. I told him that Jinny and I had come to nurse him and make him well again, and that I hoped all would come right.

He put out his hand and touched Jinny, but she made no movement. "Jinny and me use'ter talk sometimes, marm," said he slowly and painfully, "we use'ter talk, that we might go together somewhar', far from this place, and do better. Try ter live more like folks, and 'cordin' ter the book, you know. Give up all this fightin' and swarin', and these poor, miser'ble ways, and have a home together. But thar, what's the use o' talkin'; it's too late now—too late!"

A sharp, passionate cry burst from Jinny's lips, and broke the spell that was upon her. She sprang to her feet, and leaning over Jake once again, clasped both his hands tightly in hers, and fastened her great magnetic eyes upon his own bewildered ones.

"Jake! Jake!" she said, "I say 'tain't too late! We'll have a home together yit—you'n me! Do you hear?"

Yes; at last he understood. His face flushed, brightened. With a mighty effort he threw up both his arms as if to clasp her, and fell fainting on her breast.

Jinny uttered a stifled cry, and at that moment I saw a stream of blood trickling from his side, staining the garments of both as they lay clasped in each other's arms. The exertion had opened his wound afresh, and I feared for him exceedingly.

But to my surprise, I found on examination, that the wound was not mortal—not even a severe one; and his weakness and prostration were probably the results of excitement and loss of blood.

Thanks to my hospital experience I was able to dress the wound properly, and had the satisfaction of assuring his old mother and Jinny that with good nursing he would soon recover.

When he returned to consciousness Jinny was bending over him.

He spoke her name, but she, smiling, laid her finger on his lips and shook her head:

"You want ter get well, don't yer?" she said softly. "I come here to-night to die with yer, but I reckon it's better for us both ter live."—Boston Traveler.

LOCAL OPTION.

The following resolutions were adopted at a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Temperance Association of Friends of Philadelphia, held Eleventh mo. 23d, 1885, and were directed to be published in daily and weekly newspapers throughout the State, viz.:

WHEREAS, The Temperance Association of Friends of Philadelphia are desirous that an Amendment to the Constitution prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks in the State of Pennsylvania, shall be adopted by the Legislature, and submitted to a vote of the people at the earliest practicable day, but we recognize the fact that any legislation which is greatly in advance of public sentiment is undesirable, because incapable of execution; therefore,

Resolved, That we advise all friends of Prohibition and Temperance in Pennsylvania to join hands in opposition to the present system of indiscriminate license for the sale of intoxicants, and in urging upon the Legislature at its next session, the passage of a good practical Local Option Law.

Resolved, That we believe the re-enactment of a Local Option Law will enable many election districts in our State to adopt Prohibition, and thereby greatly improve the social, financial and moral condition of their population. The improvement which the experience of other sections has shown to uniformly follow the enforcement of prohibitory laws—bringing about a decrease of crime, pauperism, and taxation, and an increase of wealth, domestic happiness, and prosperity of every kind—should powerfully influence other districts to follow in line, and thus advance the good of all classes of people in our noble Commonwealth.

By direction of the Committee,
THOMAS SCATTERGOOD, Chairman.
A. WOOLMAN, Secretary.

VALENTINES—WHY DO WE SEND THEM?

Many boys on the night of the third day of July do not go to bed, or if they do so, they arrange to be called long before sunrise, that they may fire guns, blow horns, and make various other noises, by way of "celebrating the Fourth of July." If these boys were asked: "What is the Fourth of July, and why do you celebrate it?" they would be at a loss for an answer. The fourteenth day of February is regarded as St. Valentine's day, and in many places it is the custom with the young people to send Valentines to their friends of the opposite sex. This used to be a pleasant letter, ornamented with cut paper and other devices by the sender, the chief point being to keep from the one who received it the name of the giver. These missives were called "Valentines." Of late years, "Valentines" so called, are made for sale; some of them being marvels of cut and embossed paper, and pictures, grading all the way down to vile and insulting caricatures, which no decent person would look at, much less purchase. If any girl is asked what is a valentine, and why do you send it particularly on February fourteenth? She will be as much puzzled for an answer as her brother, when asked to tell why he celebrates the fourth day of July. The answer probably would be that "it is St. Valentine's Day," but if asked, who was St. Valentine, and why should his day be celebrated? They would fail of giving an answer. Well, the girls would be no worse off than the learned men, who have tried to answer the same question. If there ever was a St. Valentine, it is doubtful if he had anything to do with our Valentine's Day. Those who have looked into the matter say, that in very early times, in several countries, especially those in the northern part of Europe, it was the custom of the young people to assemble; the names of the girls were placed in the box, from which the young men drew them. The girl whose name was drawn was to be to the young man who drew it, his "valentine," and he was to show her special attention for the year. It is said, that these "imaginary engagements," often led them to make real ones.—American Agriculturist for February.

"Good morning, Mrs. Gilligan, how is Patrick this morning?" "Sure he's no better, sir." "Why don't you send him to the hospital to be treated?" "To be treated, is it? Faith, an' its the delirium trimmins he has already."

TOO LARGE A FEE.

A Nipantuck man was arrested for stealing a hog, and at the opening of the trial the Justice of the Peace before whom he was tried asked:

"Mr. Short, have you secured an attorney?"

"Wall, 'Squire," replied the accused, "I didn't know any on 'em, was tryin' to git away."

The Justice frowned on the laugh that followed, then said:

"The court will tolerate no levity, gentlemen. Mr. Short, you had better employ a lawyer to attend to your case for you."

"I thought, 'Squire, as how the old woman hyar would do instid of a lawyer. She's right smart on the talk."

"She cannot plead your case in this court. You had better engage an attorney."

"But the danged lawyers want more than the case is wuth to attend to it."

"There is Mr. Longwind; he's a very good attorney. He'll attend to your case for a very reasonable fee."

"I tried him, 'Squire; he axed too much ter 'tend ther case."

"How much did he want."

"Why, durn his skin, he wanted the hog."

PROTECTION FOR THE BIRDS.

Bird protection in this country is every year assuming a more and more serious aspect. The startling decrease in the numbers of many of our birds, brought about of late years by the unceasing persecution waged for the sake of fashion, has aroused the American Ornithologists' Union to a recognition of the necessity for instant and decided effort in behalf of our birds. To answer this imperative demand the Union has appointed a "Committee on the Protection of the North American birds." This committee was lately organized in New York city with the following membership: Mr. George B. Sennett, Chairman; Mr. Eugene P. Bicknell, Secretary; Mr. J. A. Allen, Dr. J. B. Holder, Dr. George Bird Grinnell, Mr. William Dutcher and Mr. L. S. Foster, all of New York city; Mr. William Brewster, Cambridge, Mass.; Mr. Montague Chamberlain, St. John, N. B.; Col. N. S. Goss, Topeka, Kansas. The objects of the committee are as follows:

1. The gathering of all possible information bearing on the subjects of the destruction and the protection of North American birds.

2. The diffusion of information among the people in respect to the extent of the slaughter of birds for millinery and other mercenary purposes; the wanton killing of birds in sport by men and boys; the robbing of birds' nests; the destruction of the eggs of rails, terns, gulls and other birds for food; and the marked recent decrease of many species resulting from this general destruction; the spreading of information, also, in respect to the utility of birds as a natural check upon the increase of insects injurious to vegetation, and with reference to their interest and value from an æsthetic point of view. This with the object of developing a public sentiment in favor of the rigid protection of our native birds, a sentiment that will naturally spring up strongly and widely as soon as attention is called to the subject.

3. To encourage the formation of bird protective associations and anti-bird-wearing leagues.

4. The perfection of a statute for the protection of birds, drawn with regard to its availability for enactment by all the States and Territories, leaving, however, the game birds, properly so considered, to the care of the game protective associations.

5. The prevention of the collecting of birds and eggs for pseudo-scientific purposes, and the development of a system of co-operation between this committee and the various authorities to whom may be assigned the power of granting permits for the collection of birds in the interest of science.

6. The consideration of the best means for securing the enforcement of bird protective statutes.

The committee is desirous of collecting facts and statistics bearing upon the subject of the destruction of our birds, and will welcome information from any source. It also extends the promise of its hearty co-operation to all persons or societies who may be interested in the protection of our birds.

The headquarters of the committee are at the American Museum of Natural History, Central Park, New York city, where the officers or any of the members may be addressed.

A German student who made very little progress, in taking leave of one of his tutors, began thus with pathos: "Herr Professor, to you I am indebted for all I know—" "Stop, I pray," replied the tutor, "do not mention such a trifle."

Does such a father ever stop to consider that love is the deepest devotion that man knows? Ah! no. Careless is he about outraging the tenderest feelings of the human heart. His mind filled only with sordid thoughts, he bursts in upon the happy pair, exclaiming:

"I want you to understand that I pay the coal bills for this house."

'Tis thus that "Love's young dream" is so frequently transformed into a nightmare.

THE DEATH OF GENERAL HANCOCK

That sturdy soldier, whose valor on the field of battle won him the title of "Superb," Gen. Winfield Scott Hancock, answered the last roll call on Tuesday afternoon. He was a happy blending of hero and statesman—mighty when clad in the garb of war and renowned in civic life. He was gathered to his fathers on Tuesday at the age of 62 years. Grant, McDowell, McClellan and Hancock, a brilliant constellation, have been removed from the military heavens—blotted out, as it were, in one short year. Gen. Hancock was born in Montgomery county, Pa., in the year 1824 and was educated at West Point. As a captain in the Mexican war his record was grand, and in the war for the Union he made a grander one. In 1861, at the breaking out of the rebellion, Hancock was appointed a brigadier general of volunteers, and took part in the campaign on the Potomac. He fought with McClellan at Antietam, and commanded a corps in the battle of Gettysburg, where he was wounded in 1863. A year later Gen. Hancock became a brigadier general in the regular army. From August, 1867, until March, 1868, he commanded the Fifth Military district of the United States. In 1880 he was the Democratic nominee for President and was only beaten by a small popular vote by Garfield. Gen. Hancock was the ideal soldier of his age, of stately physical mould, matchless symmetry, and possessed a dash and elan that made him the idol of the army. His corps was the most distinguished in the army for its bravery and brilliancy and the army officers were unanimous in the opinion that Hancock was a born military genius of the first water. Peace to his heroic ashes.

THE PRESIDENT AND SENATE.

The Constitution of the United States ordains a Government of three grand divisions, the Executive, Legislative and Judicial, each of which departments possesses certain powers and privileges, under the limitations and by virtue of organic law, which neither of the others can legally or honorably interfere with.

The President is independent within his sphere of Constitutional duty, and so is Congress within its sphere, while the Supreme Court wields impartial judgment over the doings of both.

Congress has no more right to dictate to the President than he has to command either the Senate or House of Representatives to do his bidding. Any attempt of the kind would be usurpation of authority, an outrage upon free government, and should be indignantly resented.

We are led to make these remarks because of the avowed desire of such partisan Republican Senators as Edmunds, Sherman and Hoar to demand from President Cleveland, to be used in secret session, his reasons for removing certain office-holders.

Such would be a piece of brazen-faced impudence, devoid of both law and decency, and if the Republican majority of the Senate persist in a course so antagonistic to official propriety, they will make for themselves an unfortunate political investment.

Political intrigue is a rapidly falling stock.

President Cleveland is at all times ready and willing to impart to Senators of both parties proper information regarding his official acts; but he is not the man to be browbeaten.

No! Senators!

There is too strong an element of Jacksonian blood in his veins for any such experiment as that.

He is not a back door or underground politician.

He moves in the sunshine of truth and honesty.

He is determined to do what is right to the very best of his knowledge and ability, and he will never knowingly consent to wrong and dishonor, though a score of embittered partisan Senators yelp themselves hoarse at his heels.

The people, by an overwhelming majority, are for President Cleveland, because he has unmistakably shown that with him public duty is not a shuffling card, but a sacred trust.

The Senate has the undoubted prerogative of rejecting any nomination the President may submit. That far and no farther does its authority over appointments extend.

The President is right and right is the highest of honor.

BRITAIN'S NEW GOVERNMENT.

LONDON, Feb. 7.—The following additional appointments have been made under the new Administration:

Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster—Edward Heneage.

Lord Chancellor of Ireland—John Naish.

Attorney-General of Ireland—Samuel Walker.

Solicitor-General of Ireland—The MacDermott.

Secretary to the Admiralty—John T. Hibbert.

Under Foreign Secretary—Jas. Bryce.

Under Colonial Secretary—George Osborne Morgan.

Under Secretary for India—Sir U. K. Shuttleworth.

Under Secretary for the Home Department.—Henry Broadhurst.

Mr. Redmond, Nationalist member of Parliament, in a speech at Monaghan to-day, urged Irishmen to restrain their violent feelings and not to hamper the new Government, which, he said, would take immediate steps to stop evictions. The hostility of the Whigs to Mr. Gladstone is intense. This is shown in the difficulty experienced by the Premier in filling the Peeresses' posts in the Queen's household. The Duchess of Bedford and Duchess of Westminster have refused appointments and others will follow their example.

The Governor, on Monday last, sent to the Senate the name of Allen McDermott, of Jersey City, to be confirmed as Clerk of the Court of Chancery, in place of the present incumbent, Geo. S. Duryee. Mr. McDermott is a staunch Democrat, and well qualified for the important position. His selection does credit to the Governor.

The coffin containing the body of James A. Garfield has been placed in a bronze sarcophagus. The outer covering of the sarcophagus has been hermetically sealed, and the sarcophagus placed in the vault, where it will remain until the monument to the dead President is completed.

The Republican Senators, aided by Mr. Voorhees, of Indiana, passed the bill admitting Dakota as a State. Ultimately the House will reject the bill and the number of rotten borough Senators will not be increased just this year.

Wm. L. Force, one of the editors and proprietors of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST, was on Tuesday last appointed by the President as Postmaster of Plainfield, N. J. The present Postmaster, Mr. Pope, will retain possession of the office until the new appointee's nomination is confirmed by the Senate and commission received. He takes this opportunity to thank the many friends who have sent him congratulatory letters and telegrams upon his appointment.

Hospital Report.

The medical director of the Hospital, Dr. C. M. Field, makes the following report for month ending January 23:

Number of patients admitted	4
Discharged cured	6
Discharged not improved	1
Died	1
Remaining	3
Total number treated	11

Five patients have been admitted since above report was made.

There has been received as a "Hospital collection from the Congregational church, $22.65.

Horrible.

Monday morning last the remains of a man were found scattered along the tracks of the Central Railroad at the Spring street crossing, Elizabeth. The mutilation of the body was so extraordinary that more than one thought it must be the remains of two men; indeed, amongst the members found was a hand with five fingers and six fingers separated. Hair was also picked up that was of different colors, and it may have been two men who were ground up. It is supposed that the party must have been stealing a ride on a freight train, as the track-walker, James Maroney, passed over that place of track an hour or so before and noticed a Philadelphia freight train pass him soon after. The only theory thus far advanced is, that the party must have been asleep and jolted off. They have not, as yet, been identified.

A Healthy Organization.

Whereas, It has been reported by some evil disposed person or persons, that the Plainfield Reform Club was not in a healthy condition, it was suggested at the last regular meeting of the Club to have the reports of the Executive Committee, and also of the Treasurer, published in the papers of this city, to wit:

REPORT OF EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

To the President and Members of the Plainfield Reform Club:

On this the second annual meeting of Reform Club, the Executive Committee report the following account of their stewardship for the past year: The committee in their management and work for the Club have held thirty meetings, and have caused to be constructed for the convenience and necessities of the Club, and the occupants of the hall, certain improvements, viz: An out building and screens; a door, and brick and stone stairway from the rear of the parlors. For the health and comfort of the members we have provided a new driven well, a sink and cesspool.

Complaints having been made that the chairs were too close together, and therefore uncomfortable, we have spread the seats and had them renumbered throughout the hall; and for the purpose of entertainments have taken steps to have diagrams made of the chairs. A gong in the parlor has been provided for calling the janitor; and the windows in the gable have been hinged and a system of ventilation adopted for the assembly rooms. It has been the purpose of the committee in all things to promote the prosperity of the Club and the cause in which we are all engaged. For the particulars of expenses and receipts we refer to the reports of the Treasurer and Financial Secretary. The year has been one of great prosperity to the Club; the undying principles of which have taken root in the public, promising great good. One year ago we were in debt a thousand dollars. To-day we are practically out of debt, and as shown by the Treasurer, have a surplus in his hands. An interest wide-spreading in our cause is growing without a parallel in the history of moral reformers—brightening the future with the glad promise of a day when no destroying liquor dealer shall by their presence insult the virtue and patriotism of our land, or pollute the fountain of the people's government.

Respectfully submitted,
WM. B. MATSON,
HENRY H. LOWRIE,
H. N. SPENCER,
JACOB VOEHL,
JNO. H. CUTHBERT.

WESTFEILD WISPS.

The two new houses on North avenue are rapidly approaching completion.

We omitted to state last week that J. Warren Brown was re-elected President of Empire Engine Co. No. 2, for the ensuing year.

We are sorry to learn that Mr. Wm. D. Davis, of First street, who has resided among us for a long number of years, intends removing to N.Y. city in a short time.

At the annual meeting of H. & L. Co. No. 1, Wm. Gale was elected Foreman; C. H. French, 1st Asst.; Edgar R. Pearsall, 2d Asst.; A. W. Burdick, Secretary; A. J. Miller, Treasurer.

Miss Sarah Spicer was united in marriage to J. B. Taltaval, of New York city, at the residence of Mrs. Harriet Manning on Picton street, Tuesday evening at 8 p. m. Mr. Taltaval is editor of The Telegraph Advocate.

Robert Woodruff, Jr., has the contract for excavating the new cellar of J. Warren Brown, corner of Dudley and Lawrence avenue. Mr. J. Henry Manning received the contract for carting the brick. After trying a few loads he concluded he had rather cart ice.

From the numerous calls for houses to rent at this time of the year, there will not be dwellings enough to meet the demand. If there was fifty new houses erected that would rent for about $300 per year, they would all soon be taken up. Who will be the enterprising citizen to make a start? It will be a paying investment.

At the late Bench show in Madison Square Garden, N. Y., two dogs from the Elm Kennels of our town took first prize as Pointers, Mr. George M. Thatcher's dog "Beauvoir" and Cyrus P. Wilcox's "Dawn." They were trained by Mr. Wilcox, than whom none better knows how to train the dumb beast, teaching them almost to talk.

An entertainment with Tumbleronicon, Zither, songs and recitations will be given in the M. E. Church on Monday evening, Feb. 15, by Professor D. W. Robertson, F. W. Isemburth and J. W. Macy. Prof. Robertson entertained the Sunday School of the church at their last Christmas anniversary with the Tumbleronicon, with which everyone was very much pleased.

Our Town Committee met on Thursday evening last to examine the Collector's annual statement, preparatory to having the same printed and published. The annual financial statement of our township for the year 1885-86 will show our town to be on a good, substantial basis, free from debt, no bonds and low taxes, with good roads, street lights, first-class fire department, short distance from New York city, good railroad accommodations, with gentlemanly and efficient agents, and telegraph office open day and night.

At the annual election for officers of the Westfield Fire Department, held on Tuesday evening last, Patrick Traynor, of Empire Engine Co. No. 2, was elected Chief, Benj H. Woodruff, 1st Asst., and Anson B. Smith, 2d Asst., the two latter being members of Bucket and Engine Co. No. 1. The following is result of the votes cast: Bucket and Engine Co. 1—34 votes; H. & L. Co. No. 1—14 votes; Empire Engine Co. No. 2—20 votes. Patrick Traynor for Chief received 44 votes; Jno. Wilcox, 24 votes. Benj H. Woodruff for 1st Assistant received 37 votes; Thomas H. Love, 25 votes; Chas. H. French, 1 vote. Anson B. Smith for 2d Assistant received 36 votes; Geo. Todd, 28 votes; Edgar R. Pearsall, 1 vote. Harmony and good feeling prevailed among all the companies, which is as it should.

The marriage of Mr. Leonard Melick, of Plainfield, N. J., and Miss Josephine Baker, daughter of F. R. Baker, took place on Thursday evening, Feb. 4th, at 6 30 p. m., at the residence of the bride's parents, in this town, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. N. W. Cadwell, of Westfield, in presence of the families and intimate friends. They were united standing under the marriage bell, which was made of marche niel roses. The ushers were brothers of the bride, Messrs. John and Frank Baker; maid of honor, Miss Emily Pierson, of Westfield, and Mr. Stewart Melick, of Staten Island, cousin of the groom, best man. The bride was dressed in pink satin, the front embroidered with white plush roses and arasene, with lace trimmings. After the happy pair received congratulations a bountiful repast was served. Music was rendered by Miss Mamie F. Chedister, of Newark, N. J. After a short time of social intercourse the bride and groom departed for their trip to Washington, etc., amid a shower of rice and old shoes. Many handsome and useful presents were received.

A CARD!

Last Monday I commenced the largest White Goods Sale, on the most liberal scale that was ever inaugurated in this city, which proved successful, far beyond my most sanguine expectations. Many very complimentary remarks were passed by the numerous purchasers who came to secure the great bargains. Each day's sales, up to the present, has been remarkably large, and I wish hereby to extend my grateful thanks to all who visited my store during this sale, and contributed to the success of the same. I regret that some who came TOO LATE to secure the extra Bargains that were named for each special day, felt disappointed. I provided myself with what I judged would be a sufficient quantity for each day, but the demand was greater than I had anticipated, and I was unable to secure new stock in time to meet the demand. I trust this explanation will be satisfactory to any such.

THE regular February meeting of the Union Club will be held next Monday evening at 8 o'clock.

THE Mayor and Council of the Borough of North Plainfield held an adjourned meeting this evening.

COUNSELLOR MCCLURE had his first case before a jury, Tuesday, and won it with great skill and ability.

COUNCIL meeting next Monday evening, and four more applications for licenses to sell liquor to be acted on.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN H. HONEYMAN have a son and a daughter, both, new. The latter is not yet a week old, however.

THE broken down organ of the Crescent avenue church is not to be repaired, so it seems probable that a new one will be ordered.

DURING the evening at the Reform Hall, Wednesday, the Plainfield Cornet Band entertained the audience with the National airs of old Ireland.

MRS. ROBERT SIMPSON is seriously ill at her home, which condition is to a great effect induced by prostration at the recent death of her father—the late John Wilson.

TUESDAY the 23d has been selected for the second Carnival at The Crescent. The sale of reserved seats will begin at the box-office on the morning of the 20th.

MUCH of the credit due for the prompt and efficient service rendered at the Van Deventer fire last week, belongs to 2nd Assistant Chief, Irwin Waters, who had charge of it.

A WELL KNOWN contractor was taken ill on North avenue, Friday morning last, but by careful attendance has so entirely recovered as to be out again in good health.

A BIG bull-dog, belonging to Mr. Fritz Frazee of this city, bit his owner through the thumb, one day last week, and thus caused a most ugly wound. Fritz thinks about taking a trip to Paris.

WE never expect to see anything look worse than did the railroad bridges, but the water sheds that have just been built beneath them, are almost as much of a nuisance for the same reason.

TWO dead dogs were exposed to public gaze in the middle of Third street, last Friday, on which was a sign that read they were awaiting removal by a "Democratic Street Commissioner."

SOME men in a sleigh, with considerable of the old stuff aboard, amused themselves Saturday evening, by driving up and down the street past a police officer that vainly tried to catch them.

THE sleighing is all gone again but that was not what stopped the trotting on Park avenue. A number of the owners of fast goers have been brought before the bar of justice and fined accordingly.

THE suits that have been selected with great care for the coming carnival at The Crescent, will be on exhibition at that place before the date of the event, and those desiring to appear in fancy dress may thus choose their costumes themselves.

A YOUNG man from the country was seen in a North avenue barber shop, last Saturday evening, getting his hair cut with his overcoat and gloves on. Possibly he was afraid to trust them off his person, having heard what a wicked place a city was.

MESSRS. Barkalew & Dunn will shortly open their new store on North avenue, with a full line of fancy and staple groceries. Experience has taught them just what the people want and just what they don't get. So that's just what Barkalew & Dunn are going to give the people.

THE young folks will have a Valentine matinee at The Crescent, to-morrow afternoon. Every one of the children present will receive a handsome valentine as a souvenir of the occasion, and as an expression of the management's appreciation of their faithful patronage during the season.

WE received too late for announcement in our last issue, the information the Rev. Dr. Purdy, an eminent orator of N. Y. City, would lecture scientifically on the evil effects of alcohol upon the human system, at Reform Hall, Tuesday evening last, under the auspices of the W. C. T. U. Admission was free to all.

ONCE more the prospects of the peach crop are completely ruined. Next Summer there will be no Delawares, no Jerseys, no nothing but blank despair for those who dote on the luscious fruit. Do not be alarmed, gentle reader, for it is the same old chestnut that has made its annual appearance since the beginning of the century.

THOMAS A. EDISON, the electrician, is to be married on the twenty-fourth of this month to Miss Mina Miller, daughter of Lewis Miller, the millionaire inventor of the Buckeye Mower and Reaper, at Akron, Ohio. The Rev. Dr. Vincent will assist at the ceremony. Mr. Edison first met his intended bride at one of the Chautauqua gatherings last summer.

MISS MARIE BOWEN, who will read at Reform Hall next Tuesday evening, comes to this city highly recommended by the press and clergy of the South. She is to appear in place of the Hungarian Band that had been engaged by the W. C. T. U. as a part of its course but found it impossible to fill the date. Miss Bowen is a reader and impersonator, young, gifted and cultured.

AS is its sometime custom, the boiling oil in the furnaces of the Central Co's oil cloth works caught fire just before noon of Tuesday last. Foreman Mumford of Zephyr H. & L. Co., sent word to his driver, and gave a general alarm. He then went with a number of his men to the scene, and the flames were quenched without the assistance of Nos. 1 and 2 steamers that promptly arrived.

THE severity of the weather undoubtedly had its effect on the size of the audience to hear the Hon. George Wendling's lecture on a personal devil, at Music Hall, Thursday evening of last week. The speaker proved himself to be an orator of more than the usual amount of force and power of argument, but failed to show those present anything but a theoretical foundation for his claims.

THIS is the season of the year when the sentimental young man and young woman and the joker as well pay their devoirs to St. Valentine. The afflicted youth who is head over heels in love will invest his spare change in the purchase of a ginger bread sheet of paper with a pair of hearts transfixed by a cruel arrow pictured on it, and from that time onward to the fourteenth, will devote his leisure time to grinding out with toil and pain some pretty verses. He will then send the pair of hearts and the verses together to his best girl, and if that amiable damsel does not "come down" after receiving them her heart must be cold indeed.

PRATT'S dog biscuits are for sale at Vanderbeek's in the Chautauqua Building.

SWEET "harbingers" of Spring—the blue-birds—sang in the trees, Tuesday morning.

A FROZEN nose was the record of last Friday's weather. Other Brooks in the vicinity were frozen before.

MICHAEL URDAL has just been granted a large grading contract at Pamrapo, by the Morris and Cumings Dredging Co. He will, however, be on hand in the Spring to serve his many patrons as usual.

THERE will be a meeting of the "Middlesex Gun Club Club" held at the law offices of Suydam & Stillman, this city, Saturday evening, Feb. 13th, at eight p. m. All members are requested to be present.

MR. GEORGE RICKERT, Gazette's driver, who was so badly hurt by falling from his seat a few months ago, sailed for Savannah yesterday. He is as good as ever and will return to his duties in May. He will visit his aunt, Mrs. Geo. Hartfelder.

SINCE our last reference to that greatest of all theatrical successes—Adonis—a thousand or so more nights have been added without any prospect of a cessation of crowded houses. Parties from this city to the Bijou to see and hear Dixey, are quite the fashion.

ONLY Commissioners Jones and Morris were present at the regular February meeting of the Board of Managers of the Fire Department, Tuesday evening, consequently it was adjourned for want of a quorum. As soon as the President can discover just when enough members of the Board can attend, he will call another meeting.

AT the church of the Holy Cross, Wednesday evening, Miss Mabel Brooks, of West Seventh street and Mr. Edward Hooley of Central avenue, were married by the Rev. T. Logan Murphy. A reception was afterwards held at the home of the bride, attended by a number of invited guests. The presents which were unusually costly, numbered about one hundred.

KATE CASTLETON in "Crazy Patch," with an intensely funny company to support her, appeared at Music Hall, Tuesday evening, for the benefit of Property-man Mattox. Hundreds of those that he has benefited by his services of the past, failed to give him the patronage that was due, and but little financial profit resulted. The play throughout was one of the best of its kind.

TONY HART will appear in his new play at Music Hall, next Wednesday evening, wherein he, himself, takes eight different characters, and the excellent company selected to support him will fill out the rest. As Mr. Hart has consented to give his play in Plainfield before even New York will see it, such an achievement by our local manager deserves financial recognition by the people. Let's fill the house.

DR. LONG'S horse ran away last Friday morning, and making his way into the yard back of Griffen's hardware store, plunged down the stairway that leads into Gavett's cellar. Fortunately the door at the foot was closed or the animal would have had a picnic among the glass-ware and crockery. The efforts of 25 bosses and two or three to do the work, shortly rescued the horse from his strange position.

OF course if The Crescents won against every polo team that is invited to play with them, it would be very inhospitable and might interfere with the securing of opponents. The game with the "Temples" of Elizabeth, last Saturday evening, resulted in a victory for the visitors and the first defeat that the Plainfield team has received in two weeks. To-morrow evening at The Crescent, the "Excelsiors" of New Brunswick will play.

AND now No. 1 steamer is in a bad way and the boys will soon be around with another subscription paper. When No. 2 was condemned and laid up, her wheels were used to replace No. 1's old ones. They had been in use for the past eighteen years but were an improvement on Gazelle's and it was necessary to use them. Coming around the corner of Park avenue, Tuesday, one spoke was knocked out and two others broken in one of the wheels, so that it is now dangerous to life if they remain in use.

Personals.

We were pleased to receive a call from one of Plainfield's former prominent residents, Mr. Wm. Flagg, on Monday last. Mr. Flagg is now a resident of Atlantic City.

Sexton vs. Frey.

This Friday evening there is to be an interesting exhibition at billiards in Warnock's temperance billiard parlors, No. 30 West Front street, between the celebrated cushion carom shot, Sexton, and champion pool player, Frey. This will undoubtedly be a highly interesting entertainment, and as Mr. Warnock keeps a most popular temperance resort, there should be a large attendance to witness these wonderful players.

Furniture At Cost.

In consequence of the anticipated removal of Frank C Green's furniture warerooms to his new store on the corner of Park avenue and Second street, for the next week the immense stock of furniture and other goods in his present store must be sold at a sacrifice, as Mr. Green intends to stock his new store with new goods. This opportunity to secure bargains should not be neglected by those in want of first-class goods.

District Messenger Service.

The Central office of the District Messenger Service and the B. & O. Telegraph office have been removed to new quarters on the ground floor of Corey's building, on Park avenue near Front street, where they have most comfortable quarters. Both these services are becoming more popular daily with the Plainfield community. Capable officials and clerks are always in attendance to accommodate the public by quick and reliable service.

The Concert of the Season.

As the Weber Quartette is to appear at the concert to be given in Music Hall, next Thursday evening, the public have a treat in store. The members have never sung together in this city before, but their success in New York and other places give them a reputation unequalled by any like combination. With them on the same occasion will present themselves the New York Standard String Quartette, that renders instrumental music in perfection. This is to be one of the best concerts ever arranged in Plainfield—which is saying a great deal. It is the sixth of the Y. M. C. A. Course.

A Successful Sale.

Edsall says his special white goods sale this week proved successful beyond his most sanguine expectations. His store has been thronged with customers and the dullest month in the year for trade was turned into a lively scene, that even the Christmas season did not surpass. Although he laid in what he judged a full supply of goods named in his advertisement for each special day the demand was too great for him to meet and all did not secure them. None, however, had cause for disappointment, as there was over one hundred other most attractive bargains displayed all through the store. See his "card" and advertisement in another column.

A tramp went into a house in Missouri and spit on the parlor carpet. The woman was sick in bed, but she got up and broke his collar-bone and ran him to the woods.

Notice to North Plainfield Taxpayers.

The list of names of those who have failed to pay their Borough and township taxes, is now in the hands of the printer, and the names will be published next week. The township committee desire to give this the last notice to all delinquents. All taxes remaining unpaid after Tuesday next, 16th inst. will positively be advertised.

Increasing the Parnell Parlimentary Fund.

The Home Rule Club of this city and North Plainfield held a most extensive, enthusiastic and successful meeting at Reform Hall, Wednesday evening, and raised a lot of money towards swelling the Parlimentary Fund and assisting the cause of Charles Stewart Parnell, "Ireland's Uncrowned King". The Hall and gallery were packed with the supporters of the struggle of the Irish for liberty, and the platform was packed with the prominent men of the city. Secretary R. B. Perkins introduced Mayor Rockfellow as the Chairman of the meeting, who replied to the honor with a very apt speech. The following were announced as the Vice Presidents of the evening: Rev. P. E. Smyth, Rev. T. J. O'Hanlon, ex-Mayor Maxson, Corporation Counsel Marsh, City Judge Ulrich, City Physician Boone, W. J. Leonard of the Central Times and Messrs French, Platt, Sayres, Spencer, Schermerhorn and Price. Letters of regret at their inability to be present were read from County Clerk Vosseller enclosing $25, and Messrs W. H. Brower and D. S. McCarthy enclosing $5 each. The orator of the evening, Gen'l O'Bierne of New York, then addressed the meeting, followed by Father O'Hanlon. President French of the Reform Club, Dr. W. C. Boone and Mr. Sayres. A vote of thanks was tendered the Mayor, and $260 was contributed.

Death of John Wilson.

It was with surprise and regret that our citizens were on Saturday morning last informed of the sudden death of ex-Street Commissioner John Wilson, who had been confined to his home on Mountain avenue, but a few days by illness, caused from inflammation of the bladder and kidneys. On Thursday, Dr. Tomlinson, assisted by Dr. Long, performed an operation on their patient, hoping thereby to save his life. The operation revealed the fact that Mr. Wilson's death must shortly occur from the above causes, which it did on Saturday morning. Mr. Wilson was born in Ayrshire, Parish of Newmilns, Scotland, in 1828, and came to this country in the year 1851. His first employment was with Mr. Lewis M. Force, at his saw mill on Front street, now known as Hyde's mill, afterward entering the employ of P. M. French, at his mills on Somerset street. Later he engaged with the late Dr. Chas. Stillman, as gardener, remaining in that gentleman's employ a number of years, until he was appointed Street Commissioner, which position he held four terms with credit alike to himself and the city. At the same time he engaged in the ice business with ex-Councilman Robert Simpson, and continued such business up to the time of his death. A year or so ago he engaged in the stone crushing business at the "Notch," North Plainfield, and carried on quite an extensive business. Mr. Wilson also had charge of the Johnston Dairy Farm on Mountain avenue, where he resided. Mr. Wilson was a great lover of his native country's games, and a few years back was instrumental in furnishing our citizens with a fine entertainment of Caledonian games and Scottish pastimes on the Plainfield Athletic grounds in the lower part of the city, he being Chief of the Union Co. Caledonian Club. He was a true Scot, rough in exterior and speech, but kind hearted and honest in all his dealings, and a respected citizen. A widow and seven children survive him, Mrs. Jno. Walker, Mrs. Robert Simpson, Nettie, Mattie, James Y., Andrew and Jasper. Mr. Wilson was an honored member of Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, F. & A. M., of this city. The funeral services were held on Tuesday last, and were largely attended, Rev. A. H. Tuttle preaching an impressive funeral sermon. The pall-bearers were E. R. Pope, William H. Shotwell, Jacob Long, John Meeker, George Mitchell, of New York, and John Young, of Jersey City. The two latter are ex-Chiefs of the N. Y. Caledonian Club. Among those present at the funeral were Mayor Haynes, of Newark, Col. John Rose, John L. Hamilton, ex-President of the Grand National Curling Club, of N. Y., and L. D. Roberts, editor and publisher of the Scottsman, N. Y. city. The remains were interred in the Presbyterian Cemetery, North Plainfield.

Borough Council.

The Borough Council of North Plainfield met in regular session in the parlor of Warren engine house at eight o'clock, Friday evening, February fifth, 1886.

Present—Mayor Van Winkle and Councilmen Arnold, Bronson, Ludlow, Slater, Thickstun and Weaver.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

A petition from residents of Grove-st., asking the Council to lay sidewalks on the northeasterly side of said street from Greenbrook road to city line was read and referred to the Committee on Streets.

A report from Plainfield Gas Light Co., to furnish gas at ten cents a light per night was received.

Also one from the N. Y. & N. J. Globe Light Co., who agreed to furnish lights at nine and one-half cents each per night, and if the Borough furnish posts, at nine cents a light per night, to burn from evening to dawn, was received and referred to Committee on Streets.

A communication from Joseph B. Miller stating that he had closed the Casino skating rink was read and referred to Committee on Licenses.

The Clerk's report for January was read showing a balance of $113 83, and ordered filed.

Councilman Weaver reported that the petition for sidewalks, which had been referred to Committee on Streets, that the property owners had been notified according to law, and favorable replies received in all cases except one, that of Mrs. Eliza W. Stiger.

Mr. Ludlow offered a resolution that owing to the inclemency of the weather the matter of laying walks be laid over for the present. Carried.

The following bills were audited and ordered paid: A. M. Griffen, $9 53; Jno. H. Allen, .75; Unionist-Gazette, $2.40.

Mr. Arnold reported a complaint of a nuisance existing on the corner of Somerset street and Linden avenue. On motion referred to Committee on Streets and Health.

Mr. Slater offered an ordinance to designate the place to hold the next Borough election, which after its second reading was tabled for future action.

A communication was received from Miss Ada W. Marsh stating that a number of boys who congregate about the engine house, Somerset-st., amuse themselves by masquerading nights and entering Mr. Hugheon's place of business, greatly obstructing his business and asking the Council to protect him from their further annoyance. No one had thus far been identified on account of their disguises.

Mr. Slater moved the matter be placed in the hands of the Marshal. Motion carried.

A special meeting was called for next Friday evening, February twelfth, by order of Mayor.

On motion Council adjourned to meet on the twelfth instant. After adjournment an executive session was called to discuss future financial expenditures and to guard against the possibility of exceeding the limited $1,200 appropriation.

ALLEGORY AND TABLEAUX.

For the past twenty-five years Prof. J. M. Hagar has been producing throughout the large cities of the United States, "The Great Republic" in allegory and tableaux, with the assistance of the public school children for the benefit of whose library the entertainment was arranged. Mr. Hagar had never supposed that in so small a place, comparatively, as Plainfield, the necessary talent could be secured in sufficient quantity to assure the success of the affair, but some one having endorsed the high standing and the wealth of culture contained within the walls of Miss Buckley's schools, he decided to try it here. What was the result? During Friday and Saturday evenings and Saturday afternoon of last week, "The Great Republic's" rise and progress was pictured on the stage of Music Hall in living tableaux of grace, beauty and ability by the scholars and past-graduates of the Plainfield public schools, in as perfect a manner and with as enjoyable effect as ever before, no matter where nor how much talent was available.

Miss Bulkley has not only reason to be proud of the achievement of the scholars of her schools collectively, but she has every excuse for self satisfaction over the fact that no one took a smaller or a larger part in the perfection of the allegory that had not at some time been either directly or indirectly under her tuition and training. To Mr. Hagar there is also due great credit for his efforts and their results in so short a time for rehearsing and drilling. Upon his arrival in this city he came directly to this office, and THE CONSTITUTIONALIST, glad to assist the schools in any scheme for their advancement and financial good, joined with him in his work of putting the matter before the public. We have Mr. Hagar's personally expressed appreciation, and the large audiences that gathered are the assurances of the public of its confidence in our endorsement. Among the others not present on the stage that took part in the achievement, was Miss Carrie Dewey, who presided at the "Steinway Grand."

The audience on the first night was composed principally of those parents whose children were on the stage, and those who had purchased tickets at the solicitation of their nephews and nieces. All expected to be bored with stiff pictures represented by stiffer figures in the usual style of school tableaux. But so soon as the curtain rose the fact was plain that so interesting and pleasing an entertainment of its kind had never before been witnessed in this city. Every one present went away at the conclusion entirely gratified and their universal approval and enthusiastic recommendation of the affair resulted in packing the Hall at both the following representations.

The opening disclosed an artistic grouping of Indians engaged in the worship of the sun. Their gay garments gave color to the scene and their postures were appropriate and graceful. Theodore Gillies, Jr., the Soothsayer, addresses the tribe, and its Princess, Miss Grace Wheeler replies to wondering thoughts as to what exists "far, far to sea," by sending a Warrior, Mr. Frank Newman, to "watch the line where blue meets blue." The audience was then captivated by the sweet soprano of Miss Alice Holmes, an Indian Maiden, who breaks forth in song so soft and rich. The sudden entrance of the Warrior with news of the approach of men with "shining beards and faces fair," startle the tribe and all shrink back as Columbus, Mr. Tieman Horn, enters followed by his sailors. The leader stoops gracefully and prays in silence on bended knee, while the effect of the picture is heightened by the grouping of the bewildered Indians on one side and the sturdy attendants of Columbus on the other.

The curtain that dropped on this first scene, rose almost immediately upon the tableau of the landing of the Pilgrims. This was one of the most beautiful of all pictures, and to particularize more than the charming appearance of Miss Jean Erickson, and the grace of gesture and elocution of Mr. Fred Cuthbert, the Chaplain, would be unfair to the others who took part and added so much to the whole effect. This representation changed to the Treaty of Wm. Penn, Mr. Thomas Brown, Jr., with the Indians at Philadelphia, in 1682. Mr. Brown sang with good effect and some embarrassment, an appropriate solo. Following was a tableau of the capture of Major Andre, which changed to one representing very vividly the unsuccessful attempt of the prisoner to escape.

Mr. Hagar's successful drilling of the talent at hand, was shown in the quick changes and perfect posing of those who portrayed a leaf from the early history of the country in a pioneer's cabin. Six scenes were given by signal, and every tableau was without blemish or awkwardness. The scores of little girls in white that marched and sang in unison, strewing the path in front of the Father of his country, Mr. Herbert Peck, with roses, combined in a tableau of a grand coronation of Washington with flowers, that ended part first of the entertainment.

Part second opened with the entrance of Miss Maude Agnes Bowers, the most enchanting and loveliest goddess that ever represented Liberty or impersonated a mythological beauty of any name. She sits enthroned as the thirteen original States enter, and listens to the address of Miss Nora Thorn, one of the number. Another solo by Mr. Brown follows, and the twenty-five new States march in and arrange themselves before the Goddess as their spokeswoman, Miss Florence Stevens, also addresses her to whose care they give themselves. Miss Laura Runyon's solo "The Flag of the Free," that precedes the welcome of the Goddess, was well sung, and the chorus in which all joined was greeted with some applause. Right here we cannot resist saying that a Plainfield audience is about as dead a gathering in the way of enthusiasm and audibly expressed approval, as can be found. We either are so dumb that we do not recognize merit, or we are too fashionable to vent our feelings in public. This undeserved lack of applause was particularly apparent throughout the Allegory of which we are writing.

The attention of everybody was seized and retained during Miss Bowers' addresses. Her perfect interpretation of the part and her wonderful powers of elocution and action were not a revelation; they had been recognized before; but not one particle the less were they valued upon this occasion. The States all join in song again until the attendant Spirit, little Mabel Runyon, enters and announces the coming of two men from foreign shores. Messrs. Horn and Cuthbert appear again but as representatives from Germany and Ireland. In their hands is thus left the comedy element of the evening, and in capable hands it is. Mr. George Stevens acted the reclaimed negro with good effect, and Miss Hawkins as Massachusetts, Miss Nettie Thorn as South Carolina and Miss F. Clark as New York were very satisfactory representatives.

The third part brought forward the military in combination with the other characters, and resulted in many pleasing situations and tableaux. The drum corps of the G. A. R. Post were greatly admired for their playing, and the solos and choruses of the States and the soldiers were most pleasing. Touching tributes to Presidents Lincoln, Garfield, and Grant was given, upon the entrance of Miss Bird as Illinois. The grand final tableau of Peace under the glow of colored lights, was arranged as follows:

CENTRE PIECE.

1. Goddess of Liberty crowning a maimed soldier.
2. Attendant Spirit kneeling.
3. Washington in background, overlooking the scene, surrounded by flower girls who strewed his path with flowers.

RIGHT OF CENTRE.

1. Ceres, Goddess of the Harvest, bearing a sheaf of wheat.
2. Soldier and lady, the absent returned, and group listening to the hero's story.
3. Illinois, Ohio and New York confronted by messenger offering condolence.

LEFT OF THE CENTRE.

1. Massachusetts and South Carolina, out of the deadly breach, now clasp hands over the negro freed from bondage.
2. Group listening to a soldier just returned from the war, who tells of a brother soldier's heroism and death.
3. Columbus describing the Planets to an Indian Group.

MISCELLANEOUS DISPOSITION.

1. On the extreme right and left rear of the stage were the soldiers of the Army of the Potomac, Sherman's Raiders, and other "boys in blue," who have stacked arms and rejoice that the conflict is over.
2. Right and left of Goddess, the States, arranged North and South alternately, with spears crossed once again in the bonds of peace and fraternal union.
3. In the rear are sailors and soldiers viewing the scene as one of bright promise to the whole nation.
4. Emigrants—German and Irishman, etc.

The financial result of the event has been the addition of about $250 to the School library fund, and all without interfering with the studies and discipline of the schools. Miss Buckley herself, gladly testifies to such effect. She says that she has always been opposed to school entertainments that distract attention from regular school work, but the desire to get needed books for the school Library, rather than faith in Prof. Hager's assurance that it would not interfere with the daily duties, prevailed upon her to give her sanction to the entertainment. The rehearsals were all held out of school hours, and it was thoroughly understood that if work suffered in any case the pupil's name would be dropped from the list of those to take part. Of about 300 engaged not one failure was reported by the teachers.

County Teachers' Meeting.

The Somerset County Teachers' Association held its session in the public school building at Bound Brook on the 6th inst. Mr. Hoffman, the Vice President, called the meeting to order at 10 a. m. Devotional exercises, roll call and the regular business of the session occupied the first half hour. Mr. Dungen then read a letter on Mensuration. He illustrated many of his problems by diagram, and called out some questions relative to the practical value of the problem given, responded to by the County Superintendent and Mr. J. S. Haynes. After a short recess, Mr. C. E. Boss gave a lesson on practical work in the school room, developing the rule for square root, and illustrating each step by drawings and also by colored blocks. Square Root taught in this way must be thoroughly understood. Queries were then collected to be read in the afternoon. After a few moments of social chat, the association in response to a cordial invitation, proceeded to another room where a tempting lunch was spread, and deftly served by the young ladies of the Bound Brook school. Promptly at two o'clock the association again assembled, and the subject of Reading Circles was presented by the County Superintendent. Two schools—Raritan, Mr. Geo. E. West, Principal, and North Plainfield, Mr. C. E. Boss, Principal, reported a Circle already organized and every teacher enrolled in the membership. An expression of the purpose of the teachers, in regard to pursuing the prescribed course of reading was called for, and a favorable response was given by nearly every member present. Mr. West then gave a lesson in book-keeping, the teachers forming a class and filling out the blanks from dictation as if themselves pupils in a class room. These lessons have been very helpful to the teachers. A recess of a few minutes was then taken, after which Miss Bainbridge assuming that the teachers were young children, instructed them in elementary geography, developing in a very happy manner the cardinal points, map and scale—requiring her pupils to draw a map of the room, and closing with a rapid review. Owing to the lateness of the hour the paper on "Advanced Reading" by Mr. Cookingtom and the recitation by Mr. Voorhees were laid over till the next meeting. A resolution thanking the people and teachers of Bound Brook was unanimously adopted. Mr. J. S. Haynes, in behalf of the association, expressed their pleasure at the presence of the President, Mr. E. L. Keenan, to which Mr. Keenan replied in a short address. The following programme for the next meeting was reported by the committee.

Methods of Teaching Spelling...Geo. B. Randolph.
Essay......Miss Van Kirk.
Recitation......Mr. Voorhees.
Advantages of Studying History......Miss Stebis.
Language......Miss L. M. Wilson.
School Government......Mr. J. S. Haynes.
Electricity......Mr. Stryker.
Recitation......Miss Wyckoff.

The next meeting of the association will be held at North Plainfield on the first Saturday in May.

Surface Indications

What a miner would very properly term "surface indications" of what is beneath, are the Pimples, Sties, Sore Eyes, Boils, and Cutaneous Eruptions with which people are annoyed in spring and early summer. The effete matter accumulated during the winter months, now makes its presence felt, through Nature's endeavors to expel it from the system. While it remains, it is a poison that festers in the blood and may develop into Scrofula. This condition causes derangement of the digestive and assimilatory organs, with a feeling of enervation, languor, and weariness—often lightly spoken of as "only spring fever." These are evidences that Nature is not able, unaided, to throw off the corrupt atoms which weaken the vital force. To regain health, Nature must be aided by a thorough blood-purifying medicine; and nothing else is so effective as

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

which is sufficiently powerful to expel from the system even the taint of Hereditary Scrofula.

The medical profession indorse AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, and many attestations of the cures effected by it come from all parts of the world. It is, in the language of the Hon. Francis Jewett, ex-State Senator of Massachusetts and ex-Mayor of Lowell, "the only preparation that does real, lasting good."

PAPA'S LETTER.

I was sitting in the study,
Writing letters, when I heard:
"Please, dear mamma, Bridget told me
Mamma mustn't be 'isturbed.

"But I's tired of the kitty,
Want some ozzer fing to do.
Writing letters, is 'ou, mamma?
Tan't I write a letter, too?"

"Not now, darling, mamma's busy,
Run and play with kitty now."
"No, no, mamma, me write letter;
Tan if 'ou will show me how."

I would paint my darling's portrait,
As his sweet eyes searched my face—
Hair of gold and eyes of azure,
Form of childish, witching grace.

But the eager face was clouded,
As I slowly shook my head,
Till I said: "I'll make a letter
Of you, darling boy, instead."

So I parted back the tresses
From his forehead high and white,
And a stamp in sport I pasted
Mid its waves of golden light.

Then I said: "Now, little letter,
Go away and bear good news."
And I smiled as down the staircase
Clattered loud the little shoes.

Leaving me, the darling hurried
Down to Bridget, in his glee,
"Mamma's writing lots of letters,
I'se a letter. Bridget, see!"

No one heard the little prattler,
As once more he climbed the stair,
Reached his little cap and tippet,
Standing on the entry chair.

No one heard the front door open,
No one saw the golden hair
As it floated o'er his shoulders,
On the crisp October air.

Down the street the baby hastened,
Till he reached the office door.
"I'se a letter, Mr. Postman,
Is there room for any more?

"'Cause dis letter's doin' to papa.
Papa lives with God, 'ou know;
Mamma sent me for a letter,
Does 'ou fink 'at I can go?"

But the clerk in wonder answered,
"Not to-day my little man."
"Den I'll find anozzer office,
'Cause I must go, if I tan."

Fain the clerk would have detained him;
But the pleading face was gone,
And the little feet were hastening,
By the busy crowd swept on.

Suddenly the crowd was parted,
People fled to left and right,
As a pair of maddened horses
At that moment dashed in sight.

No one saw the baby figure,
No one saw the golden hair,
Till a voice of frightened sweetness
Rang out on the open air.

I was too late! A moment only
Stood the beauteous vision there;
Then the little face lay lifeless,
Covered o'er with golden hair.

Reverent they raised my darling,
Brushed away the curls of gold,
Saw the stamp upon the forehead,
Growing now so icy cold.

Not a mark the face disfigured,
Showing where a hoof had trod;
But the little life was ended—
"Papa's letter" was with God.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

SHADOWED.

Soon after Maximilian had established himself in Mexico I landed in New York direct from Paris. I had been in France nine years, but was American born and American in all things. I may have had a "Frenchy" look. Indeed I may have looked like a French agent or diplomat. At least, Uncle Sam seemed to think so. He got it into his head that I had arrived in New York to "sound" the North in regard to French occupation of Mexico, and he determined to watch me.

I had no suspicion that such was the case, and had planned to enjoy myself in the big city for a couple of weeks. Two days after my arrival, as I sat in the office of the Astor House, reading a newspaper, I had the feeling that some one was looking at me. You have probably had the same feeling, and have raised your eyes to find some stranger looking you over. As I lowered my paper I discovered a spare, consumptive-looking man of 40 sizing me up. He dropped his eyes when I raised mine, and had scarcely taken in his points when I felt a hatred for him. It was more than aversion—it was positive hatred. He seemed snakish to me, and rather than endure his presence I arose and passed out on the street.

My first call was at the general delivery window of the postoffice. When I had given my name three letters were passed out to me. I stood for a moment looking at the chirography and postmarks, and as I turned away I bumped against the fellow I had left in the office. He had been looking over my shoulder.

"Ah, beg pardon!" he said in a thin, piping voice, as he moved aside for me. If I had hated him for his looks I should certainly have hated him for his voice. It did not strike me as queer that he should have followed me, but I left the building saying to myself that I would like to do him a bad turn.

I returned to the office and read my letters, and then took a seat in the reading room to answer them. They were letters from relatives, and there was no call for extraordinary precautions in answering them. As each epistle was finished I enclosed it, directed the envelope in a plain, bold hand, and laid it aside. When the three were finished and ready to be stamped I felt the presence of that snake again. I turned to look behind me he moved away with cat-like step and disappeared in the office.

"Beg pardon, sir," observed a gentleman reading a newspaper at my right "but that fellow acted in a queer manner."

"How?"

"I believe he took down the address of your letters. He came in so noiselessly that I never heard him."

"Do you know him?"

"No."

I was thoroughly vexed, and at once proceeded to the office to call the fellow to account. He had disappeared. I posted my letters and then walked up Broadway, the sights and scenes of which soon drove the man from my thoughts. At the corner of Canal street a veritable Frenchman accosted me in his native language and inquired for the office of French Consul. My prompt reply, in good French, delighted him, and he drew me aside for a short chat. We asked and answered various questions, and were on the point of seperating when my newly found friend lowered his voice and said:

"The deuce! Do they have spies in this country?"

I wheeled about, and the snake, as I shall hereafter call him, was only two feet away. In my sudden anger I raised my hand to strike, but a smile crossed his evil face, he bowed obsequiously, and holding up an unlighted cigar in his fingers he said:

"I was about to ask the gentleman for a light."

"You can't have it!" I savagely answered.

"Ah—well—pardon my boldness," he said as he turned away to enter the passing throng.

"That's a bad man," said the Frenchman as we looked after him. "He kept edging up to catch our conversation, and I think he has been set to watch you."

I began to think so, too, and I was boiling with anger. I wanted to be sure of it, however, before letting myself loose and I determined to keep an eye open.

After standing on the corner a few moments I hailed a cab and was driven to Central Park. As I alighted at Fifty-ninth street I took a careful look about me, but there was no signs of a following carriage. Then, on foot, I proceeded to the Zoological Gardens and entertained myself there for an hour or more. Just as I was about ready to go down town I felt that presence again. I had learned caution. Without making any abrupt movement I began a careful survey of the people around me, and by and by I located my man. He was ten feet away, placidly puffing at a cigar. He had pulled a red wig over his closely-cropped black hair and had changed hats, but I spotted him in an instant. I wanted to walk right up and take him by the throat, but prudence warned me that such action would lead to my arrest and perhaps cause me a great deal of trouble.

As I started down town I made up my mind to do that fellow an evil turn if he presisted in trailing me. I speculated for an hour on his motives in shadowing me, but could arrive at no satisfactory conclusion. I thought of going to the police about it, but was restrained by a natural feeling of obstinacy. I decided to give the fellow rope and see how the affair would end.

That evening, in the office of the Astor House again, I spotted him. He had removed his wig and now wore green goggles and walked with a limp. He took my trail again in the morning and shadowed me all day, changing his disguise three times. At night I determined to shake him. I quietly settled my bill and gave orders about my baggage, and about 10 o'clock at night the "spotter" having temporarily disappeared, I slipped out of the hotel, and hurried to the ferry and crossed to Jersey City and took rooms at a hotel there.

I came down to breakfast next morning feeling highly pleased over my little stratagem, but the first man I saw as I entered the office was my shadow. He had on a white hat, a loud suit, and was passing off as a sport, but I was "on to him" in a minute. During the day I crossed to New York, went over to Brooklyn, and tramped around for miles, but he kept my trail and was in the hotel office when I went to bed.

That night I was aroused from sleep to receive a telegram. It was from a relative in Chicago, requesting me to come on at once. I did not start next morning, but waited for the evening train. I took the hotel clerk into my confidence, and arranged to have my trunks sent to the depot and checked, and to secure a sleeping car to Buffalo. I again started out on a tramp, and again the snake followed me. I dodged here and there in crowds—changed from one street car line to another, crossed the ferries—doubled on my trail, but he clung to me like a veritable shadow.

As train time approached I lounged into the depot, as if to see who was going out. I bought and read a paper, and tried to appear cool and careless, and three minutes before the train left I made a break for it and entered a sleeper. As the train pulled out of the depot I felt certain I had escaped the snake, but an hour later, as I started for the smoker, I encountered him on the platform of the very car I had taken a berth in. The rascal could not get a berth in that car, but he had secured one in another.

I was boiling with indignation at the discovery. He was smoking, and as I came out he extended his cigar and said:

"Have a light, sir?"

My plan was taken in an instant. As I reached for his cigar I gave him a push and he went head over heels off the platform, uttering a wild yell as he vainly clutched at the railing. At Buffalo I stopped my trunks and changed my route to Cincinnati, and was bothered by no more spies. I saw by the papers that the man had a terrible fall, a leg being broken and that he was raving for six weeks. The idea was that he had fallen off the train. What sort of a story he told when he got his senses I know not, but the government either discovered that I was harmless, or failed to find my trail again.—Detroit Free Press.

QUEER PEOPLE.

The barber's shop was next door to the baker's shop, and the baker had just gotten a ton of coal. The coal had been dumped on the sidewalk, and, after the fashion of coal men, much nearer to the barber's door than to the baker, to whom it belonged. The barber had just gotten the lather on a customer, when one of the genius tramp came in.

"Put in yer coal, mister?"

"No," said the barber, pleasantly; "no, my friend, that's not my coal, you know."

The tramp had hardly disappeared round the corner, when another opened the door.

"Put yer coal in for ye, mister?"

"No," said the barber a little sharply; "the coal's not mine, I say."

They kept coming, and seven of them appeared in twenty minutes, and to the eighth man the barber is alleged to have said: "Git! The blamed coal ain't mine."

"Now, see here," said the shaver, "there ain't no use gittin' mad over it. Just put up a sign sayin', 'This coal ain't mine.' That's all ye need."

"Say, you've got a great head," said the barber, and in a few moments he had the sign stuck on the top of the heap of coal. "Reckon that'll fix it," he muttered.

The door opened and a tall man with a shovel looked in.

"Say, mister, did you put that sign up, or did the other feller?"

Then the barber closed his shop and went out and got drunk—with malice aforethought.

He had only one remark to make when Justice Meech fined him $5. "Mister Judge," he said, "can't I make that baker pay my fine."—Chicago Tribune.

By and by the public will come to understand that the assault made upon Secretary Lamar and Attorney General Garland over the Pan Electric corporation is simply a repetition of the monopoly methods which are common in Washington when monopolies are threatened with the law. There is not the shade of complicity with any proceeding, or probable proceeding, against the Bell Telephone interest on the part of Lamar or Garland in the interest of the Pan Electric corporation. It was organized several years ago when the interests of Lamar and Garland were acquired, and their connection with it had just as much relation to their present official action, in the Senate or elsewhere, as it had with the man in the moon.—*Phila. THE PORTRAIT.

In a small but handsomely-furnished sitting-room in a hotel in New York, a young lady was sitting in an easy-chair before a blazing fire one dreary November afternoon.

At last the door opened and a tall, aristocratic looking young man entered the room.

"Harry, what a long time you have been!" she cried, springing up from her seat. "What news have you brought? What does your father say about our—our marriage?" hesitating at the last word.

"Read for yourself, Helen," replied her husband, handing her an open letter, and, leaning opposite to her against the mantelpiece, he watched her as she read:

"In marrying as you have done you have acted in direct opposition to my wishes. From this day you are no longer my son, and I wash my hands of you forever."

"Harry, why did you not tell me of this before?" exclaimed Helen, as she read the cold, cruel words, looking up through her tears into her husband's face.

"My darling, what was there to tell? How should I know my father would act in this hard-hearted manner? But, my love," he continued more seriously, "there is an end of our shopping excursion into Broadway. You will have to do without diamonds, now that your husband is a penniless outcast instead of the heir to twenty thousand a year."

"Hush, Harry; don't talk like that," she said, worried at his bitter tone. "You know that it was not of diamonds or dresses that I was thinking. But what are you going to do?" laying her hand on his arm and looking up sadly into his pale sad face. "You cannot work for a living."

"And why not work for a living?" he exclaimed in a determined voice. "Because I happen to be a millionaire's son, brought up without any knowledge of business? But I will work for my living and show my wife that I am not unworthy of the confidence she placed in me," and he stooped and kissed her softly.

It was while pursuing his studies in oil-painting that Harry Marston wooed and won Helen Tracy, a governess in an English family, and the orphan daughter of an officer in the army.

Their new home, consisting of three rooms in a house on a dirty east side street, was very different from the grand old mansion where he had hoped to take his bride, but he set to work cheerfully at his favorite art and tried hard to earn a living by painting portraits. This he found very soon was by no means an easy matter.

At last, one dreary afternoon when Harry was sitting in the dreary little room he called his studio, trying to devise some scheme to replenish his slender purse, the servant ushered in a white haired old man.

Placing a chair by the fire for his visitor, Harry inquired his business.

"You are a portrait-painter, I believe, sir?" said the old gentleman, looking at him through his gold-rimmed spectacles.

"That is my profession, sir," said Harry, delighted at the thought of having found a commission at last.

"Well, sir, I want you to paint the portrait of my daughter."

"With pleasure, sir," said Harry, eagerly. "When can the lady give me the first sitting?"

"Alas, sir, she is dead—dead to me these twenty years and I killed her. I broke her heart with my selfishness and cruelty," exclaimed the old man in a trembling, excited voice.

A strange chill come over Harry as the idea that his visitor might be an escaped lunatic crossed his mind.

Mastering his emotion at last, the stranger said:

"Pardon me, young sir. This is of no interest to you. My daughter is dead, and I want you to paint her portrait from my description, as I perfectly well remember her twenty years ago."

"I will do my best, sir, but it is by no means an easy task, and you must be prepared for many disappointments," said Harry, when having given a minute description of his long lost daughter, the old man rose to depart.

For weeks Harry worked incessantly on the portrait of the dead girl, making sketch after sketch, each of which was rejected by the remorse-stricken father.

At last, one evening, wearied with a day of fruitless exertion, he was sitting over the fire watching his wife, who was busy over some dainty needlework, when an idea suddenly flashed upon him.

"Tall, fair, with golden hair and dark blue eyes! Why, Helen, it is the very picture of yourself!" he cried, starting to his feet and taking his wife's sweet face between his two hands. Without losing a moment he sat down and commenced to sketch Helen's face, and when his patron called the next morning he was so busily engaged in putting the finishing touches to the portrait that he did not hear him enter the room.

After gazing for some moments in silence only broken by his suppressed sobs, the old man turned to Harry and asked him in an eager voice, where he had obtained the original of the picture.

"It is the portrait of my wife," said he.

"Your wife, sir. Who was she?"

Harry was beginning to tell him the story of how he met Helen, when the door opened and his wife entered the room.

Perceiving that her husband was engaged, she was about to retire, when the old man stopped her respectfully.

"Pardon me, madam," he said, "but would you tell me your mother's maiden name?"

"Helen Treherne," said Harry's wife, wonderingly.

"I knew it—I knew it!" exclaimed the old man in an excited voice. "At last I have found the child of my long-lost daughter."

In a few words he explained how he had cast off his daughter twenty years ago for having married a poor officer, and refused even to open her letters, in which she begged forgiveness.

"But, thank heaven!" he said, when he had finished his sad story, "I can in some way atone for my harshness to my Helen by taking her Helen to my heart and making her my daughter."

It is needless to add that when the millionaire heard that his son had married the heiress of one of the finest estates in the country he at once wrote a letter of reconciliation to Harry.

So, after all, Helen became the mistress of Marston Hall, in the picture gallery of which there is no painting so highly valued as the one in question.

CLEVELAND'S SUPERIOR TO ROYAL.

Rutgers College (the New Jersey State Scientific College) New Brunswick, N. J., July 7, 1885.

Analyses and careful examinations of Cleveland's Superior and Royal Baking Powders enable us to bear testimony to the superiority of Cleveland's. It yields more carbonic acid gas than the Royal, and contains no ammonia salts.

Cleveland's Baking Powder is made of pure substances and is absolutely free from any kind of adulteration. We endorse it most cordially as an honest and efficient article, and one that will give entirely satisfactory results.

CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND & PACIFIC RAILWAY

By reason of its central position and close relation to all principal lines East and West, at initial and terminal points, constitutes the most important mid-continental link in that system of through transportation which invites and facilitates travel and traffic between cities of the Atlantic and Pacific Coasts. It is also the favorite and best route to and from points East, Northeast and Southeast, and corresponding points West, Northwest and Southwest.

The Rock Island system includes in its main line and branches, Chicago, Joliet, Ottawa, La Salle, Peoria, Geneseo, Moline and Rock Island, in Illinois; Davenport, Muscatine, Washington, Fairfield, Ottumwa, Oskaloosa, West Liberty, Iowa City, Des Moines, Indianola, Winterset, Atlantic, Knoxville, Audubon, Harlan, Guthrie Centre and Council Bluffs, in Iowa; Gallatin, Trenton, Cameron and Kansas City, in Missouri; Leavenworth and Atchison, in Kansas; Albert Lea, Minneapolis and St. Paul, in Minnesota; Watertown in Dakota, and hundreds of intermediate cities, towns, villages and stations.

THE GREAT ROCK ISLAND ROUTE

Guarantees its patrons that sense of personal security afforded by a solid, thoroughly ballasted road-bed; smooth tracks of continuous steel rail; substantially built culverts and bridges; rolling stock as near perfection as human skill can make it; the safety appliances of patent buffers, platforms and air-brakes; and that exacting discipline which governs the practical operation of all its trains. Other specialties of this route are Transfers at all connecting points in Union Depots, and the unsurpassed comforts and luxuries of its Passenger Equipment.

The Fast Express Trains between Chicago and the Missouri River are composed of well ventilated, finely upholstered Day Coaches, Magnificent Pullman Palace Sleepers of the latest design, and sumptuous Dining Cars, in which elaborately cooked meals are leisurely eaten. Between Chicago and Kansas City and Atchison, are also run the Celebrated Reclining Chair Cars.

THE FAMOUS ALBERT LEA ROUTE

Is the direct and favorite line between Chicago and Minneapolis and St. Paul, where connections are made in Union Depots for all points in the Territories and British Provinces. Over this route, Fast Express Trains are run to the watering places, summer resorts, picturesque localities, and hunting and fishing grounds of Iowa and Minnesota. It is also the most desirable route to the rich wheat fields and pastoral lands of interior Dakota.

Still another DIRECT LINE, via Seneca and Kankakee, has been opened between Cincinnati, Indianapolis and Lafayette, and Council Bluffs, Kansas City, Minneapolis and St. Paul and intermediate points.

Carney Bros.,
PRACTICAL
Plumbers, Tinners & Gas Fitters.
The "PERFECTION," All Porcelain.

WE TAKE pleasure in calling attention of our customers and all interested in sanitary matters to the all porcelain "Perfection," the only square Slop Hopper, with trap, made. For perfect cleanliness and simplicity of construction we invite comparison with any Closet ever manufactured, either home or foreign. It combines, with the utmost simplicity, all the points of a strictly first-class water-closet. The square top will make steel apparent to all users, in doing away with drip tray, the wash at all times thoroughly scouring all parts, whereas in the drip tray it cannot help but become foul underneath. It has a seal in Trap of 1½ inches, and the soil pipe vent of 2 inches diameter, as will be seen in the above cut, will prevent all siphoning of Trap. The two local or seat vents of 1½ inches diameter are intended for right or left ventilation, the one not being used to be closed. The large handhole in front gives free access to all parts of trap.

Nos. 7 and 9 Somerset street.

HALL'S Vegetable Sicilian HAIR RENEWER.
The great popularity of this preparation, after its test of many years, should be an assurance, even to the most skeptical, that it is really meritorious. Those who have used HALL'S HAIR RENEWER know that it does all that is claimed.
It causes new growth of hair on bald heads—provided the hair follicles are not dead, which is seldom the case; restores natural color to gray or faded hair; preserves the scalp healthful and clear of dandruff; prevents the hair falling off or changing color; keeps it soft, pliant, lustrous, and causes it to grow long and thick.
HALL'S HAIR RENEWER produces its effects by the healthful influence of its vegetable ingredients, which invigorate and rejuvenate. It is not a dye, and is a delightful article for toilet use. Containing no alcohol, it does not evaporate quickly and dry up the natural oil, leaving the hair harsh and brittle, as do other preparations.
Buckingham's Dye
FOR THE WHISKERS
Colors them brown or black, as desired, and is the best dye, because it is harmless; produces a permanent natural color; and, being a single preparation, is more convenient of application than any other.
PREPARED BY
R. P. HALL & CO., Nashua, N. H.
Sold by all Dealers in Medicines.

Read what the people say concerning the ability of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil to cure asthma, catarrh, croup, colds, etc. Mrs. Dora Koch of Buffalo, says: "For croup it is decidedly efficacious." [Mrs. Jacob Mellinor of Marion, Ohio, says the same thing.] S. S. Graves, Akron, N. Y., writes: "Had asthma of the worst kind, took one dose of Thomas' Eclectric Oil and was relieved in a few minutes. Would walk five miles for this medicine and pay $1 a bottle for it." Druggist C. R. Hall, Grayville, Ill., says: "Cured an ulcerated throat for me in twenty-four hours." "Laid up in bed and coughed till the clothing was wet with perspiration. My wife insisted that I use Thomas' Eclectric Oil. The first teaspoonful relieved me." E. H. Perkins, Creek Centre, N. Y. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is also a Tip-Top external application for rheumatism, cuts, scalds, burns, bruises, etc. When visiting the druggist, ask him what he knows of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil; if he has been long in the drug trade, he is sure he will speak highly of it.
Worked Wonders.
"My daughter was very bad off on account of a cold and pain in her lungs. Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil cured her in twenty-four hours. One of the boys was cured of sore throat. This medicine has worked wonders in our family." Alvah Pinckney, Lake Mahopac, N. Y.

WIPED OUT.

I had been employed by the Great Improvement and Reclaim company of Mobile, to explore and map certain lands in Florida lying well down on the edge of the great Cypress Swamp. The company had purchased nearly 1,000,000 acres of wild land in the location I have mentioned, and it was necessary for some one to visit it and walk over most of the ground before it could be put into market in the manner contemplated. I had been on the ground three weeks, having two men with me, when the adventure happened which I am about to relate.

One morning the three of us left our camp beside one of the lakes on the upper St. John's for a tramp intending to return by evening. While I made notes and kept the typography the men noted the varieties of woods, nature of the soil, and other details of interest. On three different occasions we had encountered white men in the dense and lonely forest and knew from their looks and surroundings that they were renegades from civilization. Twice we had stumbled upon rude camps occupied by negroes and refugees.

We had traveled a distance of perhaps three miles when I was stung on the back of the right hand by an insect resembling a hornet, although much larger. In fifteen minutes the pain brought me to a halt, and my hand was swollen like a puff-ball. After a consultation, it was decided I should return to camp, and the men would push on by compass and cover a certain area, and come in toward night. Before I had covered the distance to camp I was near screaming out with the pain, and my arm was puffing up with the poison.

There was a remedy in the medicine chest, but it was a full hour before the pain was relieved. Then I began to feel sleepy, and I bunked down and was soon fast asleep. At about noon, after a nap of two hours, I was awaked by the sound of a human voice.

"Say, you!"

I opened my eyes to find a white renegade standing over me, holding one of my revolvers in his hand.

"Git up!"

I sat up. All our goods in camp had been packed up and taken away. The man who confronted me was the wickedest-looking man we had yet met in the swamp. His hair and whiskers were so long and unkempt that little of his face except his ugly black eyes and yellow teeth could be seen. His clothing was part cloth and part skins, and it was plain that he had avoided civilization for years.

"Git up and come," he growled.

"Who are you and what do you want?" I demanded, as I reached my feet.

"Walk!" he commanded, pointing to the west.

At that moment a third actor appeared. It was a woman—tall, gaunt, ferocious, and dressed in the same nondescript costume as the man. She came out of the jungle to the west, and as soon as near enough to make her words understood she said:

"If he won't move down him and tie his hands and feet. We can tote two sich as him."

She had the other revolver in her hand, and I noticed that both had hunting knives. I was unarmed, still weak from the effects of the poisonous sting, and entirely in their power. The woman struck into the jungle. I followed, and the man brought up the rear.

After a walk of about a quarter of a mile we reached the bank of the lake. Tied to a tree by a rawhide rope was a floting cabin. The foundation was a rough-made scow, and the upper works, as they may be termed, consisted of a long, narrow and stoutly-made hut of logs. There was a chimney of mud and sticks, from which smoke issued, and two persons were on the bank to receive us. One was a boy of twelve or thirteen, and the other a girl two or three years older. They looked more like wild animals than human beings, and talked in a language so strange that I could not understand a word.

"Go ahead," said the man, as I halted on the bank; and I followed the woman aboard of the scow and into the cabin. It was a house in which there was but one room, with the hides of cattle thrown over the wild Southern moss for beds. There was no stove, but a sort of fireplace made of stones, with two or three iron kettles on the hearth as kitchen furniture.

All our camp equipage had been removed to the cabin, and my Winchester rifle stood in the corner. As this was then a new arm I did not believe they knew how to use it, but my revolvers were Colt's old pattern and loaded with powder and used percussion caps.

"Sot thar," said the woman, as she pointed to a corner.

I went over and sat down on the bed. It was not the corner in which my rifle stood, but the weapon was not more than ten feet away. The woman then said something to the children in her own mongrel dialect, and both of them sat down facing me and only three or four feet away. Then man and wife cast off the rope, seized long poles, and presently the boat slowly moved down the lake to the north. The lake appeared to be about three miles wide by five long, and was shut in by the dense forest.

The views I had through the open door and the chinks between the logs showed me the craft was kept near the shore. While the people seemed in no great hurry to get down the lake, they kept the scow moving at a fair pace until we were about three miles from the place where we had embarked. A landing was then made in the mouth of a creek, and the scow was entirely hidden from sight of any one on the lake. Hunters and tourists, and even small pleasure steamers came up from the main river as far as this lake.

It was mid-afternoon when the boat was made fast. The pain and swelling had now entirely departed from my hand and arm, and the helpless feeling which had come over me when first captured had given away to a determination to help myself out of the scrape. If I could get hold of my rifle I would be a match for the whole four of them. I counted them as four, because the boy and girl had hunting knives, and would surely take part in any scrimmage brought on. Their looks and actions proved this. They maintained their places directly in front of me, and their eyes never left me for a second. They held their knives as if they expected an attempt to escape, and meant to thrust and cut if I tried it.

While the boat was moving there was no show for me. A score of alligators, some of monstrous size, followed in procession, and I had but to look out upon the lake to realize that it was alive with these fierce reptiles. One who leaped or fell overboard would be seized as soon as he struck the water.

Not a word was addressed to me until the boat had been tied up. Then the man came in, took a single-barreled rifle from under the other bed, and, after a few hurried words with the woman outside, jumped ashore, and disappeared. When he had gone the woman entered, lighted a pipe, and, sending the boy out side to watch, she sat down in his place with a cocked revolver in her lap. She had a face which betrayed the mind of a beast.

"Well, what are you going to do with me?" I asked after a while.

"Feed you to the alligators," she replied.

"Where has your husband gone?"

"To kill the other two men."

"What do you want to murder us for? We have in no way injured you."

"We was whipped and drug out of the settlements, and we want revenge," she growled.

"But we had nothing to do with it," I protested, in a firm tone.

"Can't help that. You come poaching on our claim," she answered.

"But we'll go away."

"I guess you won't. We never let any one git away to tell on us!"

I said nothing further, but I by no means looked upon myself as a dead man. If worst came to worst I would give them a fight. I could not move then, with knife and bullet ready for me, and deemed it wiser to settle back and bide my time.

The man had been gone about half an hour when the faint report of a rifle came to us through the trees. The woman had been listening for it, and as it came she gave a start and called out:

"There goes one of 'em."

"Who?" I asked.

"One of your partners. Dan has dropped him for sure."

There was such a fiendish, bloodthirsty look on her face that I was appalled, and the same expression, to a certain degree, rested on the faces of the children. Like dogs, they licked their chops in anticipation of a bloody feast. In about half an hour the man appeared. He had a bundle of clothing in one hand and two rifles and a revolver in the other.

"Git one?" the woman asked, as he came aboard the ungainly craft.

"Yes."

"Didn't git the both?"

"No. The other got away. I'll git him to-morrer," he replied.

"Git much?"

"Lots."

He had in his hand the suit of clothes, rifle, and a revolver belonging to one of my men—George Sheen, of Mobile. There was blood stains on the clothing, and as he unrolled the bundle I saw a bullet hole through the vest. He had killed the man and then stripped him stark naked. Yes, he had boots, socks, hat, collar, everything. The other man was Robert Jackson, of Chicago, who had worked with me for years. He had not "got" him. Why? Jackson was well armed and a brave man. If he had been present at the shooting of Sheen, he would not have run away. Sheen had an old-fashioned rifle; Jackson had a Winchester. He would in turn have killed the outlaw. The two men must have been separated, and the outlaw must have ambushed Sheen.

Leaving the children to watch me, the man and woman now cast the scow loose and poled her out about three hundred feet from shore. The sun was getting well down, and our side of the lake was in a deep shadow. When the scow had been anchored by a stone, the pair inspected the personal property and counted the money taken from the victim. The outlaw then washed the blood from his hands.

When they entered the cabin, or house, the woman produced some cold meat and and hoecake and threw hunks to each one, including myself. It was only after the provisions had disappeared, I eating mine with the rest, that the man addressed me.

"See yere, stranger," he said, "what brought ye up yere?"

"Looking over lands," I replied.

"Um! Who be you?"

I told him.

"Didn't count on seein' Black Dan, I reckon?" he sneered.

"No."

"Which is unfortunit for you. I've killed every land hunter who ever sot fut on my claim, and I'll keep a killin' sure."

"We didn't come here to disturb or annoy you," I said.

"It's the same thing. I'm down on the hull human race for the way I've bin used, and I'll kill whenever I kin git the chance. I've dropped one o' you're fellers. To-morrer I'll drop the other, and then take keer of you. Git over thar and lay down."

"Over thar" was the far corner, and entirely out of reach of my Winchester. When I bunked down in my corner the gun was moved entirely, and the family lay down in such a way as to hem me in. For the first three or four hours they were like cats, starting up at the slightest move, but toward midnight I was satisfied that all were asleep. I could not reach the firearms without stepping over the bodies, and they knew that any effort on my part to loosen myself would arouse them.

About midnight, after a long and cautious effort, I sat up. It was a starlight night, and, as there was no door to the cabin, I could see out. I was fully determined to make an effort to escape, but when I came to canvass the chances, I had to abandon the idea. The alligators were constantly about us, often rearing up to paw at the logs, and unless I could get hold of the firearms and begin the fight, I should be wiped out in any effort I made. I think I slept for an hour or two, and what aroused me I cannot tell. I was still sitting, and, as I looked out upon the night I saw a human figure draw itself up on the bows of the boat. I at first supposed it was one of the family, but a moment's observation convinced me to the contrary. This figure moved cautiously, as if desiring its presence unknown, and was a long time in reaching the door. It then leaned against the logs and made a long survey of the interior, and finally sunk out of sight. My heart was beating like a trip-hammer, and I could not fathom the mystery. Was it an Indian or another outlaw? Moving so cautiously, what object had he in view? Had I once thought of Jackson, I should not have dared to hope he had come to my rescue through that water; and, too, I could not have believed he knew of my whereabouts.

From the time I first caught sight of the figure to daylight was probably an hour and a half, but it seemed to me as if I lived five years. I had no hopes that the man was a friend, and yet I could not look for a new enemy. Perhaps, after all, it was only one of the refugee negroes, of whom scores were hiding in the swamps, who had made his way to the scow in hopes to lay hands on provisions or clothing. I kept my eyes on the spot where I had last seen him, and, as he did not reappear, began to feel that he had slipped back into the water and returned to the shore.

Did you ever watch the coming of daylight when you felt that with it might come some life or death transaction? The first signs came from the birds. Then, afar up the lake, came the cries of water fowl. A fox or some other animal stood on the shore near where we had tied up the night before and barked in an angry voice. The stars paled and drifted out of sight, and the interior of the cabin began to light up until I could distinguish the forms of the sleepers.

Where was the strange man—friend or enemy? As if in response to my query he suddenly rose up, stepped noiselessly inside the door, and next instant a revolver began to crack and a voice shouted at me:

"Keep down, Colonel, hug the floor!"

I rolled over on my face and I heard yells, screams and groans. It was all over in thirty seconds; and some one called:

"All right, Colonel; I've wiped the varmints out!"

I sprang up to find Jackson standing in the centre of the cabin, and on the floor lay outlaw, wife and children, all dead. It was as I had argued the day previous. The two men had separated in the woods—Sheen to return directly to camp and Jackson to hunt for game for supper. The outlaw had ambushed Sheen and killed him, and Jackson had heard the report of the gun and become suspicious. He hurried to camp to find me gone and everything taken, and had traced us to the lake. He found indications to prove that a boat had been used, and had followed the shore of the lake down until he found the scow at anchor.

Not one man in a thousand would have shown his nerve. He knew of the alligators, could see a dozen of them moving about, and yet he disrobed, tied his weapons across his head, and swam straight for the scow and reached it unmolested. He saw that the only way was to wipe out all the gang, and as soon as daylight would guide him he began his work.

When we had buried our comrade we made a close search of the floating cabin, and we found indisputable proof of the murder of five or six persons. In an old wooden bucket were two gold and three silver watches, several pocket knives, half a dozen rings, and $825 in gold, silver and greenbacks. As none of these articles could be traced back to their owners, and as vengeance had overtaken the murderers, we felt no hesitation in taking possession of everything for the benefit of Sheen's widow.

The last act was to set fire to the scow and push it out into the lake. It was as merciful to consign the bodies to the flames as to see the alligators fight over them. Such human wolves did not deserve burial.

FREEHOLDER'S PROCEEDINGS.

OFFICIAL.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Feb. 4, 1886.

Regular monthly meeting of the board held on Thursday, Feb. 4th, 1886, at 2 p. m.

Present—Director Martine and Freeholders Astfalk, Belmer, Chapman, Doty, Debbie, Dardis, Etheridge, Hubbard, Howard, Haliday, Isenmann, Pierson, Roll and Vanderbeek—15.

Absent—Freeholders Bauer and Oliver.

The minutes of the last meeting were read (omitting list of bills ordered paid), and, on motion, approved as read.

COMMUNICATIONS.

A communication from Arthur H. Profitt of Springfield, notifying the board that the town committee of Springfield township intend to remove the county bridge on the turnpike road in said township, was read.

Freeholder Roll moved the communication be received and the matter be referred to a committee of three, which was carried.

The director appointed as such committee Freeholders Roll, Etheridge and Dardis.

The following opinion from the county attorney in reference to election bill referred to him at the last meeting, was read:

To the Honorable the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

GENTLEMEN—For their services rendered on the last general election day the Rahway election officers presented their bills to this board, claiming compensation for "3 days' services at $3 per day;" the auditing committee refused to allow but for 2 days, and the bills were so audited and paid. Mr. E. B. Pennoyer, one of the election officers, now presents a bill for the one day disallowed by the committee, and the matter has been referred to me for my opinion as to the legality of the claim.

By the act of March 12, 1880, P L 1880, p. 300, these officers are allowed $3 per day for their services, and section 8 provides "that eight hours shall constitute, with the fractional parts thereof, a day's work for the members of election boards." Section 31, Revision "Election," provides that "the elections shall be opened and the same shall be kept open during the whole of the day of election, between the hours of seven o'clock in the morning and seven o'clock in the evening."

Therefore, the first day's work of these officers would begin at 7 a. m. and end at 3 p. m.; the second day begin at 3 p. m. and end at 11 p. m. The polls closing at 7 p. m., would therefore give them four hours' time to canvass the vote cast before the second day closed.

Treating this bill first from a purely business standpoint, I have taken the pains to ascertain whether it was possible for the officers to do this work within the four hours remaining to them before the third day was reached, believing, as I do, that when a man charges the county for two days he must consume the whole 16 hours (which the law says shall be considered two days) before he charges for third.

In the First district of the Third ward of Rahway (where Mr. Pennoyer was an officer) there were 203 ballots cast, each containing but two names. Allowing 5 ballots to a minute (which is an exceedingly low estimate), but three-quarters of an hour would have been consumed in that work, leaving them still three hours and a quarter to foot up their tally list, etc. I must therefore conclude that this work could have been done easily within the two days. Further, I believe it should have been so done. It has been admitted in the discussion that arose over these bills that this third day is charged and claimed because these officers met the day after election to sign the statement of the result of the said election as required by section 47, Rev. "Elections." My opinion is that this statement can only legally be prepared by the board of election officers immediately after they canvass the ballots and without any adjournment.

Sec. 42, Rev. "Elections," provides as follows: "As soon as the hour of seven o'clock in the evening of the day of election shall arrive, the board shall proceed, in an open and public manner, to estimate and canvass the votes received, and shall complete the same without any unnecessary delay and without adjournment, and, on completing the same, shall audibly and publicly announce the result thereof," etc.

Sec. 44 provides the mode of canvassing the votes; sections 45 and 46 designates the ballots to be either rejected or declared null and void; secs. 47, 48, 49, 50 and 51 provide for the making of the statement of the result of the election, and sec. 52 (as amended by P. L. 1880, p. 108) provides "that as soon as the election shall be finished, all ballots which have been cast, * * * the poll list, the tally papers, the oaths or affirmations of the judges, inspectors and clerks shall all be carefully collected and deposited in the ballot-box, and such ballot-box, after being locked and bound with tape and sealed, shall remain in the township, under the care and custody of the township clerk, or if in a ward of a city, in the custody of the clerk of the city (but the said clerk shall not have the keys of the ballot-box in his possession), until required for the next ensuing election," etc., etc. The section further provides that after being so locked, bound and sealed the box shall not be opened, except by order from a legal tribunal.

It is quite evident, after reading the above sections, that the statement of the result of election must of necessity be made up before the ballots, tally sheet, etc., are deposited in the box; and as I have before shown, the box must be locked before any adjournment is had. I therefore consider that an adjournment until the next day, and then making up the statements, would be illegal, because the officers could not proceed to make up the statement without opening the box. The proper course, in my opinion, would be for the officers to commence (as the law requires) at 7 p. m. to count, and continue their work until the statement is signed and the box locked. If this work carried them beyond 11 p. m. they would then be entitled to three days' pay.

The design of the law is that from the moment when the box is exhibited empty at 7 a. m. until it is locked, bound and sealed after the canvass in the evening, it shall constantly be open to public view; and that after it is so closed it shall not be opened even by the election officers, unless by authority from the courts.

It is beneficial to the election officers as well as the public; the counting, canvassing and making up of the statement being made publicly without any adjournment prevents charges being made by the public that the officers have privately changed the result.

My opinion is that for the following reasons, viz:

1st. Because the work charged for in this bill could and should have been done within the time for which the officers have already received their pay, and

2d. Because the work charged for was illegally performed the bill ought not to be paid.

Very respectfully,
FREDERICK C. MARSH,
County Attorney.

On motion of Freeholder Hubbard, received and ordered spread upon the minutes.

RESOLUTIONS.

REPRIEVED, BUT AN IDIOT.

A Southern Boy Caught in the Act of Deserting and Condemned to be Shot—Before the Muskets.

One night, when I was sergeant of a picked post well advanced toward the Union lines, instructions were received to keep a sharp watch for deserters. Not more than an hour later we made a capture. A boy, about eighteen years old, a private in a Georgia regiment, had left camp with the intention of visiting his home, which was then inside the Union lines. He was not over bright, and when brought in by a picket he seemed to look upon the matter as a joke. It was only when he was escorted to camp and put under guard, charged with trying to desert to the enemy, that he seemed to realize the gravity of his situation.

A court martial made short work of his case. The only defence he set up was that he was homesick and wanted to see his mother, and that he surely meant to return that same week. There might have been something in this appeal had he not admitted that he knew his home to be within the Union lines and that there was a strong probability of his being captured by the federals.

From the hour he was sentenced to be shot he was placed under my charge. I think it was about a week from the finding of the court martial to the day of the execution. For the first two or three days the boy was like one struck dumb, and he answered no questions. When this state of mind wore off he spent most of his time in weeping, praying and writing letters. It was only on the night before the execution that he became talkative. As I carried in his supper he asked:

"Sergeant, did you ever see a deserter shot?"

"Yes."

"How is it done?"

"By a file of men. Six of my squad have been detailed in your case."

"Will they blindfold me?"

"Yes."

"Will I stand up?"

"No, you will be seated on your coffin."

He spoke with more curiosity than concern, and I was glad to see it. So long as he had to die it was better to show a brave front. I sought to encourage him in this, but he replied:

"Oh, you needn't be afraid of my breaking down. All I ask of you is to make quick work of it."

Next morning when he marched out the air was raw and the sky was gloomy as a pall. When I brought him out he was the cooler of the two. I was nervous and trembling, while he was absolutely cool and self-possessed.

"Is it time?" he asked as I went in.

"Yes."

"Well, I'm ready."

"How do you feel?"

"I'm all right."

When we reached the grounds which had been selected I saw that about six thousand men had been marched up to witness the execution. The boy looked about him with considerable curiosity, but showed no signs of weakness. When we reached the open grave and the coffin resting in front of it he caught a quick breath, and something like terror could be read in his eyes.

I stood there with him while the firing party retreated a few paces and came to a "front." Then an officer came forward and read the charge and the findings. All this time I had hold of the boy's hand, we standing shoulder to shoulder. There was no trembling, but his flesh was so hot that it seemed to blister mine.

When the officer had finished reading he stepped away leaving us alone.

"I must blindfold you," I said as I produced a handkerchief.

"Yes."

"You are going to die like a brave man."

"I told you I would."

I placed the handkerchief over his eyes and tied the ends at the back of his head, and then, taking his arm, I whispered:

"You must sit down."

"Yes."

"I am going now."

"Goodby to you, Sergeant. Let it be over soon!"

When I had reached the squad there was nothing to wait for, and the orders were issued:

"Ready!"

"Aim!"

The command "Fire!" was just trembling on my lips when an officer waving a white handkerchief appeared behind the prisoner. I ascertained, at a later date that none of the muskets were loaded, but this fact was not ever known to the firing squad.

The prisoner had been reprieved. I advanced and broke the glad news to him, and then removed the bandage from his eyes and assisted him to rise.

Great heavens, but what a change! He had a smile on his face—the grin of an idiot! The light of intelligence had gone out of his eyes, and his first movement was to spring up, flop his arms, and crow like a rooster! From that moment until he was finally discharged and sent home no man heard an intelligent word from his lips nor saw anything like intelligence in his face. He was not crazy, but idiotic. That one minute of awful suspense had drowned out the light of reason and so changed his every look that his own mother could not have identified him.

INVENTION FOR LAZY MEN.

A correspondent of the Iron Era states the following, which ought to be of interest to people too lazy to fish: "Wm. Courseu has taken a great interest in fishing on the ice and of late he has been studying up contrivances whereby he may find it an easy job to ascertain when a fish bites, without having his eyes centered constantly on the lines. As a result of his endeavors, his skill and ingenuity has rewarded him success in inventing a fishing apparatus which he intends to have patented and placed in the market for sale. It consists of a staff which is inserted perpendicularly in the ice beat the hole. In the top of it there is a hollow place extending about a foot in depth in which is a wire and elastic that serve for a spring. At the bottom where the wire is there is a zig-zag shaped wire in the form of a loop that makes a connection. On the top of the wire there is a flag and as it is shoved downward it removes the flag from sight and is held there by a wire pin inserted through the outside loop of the zig zag shaped wire into the staff on a slant. The line is attached to the pin with an extra allowance attached to the bottom of the stake. When there is a bite the fish draws the pin out and in an instant the flag is raised as a signal for to pull in the fish. It works to perfection and is said to be an improvement on other fishing apparatuses."

MEMORIA.

We, as Americans, stand to-day in the solemn presence of death. Several of our most illustrious citizens, men of well earned national repute, long and prominently identified with the country's civil and military service, have recently been summoned to "that bourne from whence no traveler ere yet returned." Grant, Hendricks, McClellan, Hancock and Seymour, have in rapid succession passed the silent warder of the tomb and forever vanished from mortal sight, though not from grateful memory. We would, at this time, briefly eulogize the last named worthy.

Horatio Seymour was a great and useful man in the fullest meaning of the term. Great in religious devotion, great in intellectual acquirements, great in integrity of purpose, great in simplicity of living, great in the discharge of public duties, and great in the purity of private citizenship.

A life long member of the Episcopal Church and an active worker therein, he lived and died a Christian gentleman, loyal to his God, and loyal to all the charitable instincts of true Christianity.

He was a partisan, but not a political bigot. Ever avoiding offensive personalities, he rigidly maintained what he deemed to be right and proper, at the same time yielding to all others the same liberty of thought and action. If he erred, it was of judgment and not by design. With him politics was the science of government, the only truthful meaning of the word.

Personal ambition was entirely foreign to Horatio Seymour. In his younger days he had been four times a member of the House of Assembly and once Mayor of the City of Utica, subsequently he was twice chosen Governor of the State. He was not an office seeker, never sat in Congress, although a United States Senatorship was offered for his acceptance. Against his personal wish in 1868 he became a candidate for the Presidency. He ever preserved a lively interest in public affairs and was a recognized Democratic party leader, but never throughout his long life did the least odor of political corruption attach to his garments. No bribe ever soiled his hands, no intrigue ever found lodgment in his brain.

Possessing one of the finest dairy farms in Central New York, he there enjoyed the pleasures and comforts of rural life. Dwelling in honored privacy, he dispensed generous hospitality, and kept himself thoroughly acquainted with the current events of the day.

To be a Christian in reality, a partisan without guile, a strictly honest official, an intelligent and public spirited citizen and one of spotless private character, is to weave the brightest chaplet of fame and to bequeath the richest of legacies to country and posterity.

Such was Horatio Seymour.

FAIR PLAY.

Filibustering over saloon applications for license by the Common Council last Monday evening, resulted in laying on the table two hotel and two saloon license applications, which is unfortunate for those directly and financially concerned. Mr. Staats, of the City Hotel, feels justly indignant that his license is not given him, after being favorably reported on. He has been to considerable expense in renovating and refurnishing the hotel, and the delay in giving him license seriously affects him financially. Mr. Bilson, too, is put to great inconvenience. It is intimated that there is a disposition to refuse the licenses of Day and Sullivan in the "Boulevard," by two of the license voting members, who are willing, however, to vote for the two hotel licenses. This the majority of the license members of the Council desire to prevent. All applicants should be treated alike when they come properly recommended to the Council. It would be unjust to refuse one and accept another.

It is not unlikely that Gen. Terry will succeed the late Gen. Hancock, in command of the Eastern Division.

John B. Gough, the renowned temperance lecturer, was attacked with apoplexy while delivering a lecture in Philadelphia on Monday evening last. His illness is serious.

The movement to honor the memory of the late Gen. Hancock by contributing to a fund of which J. Pierpont is Treasurer, is becoming more popular daily. The total sum thus far contributed has reached about $30,000.

The Right Rev. Peter Joseph Baltes, D. D., Roman Catholic Bishop of the Diocese of Alton, died at Alden, Ill., Monday morning, of congestion and inflammation of the liver. He was consecrated Bishop Jan. 23, 1870.

Mr. Morrison's new tariff bill was presented in the House of Representatives on Monday. It is claimed that the bill makes a reduction of $20,000,000 a year in custom duties, taking last year's importations as a basis. The heaviest cut is on sugar.

The funeral obsequies of General Hancock on Saturday last were plain and unostentatious. The funeral train which conveyed the remains from New York to the place of burial at Norristown, Pa., consisted of four coaches, neatly draped in mourning.

The State Legislature in joint session last week elected the following Commissioners of Deeds for Somerset county: Bedminster—John Van Nest; Bridgewater—B. F. Littel; Hillsborough—Henry Lane; Montgomery—Peter D. Staats; North Plainfield—F. H. Gardner.

Large amounts of money are being raised in this country for the benefit of the Parnell fund. John Bull is very indignant because of the assistance being rendered the Irish Parliamentary party by Americans, but then John Bull's indignation in this respect don't amount to much on this side of the water, and the dollars will continue to flow into the hands of those who are fighting for Ireland just as long as dollars are needed.

The death of Governor Seymour removes every Democratic candidate for the Presidency, except President Cleveland and Mr. Tilden, in the past twenty-five years. Breckenridge, Douglas, McClellan, Seymour, Greeley and Hancock, all have passed away, and of the candidates for Vice Presidents in the same period, Lane, Johnson, Blair and Brown, have died. Pendleton and English are the only Democratic Vice Presidential candidates living.

Assemblyman Vetterlein has introduced a bill into the Legislature giving Boroughs power to establish lamp districts, and providing for the assessment for lighting.

Assemblyman Corbin, of Union Co., has introduced a bill into the House repealing the act for the printing and publication of the laws, and limiting the cost thereof to $50,000 per year. We thought it was about time some economist began persecuting the printers. It occurs at every session.

The House Committee on Commerce on Friday last agreed to a favorable report upon Representative Belmont's bill authorizing the construction of a railroad bridge across Staten Island Sound at the Arthur Kill. It is understood that the New Jersey members of Congress will vote against the measure when the bill comes up.

Senators Fish, Nichols and Vanderbilt ably championed the people's rights in the Senate last Tuesday, in opposition to Senator Chase's bill which cripples the General Railroad law. In outspoken terms they denounced the efforts of powerful railroad corporations to prevent by legislation the Baltimore and Ohio Company from crossing the State, and thus give to a suffering community cheaper railroad rates and increased facilities. Let the new competitor of the railroad monopolies have a chance, say we.

THE LEGISLATURE.

A petition, signed by about 10,000 people, requesting the Legislature to pass no act or resolution changing the general railroad laws or tending to obstruct the plan of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company to reach deep water on New York Bay by crossing Staten Island was offered in the Senate Monday night, and several petitions to the same effect in the House were referred to the respective Committees on Railroads and Canals. There was considerable discussion in the Senate over the bill providing for the appointment of three Assistant Inspectors of Labor. Mr. Herring moved to amend the bill so as to have four inspectors instead of three. President Griggs took the floor and said he hoped the amendments would be voted down. Senator Youngblood could see no use of any more assistants at all, and hoped the bill itself would be voted down. Mr. Fish hoped that the bill would be amended so as to read five instead of three. Both amendments were lost and further consideration of the bill was laid over till Tuesday.

Corbin's High License bill came up in the House on Monday night. The author of the bill said he was willing that it should be amended, and the license fee be fixed at sums varying from $25 to $500. Mr. Hudspeth moved that the bill be amended, fixing the maximum fee at $50. It was finally laid over till next Monday night and 750 copies of the bill were ordered printed, on motion of its introducer, who strongly opposed Mr. Hudspeth's proposed amendment, saying that in many cities in the State the license fee at present is $300.

The attention of the Senate was taken up on Tuesday with arguments for and against Mr. Chase's railroad bill which advocates building a bridge over the Kill von Kull.

Mr. Nichols argued that the bill was simply a repealer of the General Railroad Law, which had proved a great blessing to the people of the State. He was opposed to bridging Staten Island Sound. He said there was plenty of shore front on Hudson river, in Hudson county which the company could without flying across our State and taking all its terminal facilities to a foreign State. He denied that Congress had any authority in this matter. New Jersey and New York have sole control of the water in question. The United States Courts had authority to order the bridge taken down if it interfered with commerce as being a nuisance; that is all the authority the United States has.

Senator Fish opposed the bill. He said he had many personal friends connected with the Pennsylvania and Erie Railroads, and that if he should vote as his personal feelings were concerned he would vote for their interests and this bill. But he was here to represent the people, and he could not vote for any virtual repealer of the General Railroad law. This bill was nothing more nor less than an effort to prevent the Baltimore and Ohio from competing with other trunk lines and from getting to New York. If the railroads want to go to Staten Island let them go. There is a magnificent harbor, and the large vessels can be loaded directly from the cars. This will save all the lighterage and cost of terminal charges which now the poor man who buys a pound of flour has to help pay. It will force all the other companies to dispense with those charges and thus benefit all people in reduction of those charges.

Senator Vanderbilt said that he agreed entirely with the Hudson Senator regarding the right of the State to build the bridge and that gentleman misrepresented him when he said he had stated otherwise. The reason why Congress was asked to consent was because the U. S. Courts could not say the bridge was an obstruction to navigation and ordered its destruction. The bill is also unconstitutional. This is special legislation, and comes under the head of prohibition. "And now," he said, "for thirteen years the people of this State have enjoyed the beneficient influences of that General Railroad law. The people of Trenton know what the benefits of the Bound Brook Railroad have been as a competing line to New York and Philadelphia with the Pennsylvania road. That was an outcome of the general law, and now, when another benefit is to come under that law they want to repeal it virtually. Who wants to repeal it? The railroad lines now in our States. The competition of another trunk line, as far as its benefits are concerned, cannot be estimated."

The following new bills were introduced:

No. 116. By Mr. Herring (for the President)—Gives township committees power to adjust past due taxes. (Finance.)

No. 117. By Mr. Fish—Supplement to General Election law. Provides that at all polling precincts a room is to be provided in which the ballot box will be, and the officers provided by law, with one person from each party to challenge illegal voters and the person voting, none others to be in the room. As fast as a voter votes he to pass out and another be admitted. (Elections.)

No. 118. By Mr. Carter (by request)—Prevents judges of any court in this State, or prosecutor acting as clerk of a court or attorney or counsellor in any court in the county in which they are serving as such judge or prosecutor. (Revision of Laws.)

Several new bills were introduced into the House. Bill 243, providing for the election of Aldermen at-Large, occupied the principal attention of the members during the session of Tuesday, the bill being reported adversely. After a prolonged debate the report was sustained by a vote of 28 to 29.

On Wednesday evening the Senate reached a vote on the Chase bill to prevent the bridging of the Staten Island Sound. The bill was passed by the following vote:

Affirmative—Brinkerhoff, Carter, Chase, Crammer, Gardner, Griggs, Herring, Livingston, McBride, Moon, Pancoast—11.

Negative—Fish, Miller, Nichols, Vanderbilt, Youngblood—5.

Absent—Bogert, Chattle, Haines, Large, Thompson—5.

Messrs. Chase and Herring explained their advocacy of the bill, which was to protect the navigation of a great commercial highway and New Jersey's shore front.

Mr. Gardner held that the bill did not affect the General Railroad bill, and would not prevent any railroad from coming into New Jersey.

President Griggs took the floor in advocacy of the bill. He declared in his speech that he was a monopolist as far as New Jersey's water front was concerned.

Mr. Youngblood spoke against the bill. He charged that it was a Pennsylvania Railroad bill, and that Senators and members are forced to vote as that corporation dictates. "We are absolutely under the control of this foreign corporation. It makes our Governors, United States Senators, Congressmen, Speaker of the House and Presidents of the Senate, and it puts its heel on those who dare oppose it. The Pennsylvania Railroad fears honest competition. No man can vote against this bill without incurring its displeasure, and that means political death." He appealed to the Almighty for help for the State. Justice was asleep within her borders.

In the House the Washington Street Bridge bill occupied the attention of the members. The bill coming up on second reading, Mr. Pelouhet, the introducer of the tunnel scheme, moved that the bridge bill be laid over to Monday. After a spicy discussion it was laid over to Thursday.

The local option bill was reported in the House, without amendment by the Judiciary Committee.

NEW MARKET NOTES.

The recent surprise tendered Rev. Mr. Burdick was a very pleasant one.

Mr. P. Kelly is going to remove to Westfield, leaving a good opening for a wagon-maker.

A social was held at the residence of Mr. A. L. Boice, near New Market, recently, which was well attended.

Mr. H. V. Dunham has sold his lot and barn to Mr. C. T. Rogers, who intends erecting a building to comprise a store and factory for the manufacture of clothing.

Messrs. Tabb Bros., have taken possession of the Westervelt property which they recently purchased and are preparing plans for the erection of a dwelling and other buildings.

Mr. Chas. H. Ward, recently appointed postmaster, has leased the Nelson lot and commenced operations for the erection of a building 20x32 feet, to which he will remove his store on April first.

Surveyors in the interest of the Lehigh Valley Railroad have completed four surveys between here and South Plainfield for the purpose of locating the road to Roselle connecting with the New Jersey Central system.

A rumor says that a number of families will locate here from Alleghany county, adding considerably to the Seventh-Day population, and increasing the force of clothing hands in our midst. One thing is certain and that is the wages paid in this line of business will not make any of them rich.

WESTFEILD WISPS.

Mr. Albert Wilcox will occupy the new house of Mr. Walter Sparkman.

Henry Dougherty has rented the new house on Elm street of Mr. Theodore S. Bird.

There is still a call for more houses for rent in our town. By the first of March there will not be one left.

A large number our residents went to Plainfield to witness the entertainment at Music Hall by Tony Hart.

Capt. Sanson, of the Steamship Allsa, who has been at home for the past week, sailed again on Wednesday last.

The Buckwheats will give their first annual sociable early in March. More particulars hereafter.

Our crushed stone roads are having a pretty hard trial this winter with the way the weather has been, but they have stood the test well.

Mr. Theodore Hetfield is refitting the millinery store on Broad street, recently occupied by Mrs. Staats. It has been rented to New York parties.

The boys who are in the habit of breaking the picket fences around the burying ground, must stop that kind of work or they will have to bear the consequences.

On Thursday evening the "Ladies' Home Missionary Society," of the M. E church, held a sociable in the church parlors. All present enjoyed a very pleasant time.

A Lady Washington Bazaar dinner and supper will be given in Arcanum Hall on Monday, Feb. 22d. It will be under the auspices of Fireside Council, No. 176, of our town.

Our Township statement is published in neat pamphlet form, and shows the financial situation of our town in itemized accounts, which every one can understand.

John Leveridge, Esq., a prominent lawyer, aged 93 years, father of Charles E. Leveridge of our town, died at his residence in New York city on Wednesday morning last.

Lovers of choice stock should attend the auction at the "Buttercup Farm," on next Wednesday, Feb. 24, at 11 a. m. See advertisement in this issue of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

The Mechanics' Ball, held in Arcanum Hall, on Wednesday evening last, was attended by thirty couple, and was a perfect success. It was under the management of Thomas Eustice and James Rouke.

On Thursday evening the ladies of the Presbyterian church held an entertainment and supper in the lecture room of the church. It was largely attended, and the several booths and supper tables were liberally patronized.

A Phantom surprise party was given by the friends of Mr. James Miller, at his residence on Broad street, on Tuesday evening last. There were twenty-five couple present and a fine time was had. A. Edgar Wilcox furnished the music.

There has been quite a contest the past week as to who were entitled to the services of Fred. Miller, a first-class artist in taking care of horses and cattle. It was nip and tuck between Mr. Samuel Godschalk and Mr. Charles A. Kimball. The hotel carried off the prize.

An old landmark removed. Mr. Robert French last week cut down the large white oak tree which has stood for ages in front of his residence on the west side of Central avenue. The tree was no doubt over 125 years old. It is mentioned in an old road record of the original survey of a road which was laid out by the surveyors in the year 1740. It is a pity to see those old landmarks removed.

THE clerks in the Post Office were kept unusually busy on Monday handling Valentines.

THE next concert of the Plainfield Vocal Society will be held on Tuesday evening, March 2d.

WHO will be chosen to fill the expiring terms of Fire Commissioners Morris and Brower, is a conundrum.

VANDERBEEK'S Chautauqua Building is being treated to a fresh coat of paint, artistically laid on by Mr. James Williams.

FOLLOWING upon the loss of her husband, Mrs. John Wilson received the news of the death of a brother in Scotland.

THERE has been "no fli-s" on most of the Winter weather we have been having, and consequently no demand for fly-paper.

WE received a number of welcome valentines in the shape of renewed subscriptions—and it isn't too late for others of the same kind.

NEXT Monday being a holiday, there will be sessions of general skating at the Crescent both afternoon and evening with music by the full band.

LOW prices on all goods are guaranteed at Whitney's, 8 East Front street. Dress goods, white goods, hosiery and muslins. Carpets, mattings, squares and rugs.

MR. ADDISON S. CLARK was on Monday last confirmed by the Senate as Postmaster of Westfield, N. J. Mr. Clark was appointed by the President Dec 3d.

WE will give further particulars later of the Masquerade Ball of the Plainfield Turn Verein, to be held at the Casino Rink building, Monday evening, March 8.

THE Mayor has taken effective steps to punish the members and break up the gang of rowdies that congregate back of French's mills, during Sunday afternoons.

MR. WILLIAM SANDFORD designing to leave the Borough for a residence in the city of Plainfield, disposed of his handsome property at Washington and Linden avenues, North Plainfield, for $17,500.

DURING Thursday evening of next week, there will be another progressive euchre party at the Union Club. Tables will be filled at 8.30 and later in the evening there will be dancing and supper.

AT the shoe store of Mr. George W. Force, No. 11 West Front street, the large assortment of Winter goods is being disposed of preparatory to the receipt of the usual extensive stock of new Spring styles.

MAJOR W. D. W. MILLER, of LaGrande avenue, was a member of the late Gen. eral Hancock's staff and a life-long friend and sincere admirer. He was selected as one of those honored to be pall bearers of the deceased.

THE map of Plainfield will not be changed by reason of the recent addition of another to the list of little Brooks about the city. As it increases in years and grows in size, it will show itself to be of high Atnes.

A SMALL blaze that started in a West Sixth street house, Thursday morning of last week, was successfully put out by the presence of mind and bravery of the inmates, after about $100 worth of damage had resulted.

THE well known Laing's Hotel Stables and livery attached, of this city, are offered for rent. These stables are the best located in the State. A good man should want no better opportunity to engage in a successful business.

THIS (Thursday) evening, at Music Hall, the Y. M. C. A. are offering the public the greatest thing in the way of a concert ever presented. The Weber boys are a whole programme themselves. See if you don't agree with us to-morrow.

No additional bids for the improved lighting of the city were presented at the last meeting of the Council. The gas company are not as yet ready to give its figures on electric lighting, but still have the question under consideration.

The membership of the several branches of the W. C. T. U. of Union county is as follows: Plainfield, No. 1, 300; Plainfield, No. 2, 17; Westfield, 81; Rahway, 45; Elizabeth 35. The total membership of the five unions is 468; amount raised $4,524 50.

THE elements washed the streets pretty thoroughly last week, and Street Commissioner Angleman gave the principal ones a needed scraping Tuesday. But about $100 could just now be most easily spent on the streets with the best results for the money.

A VERY and economical pump is that offered by Carney Bros who have one on exhibition at their place on Somerset street. It will pump 200 gallons of water an hour at a cost of two cents, and will be put in your house on a thirty days trial to prove the fact.

WHILE all this discussion is going on about the right of a member of No. One's to seek through the city for those generous enough to subscribe towards a new set of wheels for the steamer, a first-class wheelwright could have replaced the broken spokes and all would be better than before the accident.

THE colored gentleman who rejoices in the title of "Colonel," and waits on the table of a Second street boarding house, turned his wrong side on a guest and a goblet of ice water down his back, one day recently. The presence of ladies at the table prevented the victim of the bath from expressing his opinion of the surprise party.

THE fourth of the W. C. T. U. Course of entertainments was given in Reform Hall, Tuesday evening last. Miss Marie Bowen was the reader of the occasion and proved herself a young lady of culture and talent. In addition was some excellent vocal music by Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Titsworth, Misses D. Runyon and M. Tomlinson, and Mr. Elmer Runyon. Miss Alice Smith contributed instrumental music that was pleasing.

WHITE is having a genuine closing out sale preparatory to his removal to the new store, and besides is really giving goods away. By his advertisement elsewhere you will see that customers are presented with twenty and ten and five yards of muslin at a time. The new store is to have a new stock of new goods, so none of the present lines will be moved with the business. All this is the reason of the big cut in prices at White's.

THE head pressman of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST, Mr. Howard Gray, was so unfortunate Monday morning, as to catch his left hand in one of the presses and crush the third and fourth fingers. He was taken to the Muhlenberg Hospital, where under the best of care, he is now steadily recovering from the shock. The ultimate result of the injury is not yet known, but his confinement for some time seems probable. We are afraid his pleasant smile and faithful service will be missed by us for some time.

NEXT Monday is Washington's Birthday.

THE town meetings hereabouts occur on Tuesday, March 9th.

CASINO RINK BAND play at Temple Rink Carnival, Elizabeth, next Monday evening.

THE aged mother of Capt. William Hand received a severe fall on Sunday last, dislocating a shoulder blade.

MESSRS. BARKALEW & DUNN open their North avenue store and its line of fancy and staple groceries, to-morrow.

THE XVIIth Annual Reunion of Alert Hose Company will be held in its parlors, next Monday evening, at eight o'clock.

JUST what is the reason that the man whose application for a liquor license has been refused, cannot apply again and receive one?

THE warm wave of Sunday and Monday struck a resident of Fifth street—one of Plainfield's clergy—and he builded a fence to keep people off his grass.

FRANK C. GREEN is selling out his immense stock of Furniture at cost, preparatory to removal to his new store. Now is the time to secure bargains.

ROBERTS, the liveryman, lost a valuable horse, Tuesday, of lock-jaw. The animal ran a nail in his foot a few days before, and its death was the result.

AS a result of a little notice to North Plainfield delinquents, inserted in our issue of last week, about $330 of back taxes were paid in by some of those in arrears.

VALENTINE'S DAY at The Crescent was celebrated by the presentation of a handsomely illuminated card to each of the little ones present. The attendance was very large.

THERE will be a grand billiard exhibition at Warnock's Temperance Billiard Parlors on Tuesday evening Feb. 23d. Prof. Sutton will, on that occasion, appear in his specialty of fancy shots.

A PLACE to be designated and used as the office of the City Judge is a "long felt want." The limit of rent—$15—proposed is not too much, as the opening of the City Court room for the purpose whenever necessary would cost fully as much.

THE members of the New Brunswick polo team that visited this city last Saturday evening, broke down just beyond the city line on their return home, were compelled to walk back to Plainfield station through mud at times up to their knees, and wait for the 3 27 a. m. train.

TONY HART'S "Toy Pistol" went off at Music Hall last Wednesday evening, without any satisfactory effect. The support was poor, and the stars—Mr. Hart and Miss Merville—were only occasionally good. Mr. J. A. Mackie made something of the part of "Pie," but oblivion awaits them all and it when the company and the play run against "Adonis" in New York.

PERSONS desiring to purchase a good horse at fair price, should read the advertisement of Mr. A. D. Thompson, in another column. At that gentleman's large stock farm near Finderne, Somerset Co., may at all times be found a fine stock of horses. Mr. Thompson is an extensive dealer in such animals, and has a reputation for fair dealing and low prices, second to none in the country.

MR. I. S. MELBOURN, of Plainfield, N. J., is in the city, and stopping at the Huntsville Hotel. Mr. Melbourn is the contractor for the building of the Monte Sano Hotel. He is a manufacturer of a fine quality of brick, and dealer in mason materials generally. The management of the hotel are to be congratulated upon securing this intelligent and competent gentleman. He will push the work.—Daily Mercury, Huntsville, Ala.

A PERSONAL letter from Prof. Hager, who recently assisted in giving our citizens such an elegant entertainment at Music Hall, expresses in glowing terms his appreciation of the flattering reception accorded his efforts by the Plainfield public, and the truthful and extended account given of the entertainment in the columns of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST. The Professor is now engaged in rehearsing his Allegory for the edification of a Trenton public.

THE Plainfield District Telegraph and Fire Alarm Company have moved their general office to 4 Park avenue, ground floor, for the better and more convenient accommodation of their patrons, and as advertised in our columns will transmit telegrams to any point reached by the B. & O. Telegraph Co. Rate to New York 15 cents, and to all other points lower than by any other line. Direct wires and prompt service. Telegrams will be promptly transmitted if left at any of the hotels, at North avenue, opposite the depot, at main office, 4 Park avenue, or by telephone. The company has shown a disposition to leave nothing undone to merit the support of the citizens of Plainfield, and we believe they will have it.

Information Wanted.

I have loaned a copy of the History of the 5th N. Y. Cavalry, 1st Harris Guards, to some of my friends or comrades. Will the person having it please return to me, or leave at THE CONSTITUTIONALIST office.

WILLIAM B. DUNN.

And They'll Be 'Tended To.

All parties having complaints to make relative to the gas or gasoline lamps—for whatever cause or of whatever nature—are requested to address such by letter to the Chairman of the Committee on Fire, Water and Lamps, Mr. B. D. Bowers, P. O. Box 315, city.

Serving His Patrons Again.

In the continuance of his efforts and endeavors to please the tastes of all his many customers, Mr. Charles Smith, at Front street and Somerset, has secured the sale in this city of the celebrated Bohemian Export Beer, which he will have on tap after Wednesday next. This will be appreciated by the discriminating class of patrons that "Charley's" good taste and good beer has gained.

Only $1,500 for Borough Purposes.

To correct the erroneous impression received from somewhere by some, we would state that the appropriation voted to be raised at the last meeting of the Council of the Borough of North Plainfield, was but $1,500 for the uses of such Corporation during the coming year. The additional amount of $1,500 was for expenditure on the roads of the Township as usual—no other tax of the sort or kind to be assessed.

The Hook and Ladder Ball.

The members of Zephyr H. & L. Co. propose giving a Ball, next Monday evening at Casino rink building, that is to be way ahead of them all. The Committee of Arrangements consists of Messrs. S. J. Robinson, A. Wallace, J. Armstrong, Wm. Claassen and F. Matthews, which is the best proof in the world that what is intended to be will be. Prof. Kelley of New Brunswick, will lead an orchestra of seven pieces, and many more attractive features will be presented. Hundreds of tickets for this Ball have already been sold, so its financial success is assured.

Personals.

Senator Livingston will please accept our thanks for a copy of the Legislative Manual, published by T. F. Fitzgerald, Trenton, N. J.

Little Jennie, youngest daughter of Councilman Voorhees, is confined to her home by serious illness. Her many friends are anxious for her speedy convalescence.

Rev. E. P. Ketcham returned to his home and parishioners in this city, from an extended trip to Florida, on Friday last, looking and feeling in better health from a relaxation of clerical duties.

Polo.

Another team of poloists came all the way from New Brunswick in the mud, Saturday evening, and changed horses at Metuchen for the sake of keeping their engagement like gentlemen, but were defeated by the Crescents all the same. They deserve better luck next time than a score of three to one against them. To-morrow evening a match game for the championship of Plainfield will take place between the Casinos and the Crescents, when an exceedingly interesting and exciting time may be expected. Both teams have scores of friends, and the rivalry is quite spirited.

Coming Minstrels.

Barlow, Wilson & Rankin's Minstrel Company is as far ahead of T. P. & W's to-day, as the latter once was ahead of all others. Next Monday afternoon and evening the B. W. & R's will give two performances at Music Hall, and we feel safe in asserting the programmes will be freer of "chestnuts" and fuller of wit, fun and nonsense than any entertainment now being furnished by the burnt-cork celebrities on the road. In connection will be presented the living reproductions of famous statuary by the great wrestler, Mr. Wm. Muldoon, and those gymnastic surprises, The Leontons. Read the advertisement of the special matinee prices for the little ones. Seats on sale this (Friday) morning.

A Correction.

We should have stated in our report of the meeting of the Home Rule Club, last week, that Mr. Andrew E. Kenney is the Club's very efficient Secretary, and that R. J. Perkins, Esq., was the Chairman that called the meeting to order. Our reporter was seated some distance back in the crowded hall, near where the veteran of '49 was enthusiastically applauding the doings, and behind the hundreds that were joining in the spirit of the occasion with both hands and feet, so he was not always able to (as the boys say) "catch on." He heard Mr. Perkins open the meeting with a most opportune and fluent speech, and he heard Mr. Kenney read the letters of regret from the absent enclosing their generous contributions, but in spite of this he neglected to give credit for the offices occupied by the above. Please accept his apology.

Improvements Around Four Corners.

The sleepy little hamlet, between this city and Rahway, known as "Dog Tavern," "Four Corners" or "Alton," has awoke to a sense of importance since the surveyors of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad have run their lines and driven stakes in that vicinity in anticipation of the new line of that road running through there. Mine host, Lambert DeCamp, of the hotel, has re-painted and renovated the premises in first-class style, and this popular wayside hostelry is becoming more popular than ever under his management. Next door fresh paint adorns the residence and premises of Mr. Dan. Terry, and adjoining Mr. William Van Neste is re-painting and improving his premises. It is expected that Uncle Tommy Lee will next follow suit. Mr. John H. Bennett, who has made such a change in the looks of Four Corners, is congratulated on the success attending his efforts with the paint brush.

Mardi Gras Carnival.

The Mardi Gras Carnival to be given at The Crescent, next Tuesday evening, is really to exceed in extent and excel in brilliancy anything of that or any other kind before arrayed in the city of Plainfield. The costumes of the occasion have been selected expressly for it, and have never been used in carnivals. They will not be chosen from a list but will be on exhibition at The Crescent during next Monday afternoon and evening and all of Tuesday, so that those who register at the box office with such purpose can pick out their own dress. A number of special Mardi Gras attractions have also been secured, including the big elephant, a musical donkey and many other amusing novelties. There will be calcium light effects and brilliant results of all kinds. All the patrons known to the management will be afforded the opportunity of obtaining a costume, and but a slight charge will be made that the success of the affair, in the satisfaction of those who take part, will result. The price of reserved seats has also, to make the Carnival popular in every particular, been placed within the reach of all. The additional charge for selected seats will be but 10 and 25 cents, according to location.

Items for Sportsmen.

The law allowing black bass fishing to commence on May 30th has been signed by the Governor.

Senator Livingston has introduced a bill which prohibits having or catching black bass less than seven inches in length or trout less than six inches.

The mild weather of Monday last induced some of our local disciples of old Uncle Izak Walton to try their luck at fishing in the waters of Green Brook. "Andy" Vandy succeeded in alluring from the wet three enormous fish of the sucker variety, which tipped the scales at over three pounds, besides several coatfish and sunfish.

There was interesting sweepstake matches at live and clay pigeons on the grounds of the Middlesex Gun Club at Dunellen on Saturday last, there being a large attendance of sportsmen. There will be shooting on these grounds every Saturday. A large and commodious Club House has been erected for the accommodation of shooters.

Next Monday, Washington's birthday, there will be an interesting pigeon match at Campbell's Club House, for $100 a side, between two New York gentlemen, which will undoubtedly attract a large attendance on the grounds. Other sweepstake matches will also be shot during the day. On Friday, Feb. 26th, another match at pigeons will take place at the Club House between Mr. Lebbeus Ayers, of Metuchen, and a well known shot of this city.

Bills Signed By the Governor.

Governor Abbett has approved the following bills which have just been passed by the Legislature:

Senate, No. 2. Supplement to the police and fire debt act of 1885, providing that estimates shall be made of the cost of the debt, and providing for the payment of the same.

Senate, No. 3. Providing for the enlargement of the chancery court at Newark.

Senate, No. 14. Authorizing boat clubs and similar societies to increase their membership.

Senate, No. 17. Authorizing the Gloucester county board of freeholders to build a bridge over Raccoon creek.

Assembly, No. 24. Appropriating $4,000 for the current expenses of the State labor bureau.

OBITUARY.

MRS JOSEPH N RANDOLPH.

On Wednesday Feb. 10th, at 5 p. m., at the residence of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Clarkson, on New street, Mrs. Joseph N. Randolph died after a lingering illness of over a year's duration from a tumor, in the forty-third year of her age. Deceased was a devoted member of the Congregational chapel, and its pastor, the Rev. Mr. Goodrich, preached at her funeral on Saturday last from a text selected by the deceased previous to her death. A large circle of friends and acquaintances attended the services. Deceased leaves a sorrowing husband, an aged father and mother, besides one sister, three brothers and numerous friends, who will long remember her as a dear friend and a very pleasant companion.

MRS. ROBERT SIMPSON.

As we forshadowed in our last issue, the illness of Mrs. Robert Simpson resulted in her death during Friday. The deceased was one of the most highly esteemed and admired of the many Christian ladies of Plainfield, and her death was mourned and her funeral services attended by a large number of the hosts of friends that had so loved her for the innumerable good traits of character and kindliness of heart and disposition she possessed. The ceremonies of burial occurred at the M. E. church of which the deceased was a member, and were conducted by the pastor, Rev. A. H. Tuttle, assisted by the Rev. J. L. Hurlbut. There was beautiful singing by a volunteer choir and profuse offerings of elegant flowers. The pall bearers were ex-President of the Council B. F. Coriell and Messrs. J. H. French, W. H. Sebring, Geo. M. Rittenhouse and R. B. Fairchild.

Lowering of the W. U. T. C. Rates.

The Western Union Telegraph Co., has been forced to make a big reduction in its rates from Plainfield to New York, Brooklyn, Jersey City, Newark, Trenton, Camden, Philadelphia, etc. The rate from this city to the points mentioned is now fifteen cents for ten words—night messages fifteen cents for fifteen words and one cent for each additional word.

The Teachers' Reading Circle.

From the Paterson Guardian of the 9th inst., we clip the following regarding an organization whose creation we recently spoke of:

"As announced last week, the committees of the Board of Control have been appointed, and a meeting of the chairmen was held in Newark on Saturday, in response to the call of the Vice President, Superintendent Meleney. All were present except Principal Bose, chairman of the Committee on Circulars and Printing, who was detained by work at a teachers' institute. The meeting proved to be one of considerable importance. The work of the various committees was more clearly defined, and all plans were made for immediate action. The cost of the books for the first year was announced as follows: Quick's Educational Reformers, 70 cents; Hallman's History of Pedagogy, 50 cents; Page's Theory and Practice of Teaching, 85 cents; Parker's Talks on Teaching, 70 cents; Fitch's Lectures on Teaching, 80 cents; the Chautauqua, $1 35; Evangeline, with biographical notes of the life of Longfellow, 15 cents. These prices are to be obtained through the Managers and not by individuals; consequently it is important that members of the Circle organize into local circles and decide upon the books to be read. In some places the teachers have already begun the reading, and almost without exception each one has bought his own books. Some propose to have the books owned by the club, thus reducing the expense, but experience has proved that the plan of owning one's own books and having them at hand whenever needed is the wisest and pays best in the long run. As soon as the city or county Managers organize their Secretary should inform Mr. B. C. Gregory, Secretary, 60 Park street, Newark, of the fact, that he may accredit him to the publishers and put him in the way of securing the books at the reduced rate. Mr. Gregory has now on hand information that will be sent out, and he is prepared to answer any inquiries or give any suggestions needed by Managers.

"Superintendent Meleney's Committee on Local Management met at 2 p. m. of the same day. Vacancies in the city and county boards were filled or were left to members, with power. The organization therefore is now complete, and the work of enrolling members will not longer be delayed. A circular was drawn up explaining the method of organizing local circles and enrolling members and in fact, all the details that are so urgently asked for. This will be sent out as soon as it can be printed. It is desirable that every Principal should enroll his teachers and have them decide upon the books they choose to read. The certificates of membership will soon be ready, and notices of appointment will be sent to Managers.

"Reports are coming from all parts showing that the teachers of the State are alive and very much interested in the success of the Circle."

About The Water Works Franchise.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—On January twenty-ninth you informed your readers that the water works question was once more being agitated, and that I was among those who desired to submit a proposition to the Council of Plainfield, with a view of obtaining a franchise for the building of a system of water works. Since this notice appeared I have received many enquiries from friends and even from strangers, asking me to state the extra amount of taxes which the citizens would have to pay, or for how much I intended to bond the town, etc. From the nature of these enquiries it would appear that the inhabitants of Plainfield misunderstand the matter entirely and I would therefore request you to allow me to state, briefly, what I propose to do. It is my intention to ask the Council for a franchise granting to my firm the right to build, own and operate a system of water works, which will give to the citizens of Plainfield and North Plainfield complete fire protection, and an abundant supply of pure, potable water for domestic purposes. The City will be required to pay, for a number of fire hydrants, say two hundred, which will be distributed as the Council may direct. The amount of hydrant rental would be paid out of the present fire tax, thereby avoiding any taxation. It may be news to many of your readers, but it is nevertheless a fact, that all insurance companies will make a reduction of ten per cent on their present rates when water works, including the use of fire hydrants, are introduced in a town and in good working order. This alone would save the citizens of Plainfield about $5,000 a year, as the amount of premiums on fire insurance is estimated to aggregate $50,000 a year now. After the completion of the works house holders may have the water introduced into their houses, if they so desire, and for this they will pay certain fixed rates. For instance, a ten-roomed house with bath-room and water closet could be supplied with water at $20 to $30 a year, perhaps even for less, and more than this amount is now being paid by many householders in Plainfield for having water pumped into a tank, which latter often does not contain a sufficient supply to meet the demand made upon it. There is an abundant supply of excellent water to be obtained in the mountains to the north of Plainfield and, if a franchise should be granted to my firm, the work of construction will be commenced without delay and pushed to a rapid completion. We have made it a rule in all our enterprises to employ no foreign labor, but to hire men right on the ground, thereby giving the unemployed workingmen a chance to turn their time to good account. I mention this fact as I heard the fear expressed that, to save money, the contractors would probably flood the town with Italian or Hungarian laborers, which in our case will certainly not be done. I trust the above short outline of what we propose to ask and do may prove of interest to your readers and that, to quote the Mikado:

> "My object all sublime
> I shall achieve in time."

Yours truly,
E. WOLTMANN.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

MONDAY EVENING, Feb. 15th.

The Council met in adjourned meeting. Present—President Beguelin and Messrs. Bowers, Cox, Dumont, Dunham, Gallup, Goddard, Marsh, Simpson, Voorhees—10.

Absent—Mr. Cuthbert—1.

Minutes of regular meeting of the 1st inst., were approved as read.

The following claims were received and referred: C. A. Marsh, $100; F. A. Dunham, $6 45 and $1.52.

Petitions for a peddler's license from the Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., for a hack license from W. M. Callahan, and as scavengers by Jones & Co., were received and referred.

A communication was received from the Mayor stating that the Judge Wadsworth nominated and confirmed as Overseer of the Poor, was Mr. Louis F. Wadsworth, and asking that the confirmation of the latter be ratified by the Council, because the late Overseer refused to give up the books of his office to Mr. L. F. Wadsworth. Tabled.

A communication was read from the City Judge, requesting the designation of some place as the "office of the City Judge," for the sake of economy and convenience. Ref'd to Laws Com.

The committees on Alms, Finance, Printing, and Salaries, reported sundry claims correct and they were referred to Aud. Com.

The Laws Com. reported as correct the bond of Constable Dodd. Report received and bond ordered recorded.

The License Com. reported back the communication of the Children's Home. Filed. Also that the applications of Messrs. Staats, Day, Bock and Bilimm comply with the ordinance, with the minority report of Mr. Dunham that they be not granted.

On motion of Mr. Goddard, the applications were taken up and acted upon in the order as read.

Mr. Marsh moved that the application of Mr. Day be tabled.

Carried by the following vote:

Ayes—Messrs. Bowers, Dumont, Dunham, Goddard, Marsh—5.

Nays—Messrs. Beguelin, Cox, Gallup, Simpson, Voorhees—5.

A motion to table the application of Chas. Bock was lost.

A motion to grant the application was lost, and a motion to reconsider being carried, it was refused by the following vote:

Nays—Beguelin, Dunham, Gallup, Marsh, Simpson, Voorhees—6.

Ayes—Bowers, Cox, Dumont, Goddard—4.

The applications of Messrs. Staats and Bilimm were thereupon tabled.

That of Wm. Sullivan was taken up, and on motion tabled.

The petitions of Jones & Co., Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., and Wm. Callahan, were reported correct and licenses granted.

The old chestnut of Mr. Mahaffee for a return of the license fee of $15 paid by him in 1880. was referred to the Laws Com.

Regarding the securing of bids for the official printing, the Printing Committee reported its inability to get any offers.

Mr. Marsh moved that until the next regular meeting in March, the three papers of the city be recognized as the official papers of the city, and that the Printing Com. be authorized to offer each as compensation, 50 cents per folio and 25 cents for subsequent insertions for the same matter, if they will accept therefore the appointment of official paper. Carried—all aye.

On motion of Mr. Marsh, the Streets Com. was instructed to ascertain the best way of getting rid of the surface water on Front street in the vicinity of Farragut avenue.

Mr. Voorhees moved that an office for the City Judge be secured at a monthly rental not to exceed $15. Ref'd to the Laws Com.

On motion, the District Messenger Company was authorized to permit the use of poles by the B. & O. Telegraph Co., under the same restrictions as they are now used by the former.

The communication of the Mayor was taken from the table and a resolution passed stating that in the recent confirmation by the Council of "Judge Wadsworth" as Overseer of the Poor, it was understood to so mean Mr. Louis F. Wadsworth, and such confirmation was thereupon re-affirmed and the books of said office were directed to be surrendered to him.

The following resolutions were adopted:

By Mr. Goddard. Resolved, That the Com. on Fire, Water and Lamps be authorized to renew such parts of the present contract with the N. Y. & N. J. Globe Gas Light Co. as refers to the lighting of the streets for the term of one year, with the present option of one additional year.

By Mr. Bowers, Resolved, That the lamps now under the railroad bridges at Peace street and Park avenue, which are attached to the masonry of the bridge be detached and erected on posts set diagonally, opposite each other, that the proposition of the N. Y. & N. J. Globe Gas Light Co., under the date of Jan. 21, be accepted and they be requested to furnish new lamps to be placed on the posts mentioned. Carried.

The Aud. Com. reported its approval of all claims in its hands, and warrants were ordered drawn in payment of the same.

The Council then adjourned until Tuesday the 23d inst.

The Grand Army Encampment.

The New Jersey Department, G. A. R., was in session at Trenton on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday last. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Department Commander, Frank O. Cole, of Jersey City; Senior Vice Commander, Philip E. Tufts, of Rahway; Junior Vice Commander, Budd S. Bodine, of Trenton; Medical Director, Dr. L. W. Oakley, of Elizabeth, and Chaplain, H. H. Coxon, of Millville. Department Commander Nevius reviewed the workings of the department for the past year and congratulated the comrades on its success. An interesting feature of the encampment was the presentation of nineteen badges to the firemen and others who rescued the old battle flags at the State Capitol fire last Winter. Resolutions of thanks to Governor Abbett for his constant solicitude in behalf of the Grand Army were adopted. The resolutions were handsomely engrossed and framed.

On Friday there was a public installation of the Women's Relief Corps of the New Jersey Department at the rooms of Aaron Wilkes Post. Mrs. Annie Wittenmeyer, of Philadelphia, National Chaplain of the order, was the installing officer.

The reports from the various Posts in the Department of New Jersey for the last quarter of 1885 present the following recapitulations:

Gain in the Posts	467
Gain in Post 26, mustered Nov. 14, 1885	27

BOROUGH COUNCIL MEETING.

NORTH PLAINFIELD, Feb. 12, 1886.

A special meeting of the North Plainfield Borough Council was held in the parlor of Engine Co., No. 2.

Present—Mayor VanWinkle and Councilmen Arnold, Ludlow, Slater, Thickstun and Weaver.

Absent—Councilman Bronson.

The reading of the minutes of the previous meeting was omitted.

The Secretary read the call of the Mayor for the present meeting: "That a special meeting be called at 7.45 of the 12th inst., for the purpose of taking action on an ordinance in reference to determining the place for holding the next Borough election, and such other business as may come before the meeting."

On motion of Councilman Slater, the ordinance was called up for its third reading, and on motion was considered in sections as follows:

Section 1. That the next election of Borough be held at the harness shop of Mr. John Vosselman on Somerset street.

Section 2. That this ordinance take effect on Feb. 23, 1886.

On calling the roll, each member present voted in the affirmative, when the ordinance was declared carried.

Councilman Arnold moved that the Clerk be authorized to cause ten written notices of said ordinance to be posted in as many public places. The motion was carried.

The finance report of the Council for its first year was read, showing:

RECEIPTS.
Amount received for Taxes	$516 30
Amount received for Licenses	280 00
Amount received for Fines	2 50
	[illegible]
EXPENDITURES.
Claims Paid	[illegible]
Unpaid Claims	204 40
Amount to Balance	87 50
	[illegible]

Leaving a balance in hands of Treasurer of $87.50.

Councilman Slater offered in addition a resolution as follows: "And that the Mayor and Council would respectfully recommend that the sum of $1,500 be voted for and raised by tax, as in our judgment that amount will be necessary to defray the expenses of the Borough for the ensuing year; also, that the sum of $1,500 be raised in the same manner, to be used in maintaining the roads in the Borough." And, on motion, the above report and recommendation were ordered to be recorded in full on the minutes.

The following bills were presented: John H. Jackson, services as Corporation Counsel, 1 year, $100; John H. Jackson, defending Borough against T. J. Cary, $15; John H. Jackson, defending estimated expense to same case, $6; total, $121; Peter Weaver, Marshal, $1.30; William Shotwell, for collecting taxes at 5 per cent., $25 51; Isaac Brokaw, for assessing taxes at 5 per cent., $24.48; Charles E. Austin, for collecting on returned taxes, $4.76; John Bodine, making ballot-box, $15.

The four last bills were reported correct by the Auditing Committee, and were ordered paid and warrants ordered drawn for the same, while the two former will await the action of the Auditing Committee and Corporation Counsel.

The bill of the Marshal contained an item for arresting a prominent citizen of the Borough, whose equestrian feats would be better adapted to a hurdle race on the island than one of our principal thoroughfares, as a lady teacher on her way to school was seriously injured by being run down on the sidewalk only recently. Owing to the very good standing of the owner in this instance, or the speed of the mare (not mayor) the young man escaped the meshes of the law with a slight reprimand, accompanied with a promise on his part to avoid a repetition of the same offense within the limits of the Borough at least, while the Marshal is anxiously awaiting the decision of the Corporation Counsel for his fee, who, on request, was granted further time to decide the matter correctly, as this case will be apt to establish a precedent that will affect future affairs of the same nature.

Councilman Weaver stated, as reported by the Collector, a small amount of uncollected taxes remained on his books, as the result of deductions to all firemen and ex-soldiers' properties.

Mr. Slater moved that the Collector be allowed to deduct the amounts thus credited from his accounts, to enable him to balance his books as such deductions were legally made, which was carried.

On motion, adjourned.

1. You'll meet this year on Brighton strand one destined for your heart and hand.

2. Choose one, if you are shrewd, no safety lies in multitude.

3. Endless flirtation doth seem your vocation.

4. Bracing air and embracing arms give Coney Island especial charms.

5. Young or old? Love or gold? Toss odd or even, you'll be told.

6. Some natures change on change of name, but like the rose, you'll be the same.

7. For music and balls you'll have nursery squalls.

8. The right one cometh from New York, with heart and pulse as light as cork.

9. Away with pride and cold disdain, or you'll too long alone remain.

10. Don't have for motto "Both are best" but "Now choose one, look at the rest."

11. 'Tis simply true, though now you laugh, that you will worship a golden calf.

12. This year a lover will with pride, watch thee sporting in the tide.

13. At Ocean Grove you'll forsake worldly notions, drink nothing but tea, and attend your devotions.

14. A heart and fortune you will gain in the summer's grand campaign.

15. Before you go too far, be sure there's not another side the brighter side to mar.

16. A life both long and wisely spent, and children to your heart's content.

17. Happy when single, but not content, you'll marry in haste and soon repent.

18. Lovers and books romantic—the music of the grand Atlantic, this year will make you nearly frantic.

19. The "Mighty Dollar" cannot buy the love for which in vain you sigh.

20. A well known line you may [illegible] "A thorn is always near a rose."

21. You nobly strive to make it known "'Tis bad for men to be alone"

22. Before the present year is out, your wedding cards will be about.

23. A heartless flirt; You'll penance do for all the innocents you slew.

24. On some fine day not very remote, you'll meet your match on a ferry-boat.

25. Your head is hot, your heart is cold, I pity your lot when you are old.

26. With throbbing heart and trembling hand soon at the altar you will stand.

27. You'll count amongst your future joys, six little boys.

28. Your pace, I fear, is rather fast—your love's by far too hot to last!

29. Inconstant as the fickle wind, from day to day you'll change your mind.

30. Ever dreaming—never doing, you'll gain naught by seaside wooing.

31. You will love and run away, and live to love another day.

32. You'll have a busy summer, flirting hard with each new comer.

33. Be merry now, no more you'll laugh, when you have found your better half.

34. Cheer up! cheer up! I plainly see, bright golden days in store for thee.

35. Like the flow and ebb of tide, your spirits rise and soon subside.

36. You're building castles in the air, to end in grief and dark despair.

37. You lack the courage to say "No," hence all your troubles here below.

38. Lawn tennis is a pastime sweet, where a life partner you will meet.

39. Enjoy the sunshine while you may, too soon the chance may pass away.

40. Sweet and bright as the month of May, your life shall seem a holiday.

41. You'll break the heartless law of fashion, and own at last the tender passion.

42. Your destiny is hard to fix, bitter and sweet so freely mix.

43. The wedding bells soon merrily shall ring a chime to gladden thee.

44. When you go out to sea to fish you'll catch the very thing you wish.

45. You soon must solve the problem grave—"An old one's pet or young one's slave."

46. Some dress to live; but you, I guess, like many, only live to dress.

47. Unless you're a Mormon or a Turk, contented you'll be with this year's work.

48. The happy day is drawing nigh, to all our pains and cares good-bye.

49. You're leaving now to meet no more the only one you could adore.

50. To young and old I bid farewell, and will next year their fortunes tell.

Mrs. Maurice Brancher, 50 years old, committed suicide on Saturday last by jumping from the centre span of High Bridge to the Harlem River. She was made desperate by long continued illness. The police recovered her body.

John McMahon, the defaulting ex-Collector of Revenue of Hoboken, who absconded two years ago, leaving a deficiency of over $51,000 in his accounts, has been sentenced in the Court of Special Sessions, Jersey City, by Judge McGill, to five years in State Prison, the full extent of the law.

The famous old Freeman Tavern, at Morristown, is to be demolished. It was erected about 1740, and when the Continental army was quartered on the hills of that town, in the winters of 1777 and 1781, it was a choice resort for the officers. The ancient hostelry has been made famous by the fiction that Gen. Washington therein received his degree of a Master Mason.

The information which we receive from Hunterdon, Somerset and the northern part of Mercer county is that the one topic of conversation in the cars, in country stores and at hotels, is the contest in the Legislature over railroad matters, and that the unanimous expression of opinion is in favor of the admission of the Baltimore & Ohio to this State.—True American.

STATE TAX STATISTICS.

The preliminary and most important part of the annual report of State Comptroller Anderson has been printed. The abstract of ratables, or valuations of real and personal property throughout the State for 1885, is as follows:

Counties.	Valuation of 1885.	Increase.
Atlantic	$5,765,153 50	$574,986 50
Bergen	15,532,243 00	115,183 00

Totals	$565,537,955 84	$11,213,757 50
Total increase		$10,709,841 50

The only decrease reported is the following: Middlesex, $105,000; Morris, $63,541; Ocean, $207,738, and Warren, $137,637. Total, $573,916.

THE REVISED COMMANDMENTS.

1. Thou shalt have no other boss but me.

2. Thou shalt not make to thyself any comforts, or the likeness of anything to thine own interest, neither on the earth above or the pit below. Thou shalt bow down to me and worship me, for I am thy boss, and a zealous boss, and I will show thee no mercy, but endeavor to make thee keep my commandments.

3. Thou shalt not take the name of thy boss in vain, least I discharge thee in two weeks from the time of so doing.

4. Remember that thou must work from 7 a. m. to 6 p. m., six days in the week, with all thy might and strength, and do all I desire of thee, and on the seventh day thou shalt stay at home and do no manner of work, but shall do all thou canst to recruit thy exhausted strength for my services on Monday morning.

5. Honor thy boss, that thy days may be short and few, for I shalt not want thee when thou gettest old and have to spend thy days in the alms house, as I shall not care.

6. Thou shalt not belong to any labor men's society or organization, whether it be for social purposes or not, for it is against my will.

7. Thou shalt always speak well of me, although I oppose thee and continue to cut thy wages down from five to fifteen per cent. Thou shall be content if I only find thee work and pay thee ninety cents a day and advise thee to save half of it.

8. Thou shalt starve and go naked and cold if it is anything to my interest. Thou shalt earn money to pay my salary and furnish my house with costly furniture and my stable with slick horses.

9. Thou shalt hold no meeting to consider thine own interests nor protest against a reduction of wages. Thou shalt not have the Yonkers Herald in your houses, for it speaks the truth and it is not afraid to say thy belly is filled with choice roast beef and plum pudding, while the poor people are lucky to get codfish and water. Thou shalt read no newspaper but the Gazette and Statesman as I wish thee to be kept in ignorance and poverty all the days of thy life.

10. Thou shalt not covet thy master's money, or his comforts, or his luxuries, or anything that is his. Thou shalt not covet any overseer's room; thou shalt not covet his money, though he gets three dollars per day and thou one. Thou shalt not object to anything, as I want to reign over thee and keep thee in bondage.

11. Thou shalt tremble at the sight of Capt. John and his minions.—Yonkers Herald.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

If an oven is too hot for baking, set a dish of cold water in it.

Umbrellas will last longer if, when wet, they are placed handle downward to dry.

Clean boiling water will remove tea stains and thus prevent its spreading over the fabric.

Gingerbread may be varied and wonderfully improved by the addition of grated cocoanut.

Rock candy is served to sweeten coffee, and makes also a very pure, excellent sugar for tea.

When the burners of lamps become clogged with char, put them in a strong soft soap suds, and boil awhile to clean them.

Ten ten-penny nails dipped in gold varnish are bound together by a crimson ribbon and make an artistic paper weight.

Boiled starch can be much improved by the addition of a little sperm or a little salt, or both, or a little dissolved gum arabic.

No kitchen should be without scales to test the integrity of things purchased by weight, and to measure the quantity of various recipes.

A bag for soiled linen is made of tapestry cloth, and has a branch of a tree with a hornet's nest suspended from it, painted in the natural colors.

The newest sofa cushions are made three-quarters of a yard square and are filled with fine feathers instead of down. Plush forms one side and fine felt cloth the other.

Few people know that by setting a glass fruit jar on a folded towel thoroughly soaked in cold water the fruit can be poured in boiling hot with no more danger of breaking than with a tin pan.

Fried potatoes—Cut cold, boiled potatoes into slices a quarter of an inch thick. Have a frying-pan hot and well greased with salt pork or bacon fat. Cook the potatoes in the fat until brown, then turn and brown the other side.

Graham muffins made in this way are wholesome for breakfast: One quart of Graham flour, one tablespoonful of baking powder, and half a teaspoonful of salt sifted. To this add two eggs well beaten, two ounces of melted butter and enough milk to form a thin batter, mixing thoroughly. Bake in muffin rings or pans half filled with the batter, in a brisk oven.

Bread griddle cakes are excellent and may be made of stale bread. Soak a small-bowl of bread over night in milk. In the morning mix half a cupful of flour, into which is put one and one-half teaspoonfuls of baking powder, with one quart of milk, three well-beaten eggs and a little salt. Beat up the bread with this batter until it is very light and fry a delicate brown. The batter should be thick.

DEATH OF G. L. LORILLARD.

Mr. George L. Lorillard died at Nice, France, on Thursday of last week, of inflammatory rheumatism, from which he had been suffering a number of years. His fortune is estimated at $2,000,000, half of which will go to his widow, and the other half will be divided among his brothers and sisters, as M. Lorillard had no children. He was married about two years ago to Mrs. Edward Wight, of New York, who has two daughters by her first husband. Mr. Lorillard spent the Summer season at Long Branch during several years past. He was well known from his connection with the turf, being a great lover of horse racing and the owner of one of the best stables in the country, including the famous "Monitor." He was also President of the Monmouth Park Association. It is not known what disposition will be made of his racing stock. No arrangements for the funeral have yet been made, but the interment will be made in the Lorillard plot in Greenwood Cemetery.

Prof. Lintner advises people who have live house plants to colonize upon them the lady bugs, the little spotted beetle that devours plant lice.

An Inspector of Boilers with seven Assistants in each Congressional district, is the latest invention to draw money out of the State Treasury, and enable some enterprising patentee to shove a safety-valve on a patient public. With companies standing ready to insure steam boilers, and make their own inspections, it hardly seems necessary for the State to turn loose a horde of officials who will prove the necessity of their existence only by subjecting the public to annoyance, if not extortion.—True American.

Speaking of the decisions relative to the lease of the New Jersey Central by the Reading, Bradstreet's gives the following interesting facts relative to the relations between the Central and the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Co., which are not generally understood:

"A very important consequence of the above decisions arises out of the relations of the Lehigh Navigation Co. and its railroad to the Jersey Central and Reading. By the annulment of the lease the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Co. is released from its obligations to both companies. Nearly all the coal traffic of the Jersey Central originates on the line of the Lehigh and Susquehanna Railroad, which belongs to the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Co. This road was leased to the Jersey Central sixteen years ago, but when Reading leased the Central a tripartite agreement was made to secure the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Co. Under this tripartite agreement the annulment of the lease between the Reading and Jersey releases the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Co. from all its contracts with both companies. During 1884 the coal tonnage of the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Co. was 4,200,000 tons. The rental paid by the Reading Company, one-third the gross receipts, was $1,414,400. Nearly the whole of this tonnage goes over the main line of the Jersey Central from Easton to tide. It can be seen that this traffic is most valuable to that road, and that close business relations with the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Co. is a matter of great moment to that road. As Jersey Central, however, on the other hand furnishes the natural outlet to the Lehigh Navigation, it is probable that these two companies will be able to reach some satisfactory arrangement after the former is restored to its own management."

The highest body of water in this State, says the Newark Sunday Call, is Terrace Pond, an oval sheet of water situated on top of Bearfort mountain, two very steep and rugged miles west of West Milford village, which lies almost at the foot of Greenwood Lake. The pond is very deep and clear, and is well filled with large perch and bass. Not more than a dozen anglers visit the pond in a year. The geological survey station was situated on the border of the pond, and the elevation was found to be 1,393 feet. Parts of the road leading to the pond are so steep that wagons must be lowered with ropes when they travel over them.

CLEVELAND'S
SUPERIOR TO ROYAL.

Rutgers College (the New Jersey State Scientific College)
New Brunswick, N. J., July 7, 1885.

Analyses and careful examinations of Cleveland's Superior and Royal Baking Powders enable us to bear testimony to the superiority of Cleveland's. It yields more carbonic acid gas than the Royal, and contains no ammonia salts.

Cleveland's Baking Powder is made of pure substances and is absolutely free from any kind of adulteration. We endorse it most cordially as an honest and efficient article, and one that will give entirely satisfactory results.

CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND & PACIFIC RAILWAY

By reason of its central position and close relation to all principal lines East and West, at initial and terminal points, constitutes the most important mid-continental link in that system of through transportation which invites and facilitates travel and traffic between cities of the Atlantic and Pacific Coasts. It is also the favorite and best route to and from points East, Northeast and Southeast, and corresponding points West, Northwest and Southwest.

The Rock Island system includes in its main line and branches, Chicago, Joliet, Ottawa, La Salle, Peoria, Geneseo, Moline and Rock Island, in Illinois; Davenport, Muscatine, Washington, Fairfield, Ottumwa, Oskaloosa, West Liberty, Iowa City, Des Moines, Indianola, Winterset, Atlantic, Knoxville, Audubon, Harlan, Guthrie Centre and Council Bluffs, in Iowa; Gallatin, Trenton, Cameron and Kansas City, in Missouri; Leavenworth and Atchison, in Kansas; Albert Lea, Minneapolis and St. Paul, in Minnesota; Watertown in Dakota, and hundreds of intermediate cities, towns, villages and stations.

THE GREAT ROCK ISLAND ROUTE

Guarantees its patrons that sense of personal security afforded by a solid, thoroughly ballasted road-bed; smooth tracks of continuous steel rail; substantially built culverts and bridges; rolling stock as near perfection as human skill can make it; the safety appliances of patent buffers, platforms and air-brakes; and that exacting discipline which governs the practical operation of all its trains. Other specialties of this route are Transfers at all connecting points in Union Depots, and the unsurpassed comforts and luxuries of its Passenger Equipment.

The Fast Express Trains between Chicago and the Missouri River are composed of well ventilated, finely upholstered Day Coaches, Magnificent Pullman Palace Sleepers of the latest design, and sumptuous Dining Cars, in which elaborately cooked meals are leisurely eaten. Between Chicago and Kansas City and Atchison, are also run the Celebrated Reclining Chair Cars.

THE FAMOUS ALBERT LEA ROUTE

Is the direct and favorite line between Chicago and Minneapolis and St. Paul, where connections are made in Union Depots for all points in the Territories and British Provinces. Over this route Fast Express Trains are run to the watering places, summer resorts, picturesque localities, and hunting and fishing grounds of Iowa and Minnesota. It is also the most desirable route to the rich wheat fields and pastoral lands of interior Dakota.

Still another DIRECT LINE, via Seneca and Kankakee, has been opened between Newport News, Richmond, Cincinnati, Indianapolis and Lafayette, and Council Bluffs, Kansas City, Minneapolis and St. Paul and intermediate points.

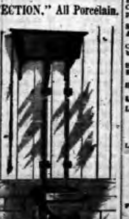
The "PERFECTION," All Porcelain.



WE TAKE pleasure in calling attention of our customers and all interested in sanitary matters to the all porcelain "Perfection," the only square top Hopper, with trap, made. For perfect cleanliness and simplicity of construction we invite comparison with any Closet ever manufactured, either home or foreign. It combines, with the utmost simplicity, all the points of a strictly first-class water closet. The squareness will make itself apparent to all users, in doing away with drip tray, the wash at all times thoroughly scouring all parts, whereas in the drip tray it cannot help but become foul underneath. It has a seal in Trap of 1½ inches, and the soil pipe vent of 2 inches diameter, so will be seen in the above cut, will prevent all syphoning of Trap. The two local or seat vents of 1½ inches diameter are intended for right or left ventilation, the one not being used to be closed. The large handhole in front gives free access to all parts of trap.

An Efficient Remedy
In all cases of Bronchial and Pulmonary Affections is AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. As such it is recognized and prescribed by the medical profession, and in many thousands of families, for the past forty years, it has been regarded as an invaluable household remedy. It is a preparation that only requires to be taken in very small quantities, and a few doses of it administered in the early stages of a cold or cough will effect a speedy cure, and may, very possibly, save life. There is no doubt whatever that

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

Has preserved the lives of great numbers of persons, by arresting the development of Laryngitis, Bronchitis, Pneumonia, and Pulmonary Consumption, and by the cure of those dangerous maladies. It should be kept ready for use in every family where there are children, as it is a medicine far superior to all others in the treatment of Croup, the alleviation of Whooping Cough, and the cure of Colds and Influenza, ailments peculiarly incidental to childhood and youth. Promptitude in dealing with all diseases of this class is of the utmost importance. The loss of a single day may, in many cases, entail fatal consequences. Do not waste precious time in experimenting with medicines of doubtful efficacy, while the malady is constantly gaining a deeper hold, but take at once the speediest and most certain to cure,

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,
PREPARED BY
Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

CONSTIPATION!

There is no medium through which disease so often attacks the system as by Constipation, and there is no other ill flesh is heir to, more apt to be neglected, from the fact material inconvenience may not be immediately felt from irregular action of the bowels. When there is not regular action, the retention of decayed and effete matter, with its poisonous gases, soon poisons the whole system by being absorbed into it, causing piles, fistula, headache, impure blood and many other serious affections. BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS will immediately relieve, and one bottle positively cure or relieve any case of Constipation.

"Was troubled for a year with torpid liver and indigestion, and after trying everything imaginable, used BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS. The first bottle revived me and the second cured me entirely."—J. S. Williamson, Rochester, N. Y.

Poetry.

HER BIG SISTER'S BEAU.

You are my sister's new beau, are you,
The one she caught at the ball?
I heard her telling mamma so,
Just as I came through the hall.

She says you are awfully stupid,
And you cannot dance at all;
It's just because you're rich, I guess,
Made you the "catch" at the ball.

And she says that when you are married
She'll teach you a thing or two;
I don't think I'd be taught by a girl
If I were a man like you.

What! Not going already, are you?
Jack never hurried off so;
Sister will be down in a minute,
And be real angry, I know.

SHUT THE DOOR.

BY E. N. THORN.

As I sat within my study
With a lamp burning but faintly,
Thinking of my country's history, present, past and future o'er,
Thinking of the greatest evil
That besets it, social, civil—
By far greater than it has ever known or harbored years before—
To avoid extending, shut the door.

Then my fancy led me farther,
And did then more knowledge gather
From statistics and taxation, that the public hath
From the cursed liquor traffic bore.
That people largely, prisons, attic
And more suffering abject squatter, than known for years a score,
Is it not time to shut the door.

Asylums full and overflowing,
And a larger increase showing—
Records show their loss of reason, caused by rum, nine-tenths or more,
With the most disease to chronic,
Either raving or sardonic,
Eking out a life whose sun had better set some years before,
Only to these we've shut the door.

Miscellaneous Reading.

LITTLE BILL'S WORK.

CHAPTER I.

Little Bill had knocked off work early; not because he was lazy; oh, dear no, there never was such another industrious little chap as Bill; but the day had been a fortunate one, he had sold his stock in trade (Bill was in the lucifer match line) and was returning home with sevenpence clear profit in his pocket; no wonder he felt happy; no wonder his little dirty hand was thrust into his pocket, jingling the coppers pleasantly.

He made a call at a cook shop and bought quite a lot of victuals with fourpence (it's wonderful what you can do if you only know how to go to market), next he stepped into a baker's and purchased a half a loaf, then left the shop and ran as fast as his thin legs would carry him, never once picking a piece from the bread, which he cuddled under his arm.

Little Bill would not have been a pretty boy even had he been clean, which he decidedly was not; his eyes were small and sharp, his nose flat, his mouth large, and his general appearance starved; probably he thought that dirt kept him warm, for it covered him more effectually than did his garments, which had large ventilation holes here and there, and he evidently made no effort to remove it.

Little Bill lived in a court off Fleet street; I shall not commit myself by saying which court, suffice it that it was the most narrow and dirty; probably had you asked Bill he would have said it was a very good court indeed, there was always plenty going on, innumerable small publishers brought out their penny papers there, which brought hundreds of men into the court many times a week, and Bill had almost as much as he could do to give the proper attention to the pictures which were posted up outside the offices; then there was often an exciting row, which ended in a fight and the police; but best of all, now and again two men came with a harp and a clarionette and played sweet music which almost made Bill cry, while the other children danced.

Little Billy reached the court, and without waiting to look at any of the new pictures which were temptingly displayed, sped away to its darkest corner and entered the dirtiest house; he staid a moment at the foot of the stairs, while a fit of coughing shook his thin, emaciated frame, then he began mounting the dark staircase till he reached the very top of the house; arrived there, he turned the handle of a door and found it locked.

"Is that you, Billy?" said a childish voice.

"Is 'at 'ou, Billy?" said a more childish echo.

"Yes, why's the door locked? Ask father to open it."

"Father's gone out; he took the key down with him and said Mrs. Green would give it to you when you came home," said the voice which had first spoken.

"When 'ou tom' 'ome," came the echo.

Bill did not speak again, but he put down his provisions and retraced his steps as quickly as possible. Mrs. Green occupied the first floor back. Bill looked into her room; she was certainly not there.

Probably he knew from previous experience where to find her, for without a moment's pause he went down the remaining stairs, ran out of the court, and entered the public bar of a public house which stands at the corner of Fetter lane.

A number of men and women were standing there drinking, talking and laughing loudly, but pleasantly. Bill went up to a great stout woman and touched her arm.

"Please, Mrs. Green," he said, "will you give me the key of our room?"

Mrs. Green started and turned around.

"Bless us and save us, if it ain't little Bill," she said: "why, child, how did you know where to find me?"

"I guessed you'd be here," answered Bill; then, as the rest of the company laughed, he added quickly, "'cause I knowed as you like pleasant company."

"Well, here's the key," she said drawing it from her pocket, "bless it I hadn't clean forgot it; have a sip of this, Bill." She held a glass of steaming gin and water toward him as she spoke; if possible his face grew paler than it was before and he turned away.

"No, thank you, Mrs. Green."

"Nonsense, Bill; it'll warm you."

He looked up into her face.

"I'd rather take a knife," he said, "and kill myself, than touch a drop of that—than learn to like it."

He turned away as he spoke, and left the bar-room.

"Father has blue devils," said Mrs. Green, as though in apology for little Bill, as she tipped off her beverage, "awful sometimes; can bear him yelling frightful; Bill minds him and the other children more like an angel than like a human bein'."

"Where's the mother?" asked a man.

"Lord knows; went off two years ago; but, bless you, she had them almost as bad at times."

Bill soon reached home again, unlocked the door, let himself in, and was received with every mark of affection by a small boy and a smaller girl, both equally as dirty as himself.

"I've got you such a prime supper," he said, taking the newspaper cover from the victuals which he had bought at the cook shop, "you must eat it fast, and then go to bed in case father comes home; he don't like to find you up."

He gave the children each a portion of meat and bread, then sat watching them.

"Ain't you going to eat nothing?" asked Bill's little brother, looking at him in great surprise.

"Not yet; don't feel hungry," and again the cruel cough shook him.

Supper over, the children went to a mattress at the further end of the room, and laid themselves down. Bill pulled the dirty coverings over them, kissed their grimmy faces, then wished them good night, "and if father wakes you when he comes in," he added, "don't you let him know it."

For a time the children were restless, but at length they sank to sleep, their dirty arms folded around each other, their dirty cheeks pressed together. Little Bill sat watching them for a time then rose, drank some water from out a broken pitcher, and set out the remainder of the food.

"Father may like it when he comes in," he thought, then went back to watch the children.

After a time he heard a step upon the stairs, a heavy stumbling step, but he did not move, and when a man rolled rather than walked into the room, he just lifted his eyes and looked at him quietly, keenly; then rose, crossed the room and gently drew the man to a chair.

"Head bad, father?" he asked.

"Deuced bad," the man answered shortly.

Something was evidently the matter with little Bill's father, ague perhaps, for he shook all over, only his head and hands jerked themselves more than the rest of his body, and now and then his arms shot out spasmodically; his face was gray, and great beads of perspiration rolled down it; his eyes wandered around the room, as though seeking for something fearfully.

"I'll just put a bandage on y'head," said Billy quietly; "there ain't nothin' like it. What are you lookin' at father?"

The man had risen and stood gazing in horror at the floor. Bill made him sit down, and hastily bound a dripping rag round his head.

"Is it rats, father?" he asked.

The man shivered more than ever.

"Yes, look, they're coming on to me."

He gave a great scream, and would have leaped up, but the child's hands restrained him.

"There is many, father," he said quite quietly and naturally; "but, bless you, they won't hurt; see, they are quite as close to me as they is to you."

The man's head shook so that the wonder was it did not drop off; and he glared up into the boy's face.

"There was sich strange things about to-night," he whispered, "lions and tigers—and all after me."

Bill expressed no surprise, but thought a minute.

"That's very like," he said at last, "I did hear as a menagerie had got loose; did you run, father?"

"And snakes," said the man, not heeding the question.

"Ah, to be sure, there would be snakes," then following the man's eyes which opened wider and wider till they almost seemed as though they would drop out, "you don't happen to see any of them now, do you, father?"

He pressed his hand more tightly down upon the man's shoulder, and wetted the rag once more.

"There's millions," the man answered, "all a-coming this way; let me go."

He wrenched his collar from the child's hands, but he caught him by the arm.

"Father," he said, "dear, dear father, stop a bit; they won't hurt you, they're—they're tame snakes, and I want to tell you what I think brings them here."

The man sat down again, his eyes riveted toward the farther end of the room, the child coughed till he almost shook himself to pieces, then leaned heavily against his father.

"It's kind of you to stay and listen to me, father, he said at last, "because of course it ain't nice to have rats and snakes, and—and sich like a crawling about the room if it can be helped, and I think it can, for I believe father, it's the drink that brings them."

"What!" yelled the man, "d'you mean to insinuate that I takes too much; that they ain't there really; that I only sees them in my mind, you—"

"No, no, father," said the boy, gently interrupting him; "why, don't I see them as plain as anything, all a-coming and a-crawling over each other?"

"But they're gone now," said the man suspiciously.

"Of course they is; you frightened them when you leaped up and yelled. They can't abide noise, but, Lord knows how soon they'll be back again. Why, I do believe," watching the man's eyes, "that they're a-coming now. Let me bathe your head again, father."

Once more the dripping cloth was bound around the man's brow, once more the child was shaken with his cough. "As I was a-saying, father," the boy continued, "I think it's the drink, the smell of it, as draws them; I've heard that snakes and rats and them sorts are uncommon partial to spirits, and you see, father, there's generally a little smell of it about you, though it's but one glass you've took."

Again the man looked strangely into the child's face.

"Partial to spirits, are they! Where did you hear that?"

"Well, I can't exactly say, father; but I've heard that in India and France, and—and Iceland, where such things live, and bite, father, for they're not quiet and harmless like they is here, that they fill tanks with spirits over night, and in the morning there's hundreds lying about as drunk as they can be, hissing and—I mean a-hissing and a-biting of each other like winkie; then the people sweeps them up, and burns them; so I thought father, that if that was the case there, may be you, though you ain't to say strong of spirits, yet so smell a little, might draw them varmints here, for they don't come when me and the little ones is alone; and p'raps father, if you just took a beer, for a time, they might go away far enough not to be drawn by the smell, if you did have a glass of spirits now and again."

Once more the child stopped to cough, again dipped the rag in water, and laid it on the man's head.

"Try and eat a bit, father," he said, and silently the man turned to the victuals, then, uttering a mighty scream, flung the boy from him and rushed out of the room.

Bill fell, but was on his feet in a moment, and after his father; the two children sat up in bed, but he had no time to notice them; down the stairs he went, through the court, along Fleet street, up the Strand, on, on keeping his father still in sight till they came to Trafalgar square, then for a moment the man stopped, then dashed toward one of the fountain ponds and sprang in; quick as thought Bill followed, and they beat about in the water together, the child pulling at the man, drawing him toward the edge, and at length they crawled out.

"How did it happen?" said the man, sobered up at last. Bill coughed again and shivered.

"Why," he said, quite calmly and naturally, "we was running a race, and you fell into this 'ere water, and like a silly fool I couldn't stop myself and fell in after. Let's go home, father."

CHAPTER II.

Little Bill was ill, in fact had been ill for some time, but no one had noticed it; the other lodgers thought his cough a nuisance, as it often awoke them at night, but it never entered their heads that there was anything the matter with little Bill's lungs. However some days after his ducking in the fountain pond in Trafalgar square little Bill found, to his utter amazement, one morning that it was impossible to move from his mattress; it had been a trouble often, but at last he really could not get up.

"Sid," he said, giving his brother a push, "Sid, ain't it queer; I can't get up?"

Sid awoke from his slumbers slowly and rubbed his eyes.

"Can't get up, Billy?" he said, "why not?"

"Well, I don't know; it's mighty queer, but it's because I can't I suppose. I feel so strange, and faint like, that you'll best wake father, perhaps."

Father, strange to say, had stuck to beer for the last two or three days, and come home each night only moderately, almost respectably, drunk; consequently the snakes and rats, not attracted by the spirit smell, had not put in an appearance. Sid ran to his father's bed and shook him.

"Father," he said, "father, Billy can't get up."

Father opened his eyes.

"What?" he said.

"Billy can't get up."

"Why can't he?"

"He don't know, but he can't."

Father rolled out of bed, and across to the children's mattress.

"Why can't you get up, Bill, my boy?" he said.

"I don't know, father; but I feel so weak and strange."

He coughed violently as he spoke, and then a crimson stream flowed from his mouth, and over the dirty coverings; father's face turned very white, and he raised the boy's head.

"Run, Sid," he said, "run for a doctor."

Sid paused a moment in horror, then left the room, fell rather than walked down the stairs, scampered through the court, on as fast as his little legs could carry him; he had no idea where to find a doctor, and probably would have run on forever, or at least till he dropped had a policeman not stopped him.

"Where are you going, boy?" he said.

Sid looked up, and in his agitation did not notice the man's uniform.

"Oh please, sir," he said, "are you a doctor?"

"No, my boy; d'you want one?"

"Oh yes, sir, please, sir, Bill's cut his mouth without his knife, and its bleeding frightful."

The policeman took the boy's hand, and hurried him along till he came to a chemist's shop; it was early in the morning and the shutters had not yet been taken down, so the policeman rang the bell.

In a few moments one of the upper windows was raised, and a head came out.

"Wanted, sir," said the policeman.

The window was shut, and in a few moments the door of the shop was unfastened.

"Where to?" said the policeman, speaking to Sid.

"Oh please, sir, I'll show you."

He ran on in front of them, and they followed quickly; at length they reached the court; Sid rushed into the house, up the stairs and soon the doctor and policeman stood at little Bill's mattress.

"Father" moved away, and the doctor knelt, took the thin hand in his, looked into the white face, then shook his head sadly.

"Nothing can save him," he said.

"Father" threw himself down by Bill's side.

"Little Bill," he said, "little Bill."

Bill opened his eyes, the blood had ceased to flow, and only the dark stain showed what had happened. Poor little Bill, he had never had much blood in his weak, thin body; it could not long supply such a stream.

"You don't see no rats, father," he whispered.

"No, Bill, my child—my darling."

"Nor snakes, father?"

"No, no."

"Nor—nor nothing, father?"

"Nothing, Bill—but you."

"It's all along of beer," said the child faintly; "they don't smell nothing now. But father, dear, dear father—promise me you won't go back to the spirits; Sid can't see as I see, and you have to look at them alone, for I'm—going," he paused a moment, and his eyes half closed, he then opened them again and looked up.

"The little ones would be frightened if they saw them, father," he said, "stinging ones might come in some time, and kill you all; so promise me, father, that you'll not go back to spirits; promise little Bill."

Round little Bill "father's" arms were clasped, and he drew him close, close to his side.

"I promise," he said, "and I will keep my word, so help me God."

A smile flitted across the child's face, his eyes closed slowly, till the lashes rested upon his white cheeks, one sigh broke from his lips, then all was still.

For a moment his father looked at him silently, then cried aloud:

"Little Bill, little Bill, speak to me."

But little Bill's work was done, and God had taken him.

As was predicted, the winter has been very open and lots of cold weather got in.

PURSUANT to agreement Messrs. Cook & Hall, publishers of the Elizabeth Herald, met President John G. Rankin, of the City Council, at the Comptroller's office in Elizabeth recently. The newspaper man signed a release to the city for their printing claim against it, amounting to [illegible]. President Rankin promptly turned over to Judge Alward his claim for five years' salary as Councilman, amounting with interest to $1,200, with instructions to divide it among the various charitable institutions he had previously designated. A genuine love-feast followed.

THE BRAKEMAN'S SMART DECISION!

He Settles A Dispute Between Two Drummers And Makes A Decision Which Benefits The Referee Only.

One drummer held in his hand an unlighted cigar. Another drummer asked that the cigar be given him.

"I will," was the reply, "if you will first tell me correctly what is to become of it."

"All right. I predict that you will not give it to me."

"Now see how stupid you are. If I should give it to you your prediction would be false. And, your prediction being false, according to our agreement I keep the cigar."

"But, stay there," replied the other; "if you keep the cigar my prediction is true and the cigar must be mine. My prediction cannot be proven false unless you give me the cigar."

"You have lots of gall to think you can get something for nothing."

"You have lots of nerve to stand up here and refuse to carry out your agreement."

"You are a liar."

"You're another."

"You——"

"You——"

"Here," cried the brakeman, "no fighting here. What is the row about?"

The case was duly stated to the brakeman. That individual scratched his head, wiped the coal soot and perspiration from his lip with his gloved hand, and, after great deliberation, exclaimed:

"Give me the cigar."

The cigar was handed him.

"This is a very interesting case," he said: "it reminds me of the syllogisms of Zeno, which we used to study at the round house on the problem of cause and effect illustrated by the example of two double-header freight trains trying to pass each other on the same track, or the similar but more abstract problem of what is the result when an irresistible force comes in contact with an immovable body. But, gentlemen, as Aristotle used to say—oh, have you got a knife about your clothes?"

Drummer No. 1 produced a knife and with it the brakeman cut off the end of the cigar.

"As Aristotle used to say, that is a reductio ad absurdam—a two-and-two-make five case. But as Plato observed in his work on color blindness and bolted frogs, the impossible is possible only with the impossible and—by the way, have you got a match about your clothes?"

Drummer No. 2 produced a match.

"And now," continued the brakeman, addressing No. 1, "you promised to give this cigar to No. 2 if he would correctly guess what would become of it?"

"Yes."

"Well, he guessed that you wouldn't give it to him, and, as you haven't given it to him, according to your promise the cigar no longer remains yours."

"Yes."

"And now, you other fellow, you think the cigar is yours because you correctly guessed what this man would do with it."

"Yes."

"But if he should give the cigar to you then your guess would be a false one, and, according to the contract, the cigar would not be yours."

"Yes."

"Now you see, gentlemen, that the cigar belongs to neither of you. I think (puff, puff)—I think it is (puff, puff) a good cigar. Good day, gentlemen, and if you have any more syllogisms to quarrel over please let the stakes be a house and lot or a diamond ring, and I'll be glad to settle the dispute for you."

And as the two drummers looked at each other out of the corners of their eyes the brakeman walked proudly away, exclaiming:

"Smartville! The next stop is Smartville!"

CHURCH DEPORTMENT.

Be in your seat early.

Do not stare at your neighbor.

Never mind who comes in late.

Keep your eyes on the preacher.

Sit down quietly and reverently.

Never whisper or cast side glances.

Do not turn around to see who is there.

Join in the singing whenever able to do so.

Avoid gossiping and underhanded remarks.

Give your hand cordially to your fellow members.

Refrain from criticizing the sermon or the singing.

Do not close your book until the last line is sung.

Provide something, large or small, for the collection.

Do not talk loud or laugh while passing down the aisle.

Bow your head in prayer whether sitting or standing.

Never put on your overshoes or wraps until the service is over.

Carry your bible to church and look up the text and the references.

Dress quietly, and do not stay away because you have not a new bonnet.

Speak a good word to the pastor. If you like his discourse, tell him so.

Greet the stranger who may be within your gates, and ask him to come again.

Take along something for your cough and give your nose as little attention as possible.

Remember all these things, and see how orderly your church will be, and how happy it will make you.

Do not throw your hymn book down with a crash before the benediction. Close it softly and hold it in your hand until the preacher says amen.

As Ecclesiastes sayeth: "Keep thy foot when thou goeth to the house of God, and be more ready to hear than to give the sacrifice of fools; for they consider not that they do evil."

Advertising is a good deal like making love to a widow. It can't be overdone.

Money doesn't make the man; and it isn't every man that make's the money, either.

An exchange has a good story of how a subscriber supported that paper. The editor presented a bill for eight years' back subscription. The old man was first amazed, then he was mad. He put on his spectacles, scrutinized the bill, and after assuring himself that it was really a fact that the editor wanted some money, he yelled: "Great Scott! Look at that, now! I've been supportin' this yere paper for more'n eight years and I've never had sich an insult as this yere in my life. I'll stop supportin' the blamed thing." And he did. He stopped so short that he failed to pay the bill. The old man has a large family of boys, and any one of them could run a paper better than the editor, anyway.

AN agent of the United States Fish Commission is coming to this State soon to investigate the condition of the millions of salmon and lake trout hatched and distributed by the New Jersey Commission. This work was carried on from 1873 to 1882, and it is claimed there is absolutely nothing to show for the money expended. A few salmon have been taken in the Delaware, one of which, caught at Trenton, April 5, 1878, weighed 22 pounds, but for a few years back a salmon has not been taken from the river. Strange fish have also been seen in our lakes, but not caught. Up to the present time there is no evidence to show that salmon or lake trout have obtained a hold on our waters. The Government agent may be able to prove what the trouble is. The propagation of shad in the Delaware has been a success.

POLITICAL CORRUPTION.

There is ample warrant for the belief that political corruption in the shape of legislative and official bribes has been and is yet shamefully prevalent in this country. Now and then the miscreants engaged in that nefarious traffic, both as givers and receivers, one being as bad as the other, are discovered and exposed, but, unfortunately for the public good, most of them have heretofore covered up their tracks and escaped justice.

We sincerely hope that awakened public sentiment will put an end to a system of political buying and selling, which not only disgraces the American name, but inflicts fraud upon honest men of all parties.

The remedy is through the ballot box.

Refuse to vote for any man, no matter how earnestly he may be pressed as a partisan, unless you are thoroughly satisfied that he is honest, that he possesses moral stamina sufficient to resist at once and forever the seductive wiles of vulture lobbyists, and that he will under any and all circumstances make public office a sacred trust.

Such a man would as soon handle a poisonous rattlesnake as handle a bribe.

Scurvy agents of rascally schemes will never dare approach a legislator or official of that stamp. They would be hurt if they did. They well know their game.

Any man, we care not to what party he belongs, who seeks an election to a Board of Aldermen, a State Legislature, to the Congress of the United States, or any other office, for the purpose of making money out of the position, will steal if the opportunity offers. He cannot be trusted, although he may assume the virtue of a saint.

Political Reform should be made a rallying cry.

Elect none but men of proven integrity to office, both for the sake of public honor and private prosperity.

When that is done, and every bribe taker and bribe giver is railroaded to the State Prison for a long term of years, the glorious era of Honesty will dawn, and common decency cease to be insulted by a horde of political corruptionists and bloated monopolists swaggering around with ill gotten gain in their pockets and evil designs in their hearts.

DECLARED UNCONSTITUTIONAL.

The Supreme Court on Thursday of last week rendered a decision declaring the railroad tax law unconstitutional, null and void. The immediate effect of this decision was to throw the whole finance department of the State into confusion. Of the $1,290,000 of State receipts about $900,000 comes from taxes on railroads. The actual receipts from railroads under the law of 1884 have been nearly a million dollars. As it is doubtful whether the old special and general laws under which the railroads paid taxes are not also unconstitutional under this decision, the predicament of the State treasury is most embarrassing.

The receipts thus far this year have been small and the amount of money in the treasury is insufficient to meet the heavy demands that will be made upon and which the receipts from the railroad taxes were depended upon to meet. There is no power in the State government to borrow money, except by a popular vote or in anticipation of taxes.

This decision will arouse again the popular demand for absolutely equal taxation, and the result of the renewed struggle is nearly certain to be the imposition of even heavier taxes upon the railroads, and the abolition, so far as the court will allow, of alleged "irrepealable contracts."

As soon as the news of the decision reached the State Assembly a resolution was immediately passed appointing a joint committee of five Members and three Senators to take the matter into consideration.

Governor Abbett, in a lengthy message to the Legislature, shows that the State's finances are not in such a deplorable condition as the New York papers have made them out to be, should the recent decision of the Supreme Court regarding railroad taxation be sustained by the Court of Errors and Appeals. The Governor shows that the State will be in a position to promptly meet all claims, and that the annual deficit will only be about $250,000, even if the law of 1884 should be declared unconstitutional by the Court of Errors. The Governor sees no necessity for a lengthy session of the Legislature.

The special joint committee of the Legislature on the subject of railroad taxation met on Tuesday and organized by the election of Senator Gardner as Chairman, and Assemblyman Parker as Secretary. A resolution was adopted, authorizing the sale of securities in the State's possession, to create a temporary revenue for State purposes.

The Board of Trade of Elizabeth have addressed a communication to Hon. R. S. Green, asking for his influence to secure from the Government a Federal building for that city, to be used as a Post Office and for other purposes, said building and site to cost $200,000.

The bill for the relief of Fitz John Porter passed the House last week by a vote of 171 to 113. Mr. Phelps said that for twenty years he had believed Porter was a traitor who ought to have been hanged, but he now believed differently.

The House of Assembly went on a spree to Washington Wednesday. That body would pose much better as the people's representatives if they stayed at home and attended to the important business before them.

The New Jersey Congressmen voted as follows on the Fitz John Porter case: Yeas—Messrs. Green, Pidcock and Phelps. Nays—Messrs. Buchanan, Hires and Lehlbach. Absent—Mr. McAdoo.

John B. Gough, the celebrated temperance lecturer, died last Thursday. He was born in England in 1817, and for thirty years has been an advocate of total abstinence.

William S. Potter has been appointed administrator of the estate of the late Jacob A. Fritts, of Somerville.

New Brunswick wants a horse railroad, and real estate on the outskirts of that city is now looking up in value.

These piping times of modern improvements in everything have brought out something novel in government, or an attempted something. The gentlemen in charge of the Baltimore and Ohio's interests in New Jersey have under way a big scheme for legislation, by petition. They have organized a bureau for the collection of names to put on petitions against "the repeal of the General Railroad Law." This is the title they give to the bill to keep them from saving a million or so of dollars by getting out of New Jersey to the cheap water-front of Staten Island. The names collected by this bureau are being printed into reams of petitions, which are being fired into the Legislature by the bushel. So long as the cash holds out or credit at the printer's remains good, this thing has a very impressive impressiveness. If petitions could only vote the B. & O's scheme might work. Perhaps the corporation can remedy this trouble by amending the State Constitution so that laws shall be passed or defeated by the preponderance of yards of petitions one way or the other.

An immense meeting of taxpayers and voters of the Third Assembly District of Monmouth county was held at the Globe Hotel, Red Bank, on Saturday. The meeting was called by Assemblyman Pintard. For several years the law prohibiting the hauling of seines in the Shrewsbury River has created much dissatisfaction. The poor men alleged that it was a law passed in order to benefit wealthy sporting men belonging to the Game Protective Association. The latter have argued that seine drawing destroyed all the young food fishes and damaged oysters by dragging them from their beds. The meeting resolved that a law should be framed making seine hauling legal at all times, save between June 15 and Sept. 1 of each year. Mr. Pintard will present the bill to the Legislature.

The first need of New Jersey is a brand new constitution, and the second is abolition of general legislation, for it has been tried and found wanting. We know that under the old regime many abuses existed, but the adoption of the general law system has made matters, if anything, worse than they were. The requirements of the various municipalities of the State demand, in many cases, totally different legislation to meet their varied wants, but it is impossible, as the State is now controlled, to get the sanction of localities not interested, and the consequences flowing from this condition of affairs are most undesirable.

A State convention of delegates from the New Jersey divisions of the Ancient Order of Hibernians was held Monday afternoon in Hibernia Hall, at Bergen Point, for the purpose of transacting unfinished business relative to the celebration of St. Patrick's Day. Over 60 delegates were in attendance. The convention decided that the Hudson county divisions of the orders should hold a grand parade and demonstration in Bayonne on that event.

Desiring to give our readers an opportunity of reading the arguments of all sides, we enclose in our issue of to-day, the speech of Senator Griggs on the "Bridge Bill."

THE LEGISLATURE.

Fifteen minutes after the House had convened Monday evening a bill had been introduced by Mr. Corbin, of Union, and passed, requiring the Court of Errors and Appeals to take action upon the decision of the Supreme Court last Tuesday week declaring the Railroad Tax act of 1884 unconstitutional and void. Under the existing law the court cannot take up the appeal till the next term of the court. A bomb was thrown into the House immediately after the passage of this bill by Mr. Noonan, of Hudson, who introduced a resolution calling for the appointment of a committee of three to inquire by what authority three Judges of the Supreme Court rendered the decision of last week on the railroad tax law of 1884. The Speaker declared the motion out of order. Mr. Noonan objected, quoting from a law passed last year, requiring the court, on application of the Attorney-General, to consider the certioraris of the railroads protesting against the taxes imposed upon them under the act of 1884, in banc. Mr. Corbin hoped the motion would not prevail, as it had not appeared that the Attorney-General had made any application to the court, and, therefore, the motion was out of order. Speaker Armstrong declared the motion out of order, as the Legislature had no authority to take an officer of any branch of the Government to task except in cases of impeachment.

Gov. Abbett the same evening submitted to the House the following communication relative to the charges preferred against State Prison Keeper Laverty, by Minnie Schaffer, a pardoned convict, together with the report submitted to him last Wednesday by the Board of Prison Inspectors:

"The Board of Inspectors of the State Prison, at the request of the keeper of the prison, instituted an investigation into the truth of the charge made against the keeper by a woman recently a prisoner therein, and also concerning kindred matters affecting the discipline and management of the prison. The board has made a special report to me that I may take such action as I deem proper. I herewith transmit the report to the House of Assembly. I have no power to act. I address this communication to the House of Assembly because the Senate cannot properly take initiative proceedings, as it might hereafter be called upon to act as a court if the House of Assembly should ascertain facts that would warrant the exercise of the power of impeaching any official."

Mr. Besson, of Hudson, offered a resolution for the appointment of a committee to investigate the management of the State prison, and report what action, if any, is necessary to be taken by the Legislature. Several large petitions were offered, protesting against the passage of any bill changing the general railroad law, and thus keeping the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad from terminating on Staten Island by crossing Arthur Kill by means of a drawbridge. Mr. Hudspeth's Washington street bill, which came up again in the House on second reading, caused no little discussion as to whether the bill should be considered that night or postponed for future consideration. A motion to adjourn the consideration of the bill was lost. Mr. Seymour offered an amendment striking out that section of the bill which makes it compulsory on the city of Jersey City to build the bridge. This makes it an open question whether, even if the bill is passed, the bridge will ever be built. Another amendment, to extend Washington street across the gap to tidewater, also offered by Mr. Seymour, was voted down.

Speaker Armstrong appointed Messrs. Corbin, Parker, Besson, Gangewer and Pintard as a special railroad committee, under the resolution passed last Friday.

Interest in legislative matters was centred in the House Tuesday, the Senate transacting nothing but routine business. The House occupied all the morning session in discussing the Jersey City Tunnel and Washington Street Bridge bills. The former was finally made a special order for Wednesday morning. When the Bridge bill came up Mr. Seymour offered an amendment providing for the issuance of bonds by the city to cover the cost of the improvement. There was considerable objection, but it was finally adopted by a large majority. The bill has now passed to the third reading. A. F. R. Martin's bill, providing for the sale by cities of land owned by delinquent taxpayers, was called up. The sale is to be made by Commissioners to be appointed by the courts for that purpose. Messrs. Martin and Corbin urged the passage of the bill. Mr. Seymour objected on the ground that the new assessment may be lower than the old. Mr. Hughes said he was opposed to the bill, because it gave the power of appointing the Commissioners to the courts instead of to the people. The bill was finally passed without amendment.

Gov. Abbett Tuesday afternoon submitted to the Legislature a special message concerning the recent decision of the Supreme Court on the Railroad Tax act of 1884. In it he stated that there had been collected, under the law, the sum of $795,000, out of a total assessment of $962,000; that under former laws there would have been due, had the act of 1884 never been passed, $740,000, thus leaving $55,000 which the State would have to return to the railroads should the decision be sustained by the Court of Errors and Appeals. He said that the State would not suffer even if the Legislature did not pass a new law at this session, and he considered it useless to strengthen the session on that account. He suggested the passage of a bill authorizing the Governor, Controller, and Treasurer to dispose of so much of the State's securities as may be necessary for the maintenance of the Government by reason of any deficiency that may occur on account of the adverse decision of the Supreme Court. In conclusion, he declared himself to be firmly opposed to any direct State tax, the only practical effect of which would be to impose upon the owners of real estate heavier burdens than they now bear.

The Republican members from Hudson county held a caucus Tuesday afternoon on the Second Judicial District Judgeship, of Jersey City, made vacant by the resignation of Allan McDermott, recently appointed Clerk in Chancery. Assemblyman Albert B. Dayton was the choice of the caucus. Dayton's nomination was bitterly opposed in full caucus, as his election at this time would leave the House without a working Republican majority. The caucus adjourned for a week without making a nomination.

The Senate passed bills as follows Tuesday: Assembly 96, enabling cities to refund bonds falling due in 1886; Senate 55, making fees and costs in foreclosure suits the same in Chancery and Circuit Courts; Senate 25, authorizing the election of jail wardens in counties where three-fourths of the Board of Freeholders so desire; Senate 72, repealing the Drainage act of 1871; Senate 86, preventing the killing of pheasants, partridges and grouse for three years; Senate 102, fixing the time for shooting hares in Atlantic county; Senate 105, confirming conveyances of the Ocean County Mutual Building and Loan Association; Assembly 147, empowering recorders to appoint justices to act for them when they are absent; Assembly 150, authorizing cemetery companies to lay out new burial grounds; Senate 89, taxing real and personal estate of every manufacturing corporation the same as the estate of an individual; Senate 122, authorizing a penalty for the annulment of State Prison and Reform School contracts; Assembly 13, excepting wages and salaries within $100 from attachment by a non-resident creditor of a non-resident debtor; Assembly 155, requiring signatures to licenses to be given within thirty days from date of presentation; Assembly 193, requiring fire-escapes on tenement houses; Assembly 131, authorizing townships to erect buildings for public purposes; Assembly 197, providing for paid fire departments; Assembly 225, providing for the reissue of bonds in anticipation of taxes due before the collection of taxes pledged for their payment.

The Senate killed the following bills: Senate 30, requiring the payment of fees to justices for all papers sent up in criminal cases; Senate 132, defining contempt of court; Senate 109, making fishing with set lines in waters stocked by Commissioners unlawful.

Senator McBride's Oleomargarine bill was amended in unimportant particulars and then ordered to be engrossed for third reading.

Senator Large introduced a bill prohibiting any law judge in the State from practicing as an attorney or counsellor.

In the Senate on Wednesday a bill was introduced to regulate the age of employment of minors. Senator Griggs introduced a bill to prevent the publication in newspapers in the State of indecent matter, and also preventing the defense of pleading the truth of the matter published. The bill is a hit at a local paper in Trenton which, pending the trial of the ex-convict Minnie Schafer on a charge of perjury preferred against her by Prison Keeper Laverty, published the most obscene portions of the testimony.

A joint session of the Legislature was held at noon on Wednesday and Job B. Bennett was elected Police Justice of the Eighth Ward of the city of Newark. In the House John Martin presented a petition signed by several thousand people, shipowners and others interested in the navigation of Staten Island Sound and the Kill Von Kull, protesting against the construction of a bridge over the Arthur Kill and urging the passage of Senator Chase's bill, the object of which is to change the tenor of the general railroad law so as to prevent the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company from pitching its terminal tents on Staten Island. The petition was referred to the Committee on Railroads and Canals. The State House Re-building bill came up in the House on second reading. After considerable debate Mr. Jewett's motion that the bill be laid over pending the printing of Mr. Parker's minority report was adopted. The House passed Senate bill 48, authorizing cities to levy a tax of half a mill on all taxable property for a public library fund. The bill is intended to benefit Jersey City, and will no doubt be signed by the Governor.

Just before the House adjourned on Wednesday Mr. Parker called up the motion to table the motion to reconsider Hudspeth's Washington street bill. He said that his object was to prevent the pigeon-holeing of the bill, which he believed to be the intention of Mr. Seymour, the gentleman from Hudson. Mr. Seymour denied the intention imputed to him by Mr. Parker, and said he was willing to vote for the passage of the bill provided that no amendment be made changing its phraseology. He understood that Mr. Hudspeth desired to make a flank movement on him by endeavoring to change the tenor and import of the bill. Mr. Hudspeth denied the statement, and the motion to table the motion to reconsider was adopted. Both houses stand adjourned till next Monday night.

North Plainfield Borough Primary.

The voters of the Borough of North Plainfield are requested to meet in the basement of the new school house, on Somerset street, on Tuesday evening, March 2d, at 7.30 o'clock, to nominate a Mayor and two Councilmen, and to fix the sum to be raised by tax for borough purposes, and in like manner for road purposes, to be voted for at the borough election to be held March 9th, 1886.

JOHN H. JACKSON,
Chairman of last meeting.

North Plainfield Township Primary.

The voters of the Township of North Plainfield are requested to meet in the basement of the new school house on Somerset street, on Wednesday evening, March 3d, at 7.30 o'clock, to nominate township officers to be voted for at the township election to be held Tuesday, March 9th, 1886, and to transact such other business as may come before the meeting.

JOHN H. JACKSON,
Chairman of last meeting.

TUESDAY was a regular March day.

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY weather was fine.

WM. A. COMPTON of Liberty Corner, Somerset county, has received several patents for embossing wood.

THE Plainfield Saengerbund held a masque ball at Caspar's Hall, Monday evening, whereat all thoroughly enjoyed themselves.

THERE was a special meeting of the W. C. T. U. in Reform Hall, Tuesday afternoon, and a paper presented by Mrs. Powell.

A BILL is before the Legislature making an obligation at bank which falls on a legal holiday or Sunday due the day after instead of the day before.

CONSTABLE AMOS MOFFETT, who has been very ill of Sciatica, has so far recovered as to be around again although still rather stiff in the joints.

A FEW of the members of the Plainfield Bicycle Club had a run about the city, Monday morning, for their own pleasure and the admiration of their lady friends.

MR. BERT DEMAREST who had just recovered from an attack of scarlet-fever, was threatened with pneumonia since; but fortunately, with careful nursing, all danger is now past.

THE admirers (and they are many) of Mr. David Lyon the popular organist of the First Baptist church, will be glad of the opportunity given by the Vocal Society's concert, to hear Mr. Lyon in piano solos.

THIS odd winter weather that we have been having, periodically, during this month of February, is very enjoyable but it seems to be full of sickness. One Plainfield undertaker received orders for six funerals in three days.

THE third edition is out of "Hymns and Carols for Easter Day," set to music by Mr. Dorsey W. Hyde of this city. The publication contains ten numbers. Mr. Hyde's sacred music is being extensively and universally admired.

THERE was no quorum of the Common Council present at the time of the adjourned meeting, Tuesday evening, so no further action has yet been taken on the question of granting the license applications that are "on the table."

MR. NELSON GILES, whose farm is near New Market, is now delivering to the Plainfield meat merchants, fine quality of dressed cattle and sheep. Having had long experience in the business he is meeting with good success in his efforts.

TWO blacksmiths furnished entertainment for the spectators if not for themselves, Tuesday morning, by an improvised fight on Somerset street. Constable Dodd arrested both participants, who were "held" to appear before the city judge, some other day.

THE attention of horsemen and others is directed to the advertisement of Force & Konover, of Flemington, N. J. The gentlemen have just returned from the West with a fine lot of mules, which they offer at very reasonable prices. Read their advertisement in another column.

BRO. BARDON, of the Madison Eagle, who has recently been appointed postmaster of Madison, Morris county, has issued a convenient card board leaflet, containing much useful information to the public regarding post office regulations. In the appointment of Mr. Bardon, the President has again given the public a competent and deserving official.

MR. A. D. THOMPSON, the well-known horse merchant of Finderne, Somerset county, has just received another large shipment of horses from Iowa and Canada, which he is ready to dispose of at reasonable prices. He invites an inspection of the animals by those desiring to purchase. Fair dealing and low prices is a characteristic of Mr. Thompson.

THE county convention of the W. C. T. U., which was organized last December in Plainfield will hold its first meeting Tuesday, March 9th, 1886, in Westfield, the morning session beginning at ten a. m. Reports of the work will be received from the Elizabeth, Rahway, Westfield and Plainfield Unions. The speakers of the evening will be Mrs. Downs and Mrs. Ellis.

THE publishers of the two Lambertville papers give notice that there is to be no more "dead heading" in their journals. They say that all notices of exhibitions, lectures, concerts, fairs, festivals, picnics, socials, dances, suppers, cards of thanks, obituary and society resolutions, etc., will be charged for, as they are of the nature of advertisements and not news, and their insertion entails considerable expense to the publishers.

THE polo match between the Casinos and the Crescents, last Saturday evening, resulted in a victory for the former. The latter did most of the driving but found it impossible to get the ball through a goal within which three of the Casinos formed a barricade. Had the game been played strictly in accordance with the rules, and fouls claimed and allowed whenever a Casino skated through his adversary's goal or otherwise violated his rights, the result would have been reversed.

SHORTLY after seven o'clock of Saturday evening last, while the wind was blowing a gale, fire broke out in a frame house belonging to Mr. John W. Hand, of Deer street, situated in that suburb of North Plainfield called "Bull Frog City." A general alarm was rung, but the building was reduced to ashes before the Department could reach the scene. A number of causes are given for the fire, one of which is the old-fashioned one of lighting a fire with kerosene. Everything was fully insured, including the furniture belonging to the occupants.

SPRING elections come next.

MATINEE at The Crescent to-morrow afternoon, from 2.30 to 5.30.

A BOY who was born after the close of the war will be a voter next fall. How time flies.

THE matinee at The Crescent, Monday afternoon, drew together a large and merry crowd of skaters.

THE death of the aged grandfather of the wife of ex-Councilman Polak, occurred during Sunday last.

THE District Telegraph Co. is arranging to strike the hours of noon and nine o'clock p. m. on the fire bell.

THE presses of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST office have been kept busy the past two weeks printing township reports.

MRS. HARRY BEDFORD, daughter of Mrs James Taylor of this city, is lying at the point of death, at her mother's residence.

THE steady improvement in the health of Mr. H. P. Reynolds, is a source of gratification to his friends and satisfaction to himself.

H. K. RAMSEY, formerly proprietor of the Bound Brook Hotel, has leased the Pequest House in Belvidere and will take possession April 1.

EMMONS BROS. has the contract for constructing a railroad trestle from the main line of the R. & R. tracks to Cook Bros. lumber and coal yards.

A CORRESPONDENT in a communication elsewhere, propounds for the Rev. Mr. Cleaver's answer, one of the many hundred stumbling blocks in the Bible.

SEVERAL of Barlow, Wilson & Rankin's minstrel troupe, including Mr. Hall and wife, stopped at Force's Hotel, North avenue, during their visit here on Sunday and Monday.

OUT of respect to the recent death of the son of its Foreman, the ball to be given for the benefit of Zephyr H. & L. Co. has been postponed until Thursday evening of next week, the 4th.

ANOTHER game of polo has been arranged with the team from Rutgers College, to be played at The Crescent, to-morrow evening. The Plainfield boys are very confident of winning.

HANDSOME gilt lettered signs have been placed in front of the ladies' entrance and office of Force's Hotel, North avenue. These decided improvements are the handiwork of Mr. J. Q. Miles.

FOR some unknown reason, matinees at Music Hall never pay. Last Monday afternoon was exceedingly pleasant and an entertaining bill for the little ones was presented, yet the house was "very light."

IN the list of tax delinquents published in every township each year, not only in this, but in adjoining counties, appear the names of many young men for one dollar tax who ought to be ashamed to see their names appear in this way.

MESSRS. WILSON & WARNOCK have opened a bakery at No. 29 Liberty street and are ready to serve families with the best bread of full weight, and all kinds of fancy cakes, and pies. Parties supplied with everything in their line, pure and fresh.

AN astonishing feature of the reception at the High School, last Saturday evening, was the presence of more young gentlemen than young ladies. In consequence the latter had plenty of partners, and the former were, for once, compelled to be the wall-flowers.

TWO of Chester's oldest residents died suddenly in that village on Monday, Feb. 22d, Mr. Nathaniel Squiers and Andrew R. Searles. One died at 6 and the other at 10 o'clock a. m. Mr. Squiers was a brother to Mr. William Squiers of North Plainfield. Both of the deceased were bordering on 80 years of age.

PROF. FITZHUGH is having all sorts of trouble with his male singers this time, and especially his basses. The next concert of the Plainfield Vocal Society, however, will take place in Music Hall, Tuesday evening of next week. A part of the programme will consist of a duett by Mrs. Davis and Mr. B. T. Barnes.

A CHANCE is still offered the public to purchase furniture at cost price at Frank C. Green's warerooms, on Front street. As he contemplates re-stocking his new store on Park avenue with entire new goods upon his removal thence in March, he will dispose of his present stock at extremely low figures. Now is your chance.

THE New Jersey Teachers' Reading Circle has issued a very neat pamphlet setting forth its plan of organization, course of study, constitution, etc. This and other matters relating to the organization and how to become and remain a member, may be procured by addressing the Secretary, Mr. B. C. Gregory 60 Park street, Newark.

EACH department at Edsall's dry and fancy goods store is now well supplied with new Spring goods of every variety. He says he will guarantee his prices to be as low as the same quality can be purchased for in New York. "The best goods at the lowest prices," has been the principle upon which this popular house has won such great success.

A FIRE was started, last Monday afternoon, between the flooring and the ceiling beneath a stove in the second story of Mrs. Bowman's boarding house on Front street near Central avenue. A general alarm was rung but the flames were quenched by the efforts of Second Assistant Waters and others, without the need of the Department's apparatus.

MR. JOHN DECAMP, son of Hiram DeCamp of Chester, N. J., and nephew of John W. Laing, Esq., of this city, who went to St. Paul, Minn., a few years since as a clerk in the large commission house of Hoxsie & Jagger, has succeeded to the business as one of the firm of Gerrard & DeCamp. "Johnny's" many friends in this city will be pleased to learn of his success.

THE chess tourney at Elizabeth on Washington's Birthday, was participated in by forty players, from all parts of the State. The games were played in the Red Ribbon Club parlors and were not concluded until midnight. The first prize, a handsome silver cup known as the Waterbury Cup, was tied by Thomas Lloyd, of Plainfield, and Edward C. Stokes, of Millville. The second prize was won by E. B. Keyes, of East Orange. The third prize was won by Nelson P. Howell, of Millville, and the fourth by Max Puegner, of Elizabeth.

THE Episcopal Convocation of New Brunswick met in St. John's church, Elizabeth, on Tuesday last. There were thirty-six clergyman and twelve layman present. Bishop Scarborough and Dean Rodman celebrated the holy communion service. The sermon was preached by Rev. A. W. Barbour. The financial reports of the missions and parochial work were read and discussed by a number of the clergymen. At 2 o'clock a collation was served at the chapel. There was another service with sermon at 7.30. The convocation will meet next August at the Church of St. John the Evangelist in New Brunswick.

THE seventeenth annual reunion of Alert hose company, in its parlors, last Monday evening, was fully as successful as those of the past sixteen years. About forty persons, members and invited guests sat down to a fine collation in the parlor of the Company, furnished by Dotter, of Brooklyn. Foreman Louis M. Stover presided. Speeches were made by Fire Commissioners Jones, Morris and Cutter, Assistant Engineer Saltzman, ex-Chiefs Voorhees and Cortell, R. M. Stover, Jas. E. Martine, W. B. Cook, F. O. Herring, Russel Johnson, W. J. Leonard, William Cooper, of Scotch Plains department and others. Owing to death in his family, the chairman of the Committee, K. T. Polak, Esq., was unable to be present.

AN Orguinette is advertised for sale in the "want column."

THE Receiver, Mr. J. B. Miller, will sell the Casino rink building and all its appurtenances, by order of the court, at 2.30 o'clock of Thursday, March 11th. The advertisement will be noticed on the opposite page.

POPE BROS next Monday, open for display and sale an extensive line of carpets of all kinds and qualities. Having placed large orders for three goods early in the season, they are thus enabled to show an unusually fine assortment of new styles and colorings.

AT Assembly Hall, last Saturday evening, those who took part in the Allegory of the "Great Republic," held a reunion presided over by Miss Bulkley, and to which all that had occupied prominent parts in the tableaux, contributed something for the entertainment of themselves and the others. Miss Bulkley made a pleasing address and Miss Bowers, Miss Holmes, Miss Dewey, and the Messrs. Horn, Peck and Stevens added their efforts to the programme. Dancing was permitted and thoroughly enjoyed.

The Vocal Society.

On Tuesday evening next, March 2d, the Vocal Society gives its second concert of the season at Stillman Music Hall. A pleasing programme has been arranged. Mrs. Sarah B. Anderson, of New York, the popular contralto, will assist the chorus. Mr. David Lyon is to play one or two piano solos.

The Next Lecture.

Monday evening next, Mrs. Emily McLaughlin will deliver a lecture in Reform Hall, on "Barriers to Success," being the fifth of the W. C. T. U. Course. The lecturer is one of the prominent officers of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and a most eloquent and convincing speaker. Miss McLaughlin has traveled, is cultured, well informed and of most pleasing address. Seats on sale as usual.

Township Primaries.

Democratic primaries for selecting candidates for Township officers of Somerset county, will be held at the following times and places:

Bedminster—Saturday, Feb. 27, 3 p. m.
Bernards—Saturday, March 6, 2.30 p. m.
Bridgewater—Saturday, Feb. 27, 3 p. m.
Franklin—Monday, March 1, 3 p. m.
Hillsboro—Saturday, Feb. 27, 3 p. m.
North Plainfield—Wednesday, March 3, at 7.30 p. m.

A New Club House.

The Plainfield Bicycle Club having become an Incorporated association, is now looking for a suitable and accessible site for the erection of a contemplated club house. Plans for the building have already been drawn and submitted for consideration by a young and rising architect that the club possesses among its membership. The funds necessary for the construction of the house will be raised by the issuance of shares.

Oh, What a Night.

Next Monday evening, at Music Hall, Mr. Gus Williams, supported by a company of excellent comedians, will appear in his new play, "Oh, What a Night." Mr. Williams is undoubtedly one of the ablest and cleverest of German dialect comedians at present on the stage, and in this new piece has been very successful in New York and other cities. The songs, situations and scenes are all new, and said to be exceedingly amusing.

Athalia.

The Vocal Society has decided, in response to urgent requests, to produce Mendelssohn's "Athalia" at its third concert on May 13th. The work will be given with full orchestral accompaniment and with the assistance of three talented vocalists and the accomplished reader, Mr. Charles Roberts of New York. To accommodate subscribers, a limited number of extra seats, at one dollar each can be secured on Thursday, March 4th, at Shaw's pharmacy.

Nine Hours and $3.25.

At a meeting of the Plainfield branch of the Bricklayers' and Masons' Protective Union, held last Wednesday evening, a resolution was unanimously adopted by the 46 members of the association, that after May 1st and to continue for one year, the rate of wages shall be $3 25 per day of nine hours work. The organization here states that it has been forced to take such action by reason of the decision of the National Union and the votes of over 20,000 of the best bricklayers and masons in America.

The Crescent Carnival.

That it is impossible to understand what the Plainfield public wants, is again evidenced by the Crescent Carnival of Tuesday evening. The management selected about one thousand dollars worth of costumes from the stock of the best costumer in New York city, offered them to the public at fifty cents each and arranged for a grand time for the pleasure of the patrons of The Crescent. The elegant building with all its luxuries and conveniences was thrown open, the finest band ever combined in this city discoursed pleasing music, calcium lights were brought out at an additional expense, and everything that could be desired was available. Yet the success in numbers was far below what could be expected.

K. of P. Anniversary.

The 22d anniversary of the Pythian period by Goodwill Lodge, No 101, of Scotch Plains, was an occasion to call together a large delegation from —— Lodge, of Newark, Olive Branch, of Elizabethport, and several prominent members of both Plainfield Lodges. The opening address was made by D. D. G. C. Hyde, of District No 3, which was listened to with marked attention. D. D. G. C. John Charles, of District No. 14, after a short address, sang a song that was loudly applauded. P. C., Slater, of Newark, related his experience of finding Scotch Plains, which caused a smile. Then came D. D. G. C. John H. Carney, of Plainfield, with "Thot Sphatter of Dot Shingle," which brought down the house. The cornet playing by Prof. King, of Newark, accompanied by a Bro. with a violin, and another on the melodeon, was pronounced par excellent. The tables were abundantly loaded with the substantial and delicacies of the season. This was an occasion long to be remembered by those who participated in its festivities.

Resolutions.

At a special meeting held in the parlors of Zephyr Hook & Ladder Co., No. 1, at Plainfield, N J., on the evening of Feb. 19th, 1886, the following resolutions were adopted:

WHEREAS, It has pleased our Heavenly Father to remove from our midst by death our esteemed brother, William P. Mumford.

Resolved, That in the death of our brother fireman, William P. Mumford, who was a most prompt and faithful member, and one who was always ready and willing to perform his duty, that in his death we are again reminded of the uncertainty of life and feel constrained anew to bow in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father, who doeth all things well.

Resolved, That we tender to the bereaved father and family our sincere sympathies in their bereavement, and commend them to the care and keeping of the Father of all, who loveth yet chasteneth, and to whom our departed brother has gone.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be presented to the bereaved family, also sent to each of the city papers with request for publication.

The Last of the Course.

The Y. M. C. A. Course of Entertainments for the season of '85–86, closes next Thursday evening at Music Hall with a programme of elocution by the refined, cultured and talented "King of all Readers," George Riddle, Esq. Although comparatively a new man among the profession, Mr. Riddle has taken a place already that is second to no one. While at Harvard College he was one of the prime movers in the preparation and production of the Greek play that was so successful. He also took the principal part in its cast, and therein displayed elocutionary power and talent so remarkable that he has since adopted the profession in which he will appear here.

In Society.

A Tea was given yesterday by Mrs. Wm. Roome, of Washington Park.

Mrs. Pliny Fisk gave a tea at her residence, Seventh street, West, Thursday evening of last week.

A reception tendered Dr. John L. Vincent, is set down for to-morrow evening at the residence of Charles Hyde, Esq.

Miss Gertrude Walz of LaGrande avenue gave an evening reception to many friends, on the night of Washington's Birthday.

The engagement of Mrs. H. B. Kaufman of West Front street, and Mr. Meade, brother of Mrs. A. D. Shepard of Fanwood, is "announced."

Private theatricals at the residence of Mrs. J. Munroe Brown, Netherwood, brought together the first society of Plainfield, Tuesday evening.

Last evening a Surprise Sociable was tendered Mr. John L. Force, son of the proprietor of Force's Hotel, in honor of the birthday of the former. Some thirty couples were present and indulged in dancing to sweet strains of music furnished by Prof. Fenace until after midnight hour. The "surprise" was complete to "Johnny" and the occasion a most enjoyable one.

Favorable to Game Protective Societies.

A decision has just been rendered by Justice Dixon of the Supreme Court, interesting and important to Game Protective Societies of this State. On the 28th of November, 1884, a trial for violation of the State game laws came before Justice V. W. Nash of this city. The complainant was Lewis Wyckoff, who charged William L. Allen, an alleged non-resident, with shooting quail out of season. Jackson & Codington appeared for the complainant and Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh for the defendant. A law of April 4, 1878, enacts that non-residents of the State of New Jersey must comply with the by-laws of Game Protective Societies of the State before they are allowed to kill game or fish within its limits under a penalty of fifty dollars fine. In the above case the jury rendered a verdict of guilty and a fine of fifty dollars in accordance with the evidence adduced. Defendant's counsel appealed the case on the grounds of unconstitutionality of law, and the matter came before the Supreme Court for argument on Feb. 18th last. Justice Dixon in delivering the opinion held, "that the act of April 4, 1878 for the protection of game and game fish was constitutional and valid in its application to the act of a non-resident of the State killing game on the property of persons who have formed an association under the laws of the State for the protection of game on their own property." The judgment of the lower court was affirmed.

Deaths.

Mrs. Emily Greene Dailey, wife of Mr. Parley A. Dailey of this city, died at her residence on LaGrande avenue, during Friday of last week, of paralysis. The deceased had come to Plainfield for her health, but too late to recover it. The funeral took place Tuesday from the home of the Rev. Charles R. Baker of Washington avenue, Brooklyn—whose wife was a step-sister of Mrs. Dailey.

A telegraphic message received during Monday last, announced the death of ex-City Judge P. P. Good, formerly of Plainfield. News of his illness was already on its way from Washington Territory, but it only arrived after his decease. He was about 53 years of age, and had been for eight years City Judge of Plainfield. He was prominently and actively interested in temperance matters here, and one of our best known citizens of the past.

Matthew Stillman of West Fifth street, a machinist then in the employ of the Potter Press Works, was stricken with paralysis of the heart, about six o'clock of Friday morning last, while on his way to work. Medical attendance was at once summoned, but the unfortunate man died a few hours later. Deceased was in the sixtieth year of his age, and the father-in-law of Mr. James Wilson who so recently lost by death his father, Mr. John Wilson, and his sister, Mrs. Robert Simpson.

William Pennock Mumford died at the residence of his father, Mr. Benjamin A. Mumford, of Arlington avenue, during Thursday of last week, in the twentieth year of his age. The cause of his death was blood poisoning resulting from a cut on his hand into which paint from a ladder was introduced while working at a fire some months ago. The funeral services occurred at Grace church last Sunday afternoon and were attended by the members of Zephyr H. & L. Co. (of which deceased's father is the foreman) by others of the Fire Department, and a large gathering of family friends and relatives. The Rev. E. M. Rodman officiated, and a quartette consisting of Mrs. Davis, Miss Della Runyon and Messrs. Howland and Cook, sang "Abide with me."

Mr. Leonard Daler of Washington near Rockview avenue, North Plainfield died on Sunday last after a long illness. Deceased was but thirty-one years of age and during his early life had possessed an unusually strong constitution and fine physique. For the past few years the deceased had suffered the effects of an accident that had crushed his chest slightly and caused lung trouble that he realized would eventually result in his death. He was out among his friends during the day previous and then expressed his expectation of dying soon. The funeral occurred during Wednesday, and was attended by numbers from New York, Brooklyn and this city. The quantities of flowers received specially manifested the esteem of scores of friends.

Vocally Successful.

The Young Men's Christian Association presented the Plainfield public, Thursday evening of last week, with the most pleasing concert—vocally—that had ever been arranged. The talent that accomplished such result was combined in the Weber Quartette of New York, that then made its first appearance here with such success as had before been unknown. No lack of appreciation could be asserted on that occasion as double encores were the rule, and the ability of each artist was thoroughly enjoyed. The Standard String Quartette that was also included in the programme, gave at the outset enough Beethoven to last all the evening, so its later efforts to please were of no avail. The Webers, however, lightened up the gloom of the instrumental effects with perfect singing into which appropriate action was skillfully inserted. The gem of the evening was a part song, "Sunset," written for the Quartette by Mr. Wm. Vandewater, in which the fine baritone of Mr. Simms and the voices of the others blended with marvellous accuracy and harmony. The sombre effects of the continuous reappearance of eight swallow-tailed artists throughout the evening, was relieved during the second part of the programme, wherein the vocalists gave a number of humorous selections—showing that whereas they were capable of accomplishing everything attempted by other quartettes, they had at their command a class of music in which none other could equal them. The accompaniment of Miss Budworth to the trio, "Crispino," was in perfect keeping with the spirit of the music.

The following are the words of Mr. Macy's song to the air of "In the Gloaming:"

"In the steamer, Oh, my darling;
When the fog-horns scream and blow,
While the footsteps of the steward,
Softly come and softly go.
When the passengers are groaning
With a deep and sincere woe;
Will you love me then, my darling,
As you did not, long ago?

In the cabin, Oh, my darling;
Think not bitterly of me,
As I rushed away and left you
In the middle of our tea.
For I was seized with sudden longing
To gaze upon the deep blue sea.
I thought 'twas best to leave you thus, dear;
Best for you and best for me."

Items of Interest to Sportsmen.

A bill has passed the Senate which makes the "open season" for killing quail in the South Jersey counties commence on Nov. 15th.

All of the game that can be secured is being removed from P. Lorillard's game preserve at Jobstown to his new preserve and country seat in Orange county, New York.

On Saturday Feb. 27th, there will be a large crowd at P. Lorillard's Rancocas Stud Farm, Jobstown, Burlington county, at which time will be sold at auction his valuable stock of running horses.

A large number of sportsmen and others gathered at Campbell's Club House on Park avenue, last Monday, to witness the pigeon shooting match between two New York gentlemen, Messrs. Watson and Weaver. Mr. Watson killed five to his opponent's four pigeons and won the match. To-day, Friday, another interesting match takes place on the same grounds between Lebbeus Ayres, of Metuchen, and a Plainfield gentleman, for $25 a side.

Commissioner Frank M. Ward, of Sussex county, deems the yellow perch to be one of the greatest enemies of young pickerel, and says that the perch will entirely exterminate pickerel from a pond in time. He relates an instance where a large quantity of perch was caught in a Sussex pond, and almost every perch was distended with small pickerel. This led him to watch the small pickerel lying in the grass in shallow water, and he frequently saw the perch dash up and seize them.

Saturday last there was a large attendance on the grounds of the Middlesex Gun Club, Dunellen, sportsmen from prominent clubs of this State and New York being in attendance. The shooting was fine, despite the stiff breeze, blowing at the time. This Club is prospering finely. A large and commodious club house has been erected on the grounds for the accommodation of members and visitors. A high board fence will soon surround the grounds. No outside shooting will be allowed during matches. The regular club day shoots are on Saturdays.

The fishing in Lake Hopatcong seems to be very poor this season, and as a good many fish have been found dead, it was determined last week to test the water, as some thought the powder works had something to do with the destruction of the fish. A corked bottle was let down to the bottom of the Lake, the cork was then pulled out, and the water secured at that depth was put in a can with three small, but very lively fish. In exactly six minutes the fish were stone dead! A Morristonian marked the time, as well as did some others, and all agreed that if the healthy and active little fish were thus deprived of life from the foulness of the water that, under existing circumstances, it was only a question of time before the Lake will contain no game fish.—Morristown Banner.

The game bills are as numerous in the Legislature this year as ever. Among them is one providing a penalty for those who trespass on lands in pursuit of game; prohibiting the killing of any foreign game for three years; fixing the penalty of $15 for every bird sold or shipped, the killing of which is unlawful; imposing a fine of $15 for offering for sale any deer, hare or other species of game that has been taken with trap or snare. To permit black bass fishing on and after May 30 (passed); extending limit to catch black bass to Dec. 1st; to preserve certain birds and keep them from extermination; regulating time of shooting quail; regulating the shooting of woodcock; amending game act in several particulars; prohibits any person having or catching black bass less than seven inches in length or trout less than six inches; making fishing with set lines illegal; prohibiting killing or selling red or grey squirrels; an act to amend an act to consolidate the several game laws, and a number of special game laws relating to certain counties.

The fishermen about Lake Hopatcong and others interested in that resort have been greatly excited during the past week, and allege that the bottom of the lake at the lower end is being covered with acid from the Forcite powder works. They assert that upon that end of the lake the bait with which they fish die as soon as they near the bottom, and those who bait their lines and leave them in over night say that the fish which get lost and go to the bottom are found dead and their scales are so loosened with the acid that they can be brushed off the fish. It is asserted that the accumulation of this acid is gradually extending over the bottom of the lake to a considerable distance from the works. A gentleman from the lake was in Dover yesterday with some water he had taken from the lake as far up as Bertrand's Island, which he was about to take to Fish Commissioner Able at Boonton. Paper which had been chemically prepared so as to detect acids would turn red as soon as it touched this water. Other samples have been sent to a chemist for analysis. We have not heard what the powder works people have to say in regard to the matter, and we do not propose to criticise them till they are heard. The works are an industry of great importance to this section, and we should dislike to see a controversy between them and the people who are interested in the lake, and we would suggest that both sides get together in conference and endeavor to adjust the matter before any unpleasantness results from it.—Iron Era.

For "The Constitutionalist."

MESSRS. EDITORS:—In an article published in a city paper on Feb. 17th, there were some misstatements, to-wit: "It was whispered that Bock had made some unfavorable references to Mr. Simpson and that that Councilman got enough members to assist him thus to resent it." This with other statements in same article is entirely false and without foundation so far as to having had any dispute with any hotel or saloon keeper. In this I have not had the least, and respect them all.

Stumbling Blocks.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—As is well known to a portion of our community, the Rev. Mr. Cleaver in the generosity of his heart, and in obedience to the command of his Divine Maker, has voluntarily and without pecuniary reward, commenced Sunday morning services in Reform Hall to which he invites all such as are not members of any church, and who for various reasons are not in the habit of attending Gospel Services anywhere, to attend. At these services he reads the lesson and explains it in such an easy and comprehensive way as to make it plain, intensely interesting, and at the same time presents such new thoughts in connection with it as to make the familiar chapter appear in an entirely new light, some new idea is developed and the heretofore commonplace gives way to the beautiful—thereafter from some text he preaches a sermon replete with earnestness, sincerity and eloquence. I have attended one such meeting, and was impressed with the invitation he extended to anyone to whom any portion of the scriptures was a mystery or a stumbling block, to send the same to him and he would explain the true intent and meaning of it as he understood it. Now to me here is something new, the Divine and the layman take common ground together. Here is a man who, like his Master, who taught his disciples and went about doing good, is willing to answer questions, make the mysterious plain, and disarm such portions of the scriptures as are perplexing and inexplicable to anyone of its apparent inconsistencies, accepting that invitation in the spirit in which it is given. I submit this stumbling block incorporated in that model prayer handed down to us through the centuries, a prayer that is familiar to us all.

"Our Father which art in heaven, etc."
Thy will be done on earth, etc."

Now see what follows, "Lead us not into temptation." I am not a theologian, certainly not a Hebrew scholar; let me inquire right here, is this sentence correctly translated—and if so, does it mean what the words seem to imply? If it does what follows? Why simply this, the petition is that our Heavenly Father shall not lead us into temptation, and we are then taught he will punish us through the countless ages of eternity for following where he led. Something is wrong here—I know it to be a stumbling block to some enquiring minds. I know of a good and consistent Christian mother whose daily walk in life was a model to her children and friends, who told me before she died, that same sentence had been to her all through life a profound mystery; she couldn't explain it, but would leave it to the happy consciousness that it would be made plain to her in the great country beyond. I told her I was willing to believe the intent and meaning of the sentence was, "Leave us not in temptation," but it is not so written in our Bibles. Will Mr. Cleaver, taking his own time and suiting his own convenience, take up this sentence and consider it from its standpoint, and give to us poor laymen such thoughts and information as shall enure to our common benefit. Giving public notice of the time will ensure the attendance of

WESTFIELD WISPS.

A number of our citizens attended the entertainment at Music Hall, Plainfield, on Monday evening last.

The public sale at the "Buttercup Farm" on Wednesday last was largely attended, and everything sold at satisfactory prices.

Mr. Theodore S. Bird, of Greenpoint, L. I., owner of a number of dwelling houses in our town, visited Westfield on Monday last.

Andy has concluded that there is no place like Westfield. He could not give up his associations and stays with us another year. Good for Andy.

The Womens' Christian Temperance Union held their Wednesday afternoon meeting at the residence of Mrs. Wm. Hart, Broad street, instead of the Hall.

Mr. Charles A. Smith of Fanwood, N. J., has purchased the dwelling house and lot situate on Clark street, belonging to Mrs. S. J. Hickok. Mr. Smith expects to occupy the same the coming Spring.

The flag shanty of the P. & R. Railroad was broken in one evening last week. Nothing was disturbed, except the taking away of a paper of tobacco belonging to the flagman. It no doubt was the work of some tramp to get a place to sleep.

Mr. James T. Pierson is perfecting the plans for three new dwelling houses to be erected this Spring, two of them on Middlesex street, and one on his land on Broad street, near the residence of Capt. J. W. Sansom.

The colored ball held last week was largely attended, and passed off very satisfactory to all interested. It was under the management of John M. Nelson, which accounts for the success which attended it.

Mr. William Smith, the contractor for the mason work of Mr. J. Warren Brown's new dwelling house, corner of Dudley and Lawrence avenue, has commenced the erection of the foundation. It will be rapidly pushed to completion.

The Lady Washington Bazaar and supper held in Arcanum Hall, under the auspices of Fireside Council, No. 175, was a perfect success in every respect. The hall was thronged, both afternoon and evening. The several booths for the sale of fancy articles, presided over by the ladies, were liberally patronized, as was the supper table. The most prominent feature of the entertainment was the voting for the crazy bed quilt, cane and charms. The result of the voting was as follows: Bed quilt—Mrs. C. B. Paddle received 354 votes; Mrs. A. J. Westbrook, 264 votes; Mrs. E. Harbison, 30, and Mrs. C. F. Gonant, 11 votes, at 25 cents each, which netted $165. Gold-headed cane—Rev. G. W. Smith received 451 votes; Rev. N. W. Cadwell, 416 votes; Rev. H. J. Nell, 107 votes, and the Rev. Mr. Folwell, 30 votes at 10 cents each, netting $102. Officer's charm—Mr. W. J. Bogert received 103 votes and Mr. Geo. W. Peek, 100 votes, and several scattering. The total receipts of the day was $618.67; the council clearing about $550 over all expenses.

We can only repeat what we said in advance—that Barlow, Wilson and Rankin's minstrels are far ahead of Thatcher, Primrose and West in every particular. This was proven by the entertainment at Music Hall, last Monday, when everybody was pleased with the varied bill, the talent of the stars and the cleanliness of the entire performance. A great deal of new business was introduced, which all will allow is most unusual upon such occasions. The reappearance of the company will be welcomed.

AYER'S Hair Vigor cures baldness. Hair Vigor restores youthful freshness and color to faded and gray hair. It attains these results by the stimulation of the hair roots and color glands. It rejuvenates the HAIR and cleanses it. It restores to the hair, that, either by reason of age or disease of the scalp, has become dry, harsh and brittle, a pliancy and glossy silken softness of extreme beauty. There is no dye in Ayer's Hair VIGOR and the good it does is by the tonic it imparts to the follicles, and the cleanliness and healthfulness of the condition in which it maintains the scalp.

AYER'S Hair Vigor renews the hair. Hair Vigor is the best cure known for Brashy Hair, Scald Head, Itching Humors, Tetter Sores, Torpid Follicles, and all other diseases of the scalp that cause the falling of the HAIR and its fading. Nothing cleanses the HAIR of the nuisance of dandruff so perfectly, and so effectually prevents its return, as AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. In addition to the curative and restorative virtues peculiar to Ayer's Hair VIGOR it is a toilet luxury. The Hair Vigor is by far the cleanliest hair-dressing made. It causes the hair to grow thick and long, and keeps it always soft and glossy.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

Contains no deleterious ingredients. Its use prevents all scalp disease, secures against the hair growing thin or grey, and surely cures all baldness that is not organic.

MCWILLIAMS' LUCK.

McWilliams was down in luck.

I do not wish it to be understood from this that McWilliams ever had any luck in particular, or was likely to have, as fortune's fickle wheel spun him away into the future.

Neither do I wish it to be thought that he had been a victim of continuous ill luck, for such, I feel bound to say, was not the case. His had been an indifferent, mongrel sort of luck, scarcely equal to sudden flights of reckless sublimity, nor mean enough to sink to a comforting level of actual mental misery.

A positive luck of either complexion might have been consistent, but an indifferent, neglectful luck was disheartening, giving the depressing feeling that the man was not to be thought of even for a plaything of fate.

For some time it had been a matter of conjecture with me whether or not McWilliams would have succeeded better in early life had he recognized the influence of his luck, and so set fate at defiance.

Fate is bound to respect the man that strikes for himself, and if the battle be well fought, she will bestow upon him the sweetest smiles of her daughter Fortune.

In saying that McWilliams was down on his luck, I wish to suggest that at the time at which we make his acquaintance he was in the proud condition of having been noticed (in an adverse way) by fortune.

The favored spot at which McWilliams was down on his luck was Pithole. All Americans, and a great many foreigners, that were alive in 1865, will remember Pithole.

It was at that time, and for a year afterward, the "eighth wonder of the world," an excitable, erratic city, built in a day, worshipping the green flood of petroleum that flowed up from holes in the earth, and baptized in mud a fathom deep. There has been nothing like it in all the romantic history of the oil country since.

Oil was discovered on the Holmden farm early in the year, and, before summer closed, the wooded hills upheld an eager city, third in postal importance in the great State of Pennsylvania. It rose in a night, blazed forth for a brief season, and then went out. Perhaps there was a touch of destiny in the name.

It was just after the war, when good names were scarce, and the new town was allowed to name itself. A natural pit or hole in the rocks on the summit of a neighboring mountain, furnished material for a title, and the town adopted the suggestion.

The day on which McWilliams admitted to his inner consciousness that he was down on his luck was January 23, 1866. It was something of a comfort to him even in that condition, to know that fortune had deigned to notice him.

He had drifted in on that stream of men fresh from the trenches of the hostile South, and, in common with his neighbors, had invested his savings in what was then mere speculation.

He had leased a small tract of land on the hillside above the town, and started to drill for oil. This was in the early summer, or spring, of 1865.

Developments were so uniformly successful that McWilliams was looked upon as a lucky fellow and future oil prince. From the awakening of this sentiment I date the beginning of McWilliams' ill luck, for at this time he was shamefully imposed upon by a young woman of Oil City.

The young woman was good enough in her way, but her way, unfortunately, was a little out of the orthodox line. Personally and so far as any one knew, she stood without reproach, but her ideas of life, I grieve to say, were somewhat warped. She was anxious (but, for the sake of euphonism, let us say ambitious) to get a husband.

It would have been an easy matter for her to get married had she cared less for social distinction and a future free from trades-people's ills, but a praiseworthy desire to shine as the wife of an oil prince caused her to throw a drag net over the unsuspecting head of McWilliams.

This net took the shape of a plausible argument to the effect that McWilliams' casual meetings with the young woman were compromising in their tendency, and that, unless McWilliams was enough in earnest to clear her name of reproach, he should leave the country until the society of Oil City forgot him.

This was arrant humbug, as every liberal minded woman in the oil country will attest; but, as I have said, McWilliams was easily imposed upon.

Like a thorough going oil man he refused to let anything stand between him and the oil well of his dreams, and in a straightforward, honest sort of way, he married her.

Mrs. McWilliams ought to have been happy; but if the unsolicited testimony of disinterested witnesses may be allowed as evidence, it would seem that she was in a state of constant dissatisfaction and misery.

With a wariness truly Scotch in its origin and tendency, McWilliams refused to launch into extravagance in living until the capacity of the Pithole lease should be known.

This vexed Mrs. McWilliams beyond endurance; and it came to pass early in the winter, when the lease failed to produce anything but the driest kind of dry wells, that the indignant wife, declaring that McWilliams had failed in his duty toward her, left the oil country to try her fortunes elsewhere.

After paying his wife's debts, McWilliams—now penniless—seated himself on a stump on the hillside above Pithole and admitted to himself, with a dull feeling of satisfaction, that he was down on his luck.

McWilliams' luck had deserted him at last! The hopeful man had waited a long time for fortune's wheel to stop in front of him; and now that it had stopped a flying spoke had knocked him down.

With a Scotch slowness to wrath—after picking himself up and seating himself on the stump above the town—McWilliams observed that his luck had treated him cruelly.

Sitting there, watching the busy wells around him, the puffs of steam that floated away like snowy banners from panting engines; hearing the rattle of machinery and the clang of busy hammers, and noting with sullen brow the prosperity of hundreds of men beside him, McWilliams gave reign to his swelling temper and with sturdy arm aimed blows at fate.

The process of it was altogether unrecognized by McWilliams. This revolt at fate was in another form, but a renunciation of religion, and the ultimate issue was neither argued with nor questioned.

"Well," said he, "I guess I'm pretty low down now; luck's all gone to thunder, and no mistake. Luck? To the devil with luck! Who said anything about luck? There is no such thing. Hard work makes it—hard, steady, pounding work."

The debate within him sent out no bulletins to the public for several minutes. At length, when the sun suffused his thoughtful eyes with golden radiance from the western hilltops, McWilliams roused himself angrily and strode down to the town.

Fate must have paused in surprise to see its grandchild, Luck, so grievously flaunted by a hitherto harmless slave. She must have respected him then, for he was beyond her power. He had taken his destiny into his own hands.

The morning of the 29th day of January, 1866, saw McWilliams at work with a shovel on the edge of his lease. He was digging a water well.

"Most likely find quicksand or a coal bed here," he muttered grimly. "Drilled for oil and found salt water on the upper edge. Things seem to go by contraries with me."

Luck having no connection with this well, neither quicksand nor coals were found, but water, pure, fresh spring water, in volume sufficient to supply half the town.

Later in the day McWilliams put into the well a box pump of his own manufacture, and with the help of a dozen barrels and a few lengths of two-inch iron pipe established the McWilliams Water Works.

McWilliams was pretty low down on his luck at this time; for he was less than a hewer of wood—he was a drawer of water. In Pithole in 1865–66 the drawing of water was much more profitable than it had been in ancient Palestine.

In dry months water retailed at ten cents per drink and one dollar per bucket; but in the closing days of January sixty cents per barrel was the ruling price.

Even in the dry months there was little danger of a water famine, for, as the price of drinking water increased, the demand fell off to such an extent that O'Rielly, a saloon keeper who had come to Pithole with a keg of liquor on his back and thirteen cracked glasses in his pockets, was enabled to buy a diamond pin as big as a walnut and to run as the popular candidate for Mayor.

At the time when McWilliams' broad back began to heave up and down with the motion of the pump handle, water was cheap enough to drink, and yet not too expensive for an occasional cleaning of soiled linen; so that at the end of the first day's pumping McWilliams considered himself justified in looking forward to the time when he might put in a boiler and a steam pump.

At the close of the second day McWilliams was so well satisfied with his defiance of fate, fortune and luck that he determined to quit his boarding place, and, for the sake of economy, take up his residence in an abandoned engine house on his lease. This engine house was all that remained of his attempt to strike oil; the derrick, boiler, engine and other machinery having been sold to pay his quondam wife's debts.

The fourth day of February, 1866, will long be remembered by men that drill for crude petroleum. It was on this day that McWilliams, leaving his pump in charge of an indigent negro, set off for Oil City to buy machinery for his new enterprise.

It was late in the afternoon when, on his return, he came in sight of the hills of Pithole. A towering cloud of smoke hung over the city.

The Tremont House, the Syracuse House, the United States Hotel, the Buffalo House and the Chautauqua livery stables were great blocks of fire.

McWilliams hastened forward. His first thoughts were for his pumps and water barrels. Of course, in their eagerness to subdue the fire the citizens would seize upon his pump and use all the water without a thought of remuneration.

Panting and breathless, he looked eagerly at the burning buildings. Only a dozen or so of frantic men seemed to be near them, and no water was being thrown on them. The well must have gone dry! After a few moments he rose and resolutely pushed on toward his lease. He would know the worst.

But what was this, as he climbed a slight rise of ground? Three thousand men were crowded upon the lease. Something unusual had occurred. It could not have been that the negro had fallen into a quicksand and disappeared; no one cared about a white man's life, much less a negro's. What was it—what was fate's revenge?

The crowd pressed like madmen about the pump. Greasy drillers, with strong, rude motions, elbowed aside less stalwart men, and trod on the toes of finely dressed speculators from the East. Small men went down like straws in the crush and were carried out half strangled. Employer fought with workman for places at the pump.

"What new misfortune is this?" cried McWilliams as a man dashed past him.

"They pumped your well dry and—"

The runner was gone before the sentence could be finished.

The well had gone dry! This was enough to start with. What next? McWilliams forced his way into the crowd with fierce energy. Men recognized him and gave him room.

The pump handle was flying up and down like a runaway walking beam. Then McWilliams, crowding forward, suddenly stopped. Something there—there where his eyes were chained—sent the blood back upon his heart, and left his cheeks and lips like ashes. It was oil!

McWilliams' luck had run on to its utmost limit; it had done its worst, and here was the result. McWilliams had pumped for water and found oil! The first of the wonderful surface wells of Pithole had been struck.

Did McWilliams care? No; for in that trying moment when the sun threw the radiance of that sparkling stream of oil into his staring eyes, the Scotch perseverance held its own. He had done with fate and luck forever.

"'Fore God, Massa," shouted the negro, as he caught sight of McWilliams in the crowd, "I'se glad to see you. I pump dis yer ting for de fire, an' de mo' dey frows on de mo' de fire burns."

The negro was right. It will be remembered that the discovery of the famous surface wells was due to the fire on Holmden street. In speechless amazement the firemen saw streams of water turn to fire and go blazing heavenward. When it became known that the water well on the hillside was belching forth a torrent of oil, the fire lost all attraction except to the hotel proprietors and persons financially interested. For a full description of the scene I cheerfully refer the reader to the flowing English of the Pithole Record of February 5, 1866.

McWilliams received this gift of fortune with sullen thankfulness; much in the same spirit as that in which an angry, wilful child accepts a favor that it has fought for. He took what was given; but there was no concession in word or thought. It was a part of his resolution to take things as they come—he had already learned to part with them as they go which was much the harder.

I need not detail the events following the discovery of the Pithole surface wells. Having served their purpose these wells fell away to nothing. They were but the heralds of that greater fall, in which Pithole itself went down into material oblivion. Flower and fern bloom and wave over its ruins now.

McWilliams sold his lease when prices sat on the very summit of their wild glory, and following the line of development into other fields bought cautiously and wisely. He gained the reputation of being a careful operator—a man who, having nothing to chance, pounded away until success, through sheer weariness, gave up her store of wealth. Fortune tried to play with him once or twice, but gave up in despair. Nothing could withstand the careful attention to detail with which he hammered away at his own chosen ideas.

Mrs. McWilliams returned with the intention of setting up a brilliant establishment. She went away again with a check for five thousand dollars in her pocket. In exchange she had given a written promise never to return. As I have suggested elsewhere, it was an easy thing to impose upon McWilliams. A month afterward she was lost in a storm, while on her way to Europe.

* * * * * * * * * * * *

Last Winter, while standing as an idle visitor in the correspondents' gallery in the House of Representatives at Washington, I heard a strong, steady, familiar voice deliver a speech on the tariff question. The honorable member went at his subject hammer and tongs, and by his dogged earnestness claimed the close attention of the whole House. Something in his gesture, in a forgetful moment, spun me back to the oil regions. It was McWilliams!

As he finished his speech he saw me and hastened up stairs to meet me. His grip was stronger and even more persistent than his speech.

"How's your luck, McWilliams?" I asked, when the first explosions of good-will on both sides were over.

He laughed.

"Oh, hang the luck," said he. "I never think of it. All the luck there is in life is that which you can pound out with your fist. It's hard work and plenty of it. But come down to Willard's; my wife will be delighted to see you."

"Your wife?"

"Yes; not the first one—she's in the bottom of the sea, poor thing—but Miss Child; she kept the school at Oil City, you know."

"What, the little girl from New England."

"The same."

"You must have had luck with you there, McWilliams."

"No; not exactly. She said it wasn't luck; but that I kept at it so persistently, so perseveringly, she had to marry me. But come—come along."

And I went.

SO SAY WE ALL.

We think it is unwise on the part of New Jersey to put any stumbling blocks to the entrance of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. The more railroads we have the better will it be for the people of the State. It will be a strong competitor to the Pennsylvania road, which seems to be going on the plan that it controlled everything in New Jersey exclusively to its own interests—everything must go as it says. Down with such monopolists and let the Baltimore and Ohio go through with bells on, say we.—Dover Index.

THE WASTE OF WHISTLING.

The nuisance of the steam whistle in populated neighborhoods has been frequently mentioned, says the Scientific American, and in some localities municipal ordinances and railway managements have restricted its use. But it is seldom that the cost, expense and waste of the steam whistle is mentioned. And yet the blowing off of steam through locomotive whistles alone must entail an enormous waste of fuel. Steamboat whistles and the utterly useless stationary engine whistles must make, in the aggregate, an enormous waste to the purchasers of fuel for steam boilers. From recent reports it is seen that there are 1,940 grade crossings in the two States of New Hampshire and Connecticut. Probably not less than an average of twelve trains cross these roads daily; at each a locomotive whistles under a pressure of about 110 to 120 pounds the square inch. The aggregate amount of steam thus blown off into noise is very great.

MR. MORRISON'S MEASURE.

In Mr. Morrison's bill introduced in the House recently the following reductions are found in earthenware:

China, porcelain, parian, and bisque, earthen, stone and crockery ware, including plaques, ornaments, charms, vases and statuettes, painted, printed or gilded, or otherwise decorated or ornamented in any manner, 50 per centum ad valorem.

China, porcelain, parian and bisque ware, plain white, and not ornamented or decorated in any manner, 45 per centum ad valorem.

All other earthen, stone and crockery ware, white, glazed or edged, composed of earthy or mineral substances, not specially enumerated or provided for in this act or the act of March 3d, 1883, 45 per centum ad valorem.

It is calculated that Mr. Morrison's bill will make an aggregate reduction of $20,000,000 on the basis of last year's importations.

In the metals pig-iron is reduced from $6 72 to $5 60 per ton. There is a slight reduction on bar and rolled iron. Heavy steel and iron rails are reduced from $17 to $12 50 per ton. Small rails, weighing less than 25 pounds per yard, are reduced from $20 80 per ton to $15. There is also some reduction in lead and copper.

The principal reductions on cotton goods are in yarns and the coarser cloths; the finer cloths are untouched.

The only alteration on wools is in the third class or coarser wools, for which there are at present two rates—2½ cents per pound on those which cost 12 cents or under 5 cents per pound above 12 cents. The two classes are amalgamated at a common duty of 2 8 10 cents per pound. The principal object of this amalgamation is to prevent the trouble and litigation which at present arises from the endeavors of importers to get the higher-priced articles passed through at the lower rates.

Talk about women being flighty! Look at bank cashiers.

Rutgers College (the New Jersey State Scientific College)
New Brunswick, N. J., July 7, 1885.

Analyses and careful examinations of Cleveland's Superior and Royal Baking Powders enable us to bear testimony to the superiority of Cleveland's. It yields more carbonic acid gas than the Royal, and contains no ammonia salts.

Cleveland's Baking Powder is made of pure substances and is absolutely free from any kind of adulteration. We endorse it most cordially as an honest and efficient article, and one that will give entirely satisfactory results.

New Bedford, June 1, 1883.
DR. J. C. AYER & CO.—Twenty years ago I was a harpooner in the North Pacific, when five others of the crew and myself were laid up with scurvy. Our bodies were bloated, gums swollen and bleeding, teeth loose, purple blotches all over us, and our breath seemed rotten. Taking it by and large we were pretty badly off. All our lime-juice was accidentally destroyed, but the captain had a couple dozen bottles of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA and gave us that. We recovered on it quicker than I have ever seen men brought about by any other treatment for Scurvy, and I've seen a good deal of it. Seeing no mention in your Almanac of your Sarsaparilla being good for scurvy, I thought you ought to know of this, and so send you the facts.
Respectfully yours, RALPH V. WINGATE.
The Trooper's Experience.
Masern, Basutoland (S. Africa), March 7, 1883.
DR. J. C. AYER & CO.—Gentlemen: I have much pleasure in testifying to the great value of your Sarsaparilla. We have been stationed here for over two years, during which time we had to live in tents. Being under canvas for such a time brought on what is called in this country "veldt-sores." I had those sores for some time. I was advised to take your Sarsaparilla, two bottles of which made my sores disappear rapidly, and I am now quite well.
Yours truly, T. E. BODEN,
Trooper, Cape Mounted Riflemen.
Ayer's Sarsaparilla
Is the only thoroughly effective blood-purifier, the only medicine that eradicates the poisons of Scrofula, Mercury, and Contagious Disease from the system.

MISCELLANEOUS READING

PUT TO THE TEST.

"Captain Morton is a fine man, mother. How good, how kind he has been to you ever since we came aboard the ship."

"That is true, Mabel, but at my time in life I can easily guess the cause of the interest he takes in your old bed-ridden mother."

And Mrs. Barton looked significantly at her young daughter, who was a beautiful, grateful girl of seventeen, with gentle dove-like eyes and brown hair.

Mabel, blushing, assured her mother that she was mistaken.

"He feels very sorry for you, she added, "and would do just as much for you if I were not here."

The old lady's eyebrows went up under her nightcap.

"I like him much better than I do Mr. Tomtit," continued Mabel earnestly.

"Mr. Tomtit, my dear, is a man of fortune, having five hundred and five thousand dollars of his own, and to inherit twice as much from his father when he dies. The captain of this ship, on the contrary, has no fortune—does not even own a share in this vessel. Granted he is a good man. Well, so is Tomtit. My dear, it will be the happiest moment of my life to see you take kindly to Tomtit."

"There is nothing to take to," answered Mabel. "I mean there is nothing about him to claim attention or interest."

"Nothing about Mr. Tomtit? I can assure you he is a man that women like. It is natural I should wish to see you comfortably settled. Tomtit admires you; there can be no doubt about that. Try, on your part, to encourage Tomtit."

Mabel contrived to change the subject. She had never liked Mr. Tomtit. Ever since this person had made the acquaintance of Mrs. Barton and daughter, a few months previously, in Sidney, Australia, where the two had resided for years, the mother had sounded his praises in the ear of her child. In fact it almost seemed to her that she heard little else.

It was Tomtit here, and Tomtit there, until she became heartily tired of the name.

Still, she would not say anything to hurt the feelings of her widowed mother who had been an invalid ever since her husband died.

Mrs. Barton and her daughter were now passengers aboard the homeward bound ship, Radcliff, of New York, Capt. Harry Morton, master.

This Morton was a good-looking stalwart young fellow, and as frank as the open day.

There was a marked contrast between his personal appearance and that of Tomtit.

The latter was small, slender and elegant, always fashionably dressed, in a shining tall hat, etc., and carrying a slender little cane, with which he lightly tapped the deck when walking to and fro.

As Mrs. Barton had said, he was generally liked by young women, many of whom would have been pleased to become his wife.

Mabel, however, was an exception.

"It is no use," she would say to herself. "I can never like Tomtit. I never see his round smooth face, with its two flat black eyes, without a feeling of abhorrence and repugnance rising within me."

It had so happened that Mr. Tomtit, having business in New York, was a fellow-passenger with Mabel and her mother.

He was very attentive to the young girl, but thus far she had given him but little encouragement.

He scarcely ever spoke to her mother, and when he inquired after her health, Mabel could perceive, in spite of all his efforts to seem otherwise, that he was not at all interested in her case.

It was indeed a melancholy one. A week after sailing, Mrs. Barton had been struck with partial paralysis of both limbs, so that she could no longer walk.

The young captain of the ship had been constant in his efforts to do everything for her comfort.

A son could not have been more kind than he in his treatment of the old lady.

Mabel liked him much.

In her own heart she felt a startling conviction that she loved him.

But her mother, as shown, wanted her to have Tomtit.

She had always been an obedient child. Now her mother's sad condition carried great weight with her wishes regarding Tomtit.

She begged and pleaded with her daughter, and at last won her consent to try and encourage the young man.

The result was that in a few weeks young Tomtit, dropping gracefully on one knee, proposed.

"I will try," was Mabel's answer to his appeal, with the understanding that, if I change my mind, you will not be angry."

"Not in the least," he answered, smiling, laying all this to the natural coyness of a maiden.

Then something was said about married life, mothers-in-law, etc., in the course of which young Tomtit made a "clean breast of it," and acknowledged that he did not approve of a mother living with the married couple.

"You will like my mother," Mabel said.

"Well—well—yes; but really now you will give in to me in this, dear Miss Barton. Your mother has relations, I believe, in New York. She can live with them. Young folks like to see as little as possible of the 'old people,' you know," he added, laughing.

Mabel shuddered inwardly. When she told her mother the latter made light of it.

"It is the way with the young," she said. "I shall live with my sister. Don't fail to tell him that, my dear."

"But Captain Morton would not have acted so."

"Hush! You must not speak of him now. Captain Morton's kindness to me has all been on your account, not mine."

"You are mistaken, mother."

A few hours later a terrific gale struck the ship.

The wind howled and shrieked, hurling the craft almost on her beam-ends, while the foam and the spray were whirled in great white sheets to her topsail yards.

There was to leeward an island, toward which she was driven in spite of all the efforts of the captain to keep her away from it.

There was no help for it—the vessel was doomed to strike.

When she was close to the rocks of the island shore, Morton gave orders for the masts to be cut down.

This was done. The three masts toppled over with a crash, and were cut clear.

Axe in hand, his sleeves rolled up over his brawny arms, his huge muscular chest heaving with his exertions, the young captain seemed to do the work of three men.

His cool determined manner, his clear cheery voice inspired confidence.

The ship struck bottom in shallow water before she reached the rocks.

The shock was so great that most of the men were thrown from their feet.

The snapping and splitting of timbers was heard as the wreck rolled and thumped along among the heavy seas, which were now making a clean breach over her, amidships.

"Down boats!" ordered Morton. "Help the passengers in first!"

He sprang into the cabin.

The room occupied by Mrs. Barton and her daughter was half flooded with water.

Mabel, who sat with her arms about her mother, up to her knees in water, uttered a cry of joy as Morton burst into the apartment.

"Can I do anything for you, Miss Mabel?" faltered Mr. Tomtit, peering down from the cabin stairs.

At that moment the crash of the bulwarks to starboard, as they were broken in, was heard.

With much difficulty he got her into the boat, which was now tossing wildly.

Tomtit was too busy holding on with both hands to the thwarts to afford any assistance.

Ordering a couple of sailors into the boat to watch over the young girl and save her from being washed from her place, Morton, saying he would now go to bring Mrs. Barton up, hurried to the cabin.

He had scarcely entered it, when, as the ship made a violent plunge, a few of the beams fell in, barring his further progress.

He ran back to procure an axe.

At the same moment a loud crackling sound warned him that the ship would part amidships and go to pieces.

The tossing boat was also in danger of being stove in.

In fact, the quarter boat had already been smashed by lowering, so that the long boat, now alongside, was the only one remaining.

Morton's decision was quickly taken.

To wait until Mrs. Barton could be got out from the debris of timbers about her berth, and brought up, would be to ensure the destruction of every person aboard, for, by that time, the ship would have gone to pieces.

The young captain therefore resolved not to wait—at least, not to keep the others waiting.

He then ordered all the sailors into the boat.

When they were there, he said:

"Now, lads, pull for shore. There is a sand beach yonder, where you may be able to land in safety."

"Come on, captain!" cried the mate.

"No, my duty is here. I will not leave the craft while there is a human being aboard."

"My mother! My poor mother!" wailed Mabel, wringing her hands. "I will not forsake her."

And she tried to get to the deck.

The mate gently restrained her.

"It is for the best, Miss Barton," cried Morton. "I am going to stay in order that I can try and save your mother. Good-bye."

"Mr. Tomtit will stay and help you," cried Mabel.

"Really," gasped Tomtit, "I—I don't think I would be of any use. For God's sake, let us start now before we are all drowned."

With a blow of his axe Morton severed the warp, and the boat in a moment was whirled away from the ship.

The captain rushed into the cabin.

He worked with the strength of a young lion, with the water up to his hips.

Timber after timber gave way beneath his vigorous blows, until at last he forced a passage to the invalid's berth.

Just then an ominous sound reached him.

It was the grinding, snapping noise of the vessel as her timbers were giving away amidships.

Morton realized that he would not have time to drag Mrs. Barton on deck.

He carried her into the cabin, however, attached a life-preserver to her, and then secured her and himself to a large beam.

He had scarcely done so when, with a thundering crash, the ship parted, breaking up.

Amid the debris of whirling timbers, ropes, and spars, Morton struggled with his charge—strove to keep her head above water.

At last the waves washed both, half senseless, upon the beach, where they were picked up by those who had safely reached the shore in the boat.

Mrs. Barton and her daughter were very grateful to Morton for his noble conduct.

"To think of his risking his life, and taking so much trouble for an old, useless, paralytic woman like myself!" said Mabel's mother to her child, with tears in her eyes.

"How different his conduct from Tomtit's," said Mabel. "Tomtit thought only of himself—was, in fact, too frightened to think of anyone else. He wanted the men to pull ashore and leave you and the rest of us in the lurch. After that, mother, I hope—"

"But, my child, he is rich. Surely you will not refuse to marry him?"

"I can't marry so selfish a person," answered Mabel. "Think of it, mother—think of his conduct to-day."

"It was bad, but—. Well, well, child, do as you like."

Having obtained this permission, Mabel hastened to inform Tomtit that she had changed her mind and would never be his wife.

A few days later the castaways were picked up by a vessel bound to Boston. Before it arrived there Mabel was the promised wife of Captain Morton.

And they were married a few months later.

The captain, who had some money saved, built a house, and insisted on Mrs. Barton always making her home with her daughter.

The three are very happy together. Morton is now a wealthy shipowner, and Mrs. Barton has many reasons for feeling thankful that her daughter had married him instead of Tomtit. The latter proved to be a worthless adventurer and gambler whose stories of riches and the prospective fortune he was heir to was a mere fabrication.

THE time to advertise is when you have something to sell. If you haven't anything to sell, don't advertise. There is no money in it.

THE man of wealth who invests his capital in industries that give employment and a means of livelihood to many of his fellow-men, is a greater benefactor than he who ties up his wealth in bonds and stocks or hoards it in his coffers.

A GERMAN of unspeakable height and corpulence was one day walking through the streets of Berlin, when a poor woman accosted him and begged for alms. He refused her. "Well," said she, "I beg you at least to give me one of your left-off shoes." "What would you do with it?" "Why, make it into a cradle for my child."

NOT ALL TINSEL.

A great potpourri of sounds by the brass band. The white-gloved attaches of Peckin and Piebald's cique drove up at either side of the entrance. The silken curtains parted and a young woman in a cloudy mass of gauze bespangled skirts bounded into the ring. Her pretty face wreathed in smiles as she curtsied and kissed her hands to the applauding audience. Then she vaulted upon the bare back of the horse that stood proudly arching its glossy neck as if aware of the honor of carrying such a dainty, charming little figure as that of the young but daring equestrienne, Lola Fay.

Close to the ring curb sat a man whose eyes followed with wistful intentness every motion of horse and rider. A man counting at least thirty years; not handsome, but with an honest ruggedness of purpose shining from out his gray eyes and showing itself in the square-cut chin and thin, firm lips—a man whose hands had been soiled and roughened by hard work, but whose heart was as yet free from guile. Once or twice, as the intrepid rider executed some daring feat, a look of anxiety, mingled with passionate yearning, swept across the man's face, and the veins of his hands stood out like whipcords, as clenching them he muttered beneath his breath:

"My God! I cannot bear it!"

As he rose and sought to make his way out, cries of "sit down! Down in front!" greeted him. They reached the ears of the young equestrienne and caused her to glance inquiringly in their direction. A faint exclamation escaped her lips. She lost her balance, thereby missing the paper hoop through which she was to jump.

In a moment all was confusion. The man, at the sight of the rider's swaying figure, had sprung over the ring curb into the ring. The audience saw him grasp the little form of the circus girl from beneath the horse's hoofs; saw him stagger back and fall as the frightened horse kicked out wildly. Then a woman's agonizing scream cut the air with a heartrending sound and sharp and shrill echoed the words: "My God! I have killed him!" as Lola Fay threw herself upon the ground and sought to raise his senseless body in her arms.

* * * * * * *

Some eighteen months previous to the opening of my story the little village of Quietton was awakened into a decided state of excitement by flaming posters of the advent of a circus within their midst. These honest but narrow-minded villagers were mostly of the opinion that it was encouraging the devil to allow a show within their precinct. Nevertheless, the majority were inclined to learn more of this wickedness, doubtless the better to enable them to depict its pitfalls.

The eventful day arrived, and Quietton was crowded to overflowing with incoming visitors and the show folk. It was rather a feeling of doubting his approval that kindly Mrs. Sturdy informed her son John that she had let her spare room to two of the circus folks, adding:

"Lor, John, I couldn't help it; they were so friendly like. Not a bit what you'd think. Real ladies, I'd of said, if I hadn't of known 'em for the show folks."

"Well, mother, as it's only for a night, there's not much harm done anyway; but I've always heard that such folks gave a sight of trouble, and—" the rest of the sentence died upon John's lips as a young girl tripped into the room with:

"Oh! could you please tell me the time? My watch has stopped," holding out a tiny gold repeater.

Nothing like this dainty bit of humanity had ever crossed John Sturdy's path. Was it her delicate, creamy skin, or the soft lustre of her deep hazel eyes? Did the charm lay in the grace of her tiny figure or in her childlike, appealing ways? He could not have told, but from that moment John Sturdy loved this young circus girl with all the strength and passion of his great, noble heart. Not that he was aware that the new sensation he felt was love, at least not until they brought her home that night, pale and weak from a broken arm, and he rode the old mare as he had never done before to the neighboring town for a doctor.

For hours John lay awake thinking of the little sufferer beneath his roof. If it had only happened to him instead of her. If she would only let him, he would take her from a life in which she ran such risks. Would the village rise in horror at his mating with a circus girl. The grandson of a minister. He laughed softly to himself. The villagers and his ancestors would never trouble him if he could but win her. Then with bitterness he thought. What have I to offer? A great clumsy fellow. I am not worthy of her. She is far too good for me. And his mother? He was her only child, and if he were happy she would be content, he knew.

Early next morning the circus left Quietton, but Lola remained behind. She cried a little at parting from her sister, whose care she had been from a child. In fact, the elder sister was almost like a mother to the younger; even her marriage had not weakened her affection for Lola. It had only given the spoilt girl a kind brother. Mrs. Sturdy was to receive a weekly stipend for Lola's board, which John longed to refuse to take, but did not see how he could under the circumstances. It was a novelty to Lola, this quiet life. She enjoyed lying upon the big chintz covered lounge and gazing out at the green fields and the quaint old fashioned garden of the cottage. And then the knowledge that she could make John Sturdy, such a great, powerful fellow, tremble at her very touch, amused her. How he waited upon her, never tiring even when she became a trifle exacting and perhaps a bit cross. He had always an excuse for her. Her arm pained her, or it was lonesome for her. Till his mother one day, taking his honest face between her hands, said:

"John, John, my son, I am afraid you are laying up trouble for yourself. The Lord give you strength." Tenderly kissing the wrinkled face he answered:

"You will love her, mother, for my sake and—and her own."

Lola's arm mended rapidly and one evening she suddenly announced her intention of leaving Quietton to join her sister, who was still traveling with the circus. Swinging gracefully to and fro on the little whitewashed gate at the end of the lane that led to the cottage, she leveled this shaft at John, who stood at her side, a wealth of intense feeling darkening his eyes.

"Going away!" he gasped; "no,—oh, Lola! I cannot spare you; stay—stay and be my wife. I love you so I will do anything in the world to make you happy. You remember Hawthorn farm, the pretty place you said you liked so much? We will live there. Oh, Lola, my darling! is it so hard to love me just a little?" Holding out his arms yearningly, yet not offering to touch this bit of a girl he could have crushed in his strong grasp, he awaited her words.

Glancing shyly from under her dark lashes, while a half smile quivered athwart her rosy lips, she answered:

"Do you really love me so much? It's nice to be petted, and Hawthorn Farm is a real pretty place, but it must have a bow window and a lovely flower garden." At this he drew her towards him and kissed her so passionately that, perhaps a little awed by this strong man's deep love for her, she said hurriedly:

"I am afraid I do not love you enough, and perhaps I shall not make you happy."

"I am willing to risk it," he murmured fondly, as he again clasped her in his arms.

Just a month from that day Lola became Mrs. John Sturdy and they went to live at Hawthorn Farm, where the bow window and everything the young wife had expressed a desire for awaited her.

For a few months not a cloud dimmed the horizon of this happy pair. Lola was pleased with her newly acquired dignity and her power over her stalwart husband. Then the novelty began to wear off and the young wife waxed restless and John's heart ached with the fear that she was growing to feel like a bird that had been deprived of its liberty. Once when she had driven with him to the neighboring town, he noted the quick color dyeing her cheeks as they passed a large circus poster and with what eager eyes she scanned the red letters, and he made up his mind when the circus arrived to visit it with her. But unfortunately he was obliged to be away that day on business and it was not until late in the evening that he returned to find an empty home and a few hastily written words, bidding him farewell. His wife had gone back to the circus. She bade him get a divorce, that she was not worthy of his love, for she cared more for the old life than she did for him.

Not a word to any one did the wronged husband say concerning his wife, except that she had gone on a visit to her sister, and that he intended following her as soon as he could put things in order.

His mother suspected, but held her peace, although the sight of her son's face came nigh to break her heart. Then he went away, and only a sorrowing mother knew how he was traveling from town to town, following the fortunes of his wife, yet never seeking to speak to her, or even enter the circus to whose company she belonged, just guarding and watching over her in every way possible without her knowledge. Lola's sister, happy in the knowledge that her young charge was well provided for when she gave her into John Sturdy's loving hands, had with her husband joined a circus en route for California some two months previous, and consequently knew nothing of Mrs. John Sturdy's actions, or I am afraid the little culprit would have been taken severely to task. Only once during the year that John followed in his wife's wake did he witness a performance, and what then took place you have already learned.

* * * * * * *

A pretty, sunny room with a bow window opening upon a perfect bouquet of a garden. A tiny mite of some two summers being tossed in the air by papa's strong arms. As the little girl gleefully claps her dimpled hands a voice exclaims:

"Oh, John! how you do spoil baby."

Then two pretty white arms clasp John's broad shoulders, and a soft cheek lays itself caressingly against his rougher one, as he, seating both mamma and baby upon his knee, answers:

"Why, now can I help it, Lola, when she is the image of you?"

With a smile that fails to hide the tears clinging to the wife's dark lashes she suddenly raises her husband's hand to her lips, murmuring passionately:

"Oh, John! to think I never knew how much I loved you until I thought you were lying dead at my feet. The old life that I fled to had ceased to exist for me. I soon learned, and if I had not been ashamed I should have begged my husband to take me back to his heart long before that dreadful night when I thought I had lost him forever. I was weak and frivolous, but not quite all tinsel." And as John gathered his treasures close within his arms he answered:

"Tinsel! not a bit of it, little woman genuine gold leaf to the core."

HAD THE WRONG HAND.

The son of a prominent divine went out to Dakota with the intention of going into business, but returned in very low circumstances financially, having walked about half the distance.

"Why, I am surprised, my son," said his father; "I thought there were great opportunities for making money in the Territories. Didn't you strike a chance?"

"Well, yes, in a measure; but the fact is, father, I didn't hold the right kind of a hand. It was good enough, so I bet all I had on it; but the other fellow's was better and he raked in the pot."

The next Sunday the minister preached on "The Crying Need of Missionaries in the West."

IN THE "HORNETS' NEST" AT SHILOH.

From Colonel Lockett's article accompanying General Buell's account of Shiloh in the March Century we take the following: "I witnessed the various bloody and unsuccessful attacks on the 'hornets' nest.' During one of the dreadful repulses of our forces, General Bragg directed me to ride forward to the central regiment of a brigade of troops that was recoiling across an open field, to take its colors and carry them forward. 'The flag must not go back again,' he said. Obeying the order, I dashed through the line of battle, seized the colors from the color-bearer, and said to him, 'General Bragg says these colors must not go to the rear.' While talking to him the color-sergeant was shot down. A moment or two afterwards I was almost alone on horseback in the open field between the two lines of battle. An officer came up to me with a bullet-hole in each cheek, the blood streaming from his mouth, and asked, 'What are you doing with my colors, sir?' 'I am obeying General Bragg's orders, sir, to hold them where they are,' was my reply. 'Let me have them,' he said. 'If any man but my color-bearer carries these colors, I am the man. Tell General Bragg I will see that these colors are in the right place. But he must attack this position in flank; we can never carry it alone from the front.' It was Colonel Allen, afterwards Governor Allen of Louisiana. I returned, miraculously preserved, to General Bragg, and reported Colonel Allen's words. I then carried an order to the same troops, giving the order I think to General Gibson, to fall back to the fence in the rear and reorganize. This was done, and then General Bragg dispatched me to the right, and Colonel Frank Gardner (afterwards Major-General) to the left, to inform the brigade and division commanders on either side that a combined movement would be made on the front and flanks of that position. The movements were made, and Prentiss was captured."

A SHREWD BOY.

A gentleman who was visiting one of the public schools in a Texas town asked a bright looking boy:

"What profit is there in the study of ancient history?"

"About fifty cents, I reckon," was the reply.

"What?"

"Well, the teacher makes us buy the books of him, and we have to pay one dollar. I think he gets them for fifty cents apiece; so he has a clear profit of fifty cents, according to my calculation."

The boy went home at recess, hence he could not comply with the request of the teacher to stay in after school.

THE PREACHER CORRECTED.

"Well, Mr. Talmage is certainly wrong for once," said Mrs. Scaggs, looking up from reading that gentleman's last Sunday's sermon.

"How so, my dear?" asked her husband.

"Why he says there are no perfect men."

"And you think you found one when you married me, I suppose," beamed Mr. Scaggs.

"Indeed I don't," was the quick reply. "But I know there was a perfect man once, and his name was Mark."

"Mark," repeated Mr. Scaggs in astonishment.

"Yes, Mark, for the Bible distinctly speaks of 'Mark, the perfect man.'"

THE MOTHERLY CARE OF SOME FISHES.

Seth Green in the American Agriculturist for March, says of the black bass in this section of the country, cast their spawn principally during the month of June. They prepare their nests on a rocky bottom, and after the spawn has been cast and impregnated, the female stands guard over them during the hatching period, which is usually from five to seven days, varying according to the temperature of the water. After they are hatched, the young fry are about as helpless as young robins, hence the mother stays with them until they have learned to feed, and then the brood scatter, and the family ties are severed forever. The black bass is a very plucky and gamy fish, and when in charge of the little ones is very ferocious, and will dart at all intruders who venture near, and unless they make haste to get out of the way, some one is very liable to get hurt. The brook trout is considered a much more gentle fish, lives in beautiful little streams, and is much more handsome to look upon, but for all that, they are cannibals in their nature, and would not hesitate to devour their own spawn or young fry, if they felt the need of them. In all waters suitable for them, the black bass increase very rapidly, forty or fifty mature fishes being sufficient to stock any waters in the course of a few years. The reason of this is because of the protection given their young.

A BOY WHO KNOWS HOW TO DO IT.

The other morning a boy about fourteen years of age knocked at the door of a house on Fifth street and asked the woman if she didn't want the snow cleaned off the walk.

"How much?" she cautiously inquired.

"Thirty cents."

"I won't pay it. If you want to do the work for ten cents you can go ahead."

He leaned on the handle of his snow shovel and looked thoughtful and she finally queried:

"Well, what do you say?"

"It's just as that woman around the corner told me, he replied. I shoveled off her snow and she gave me fifty cents. I told her I was coming to ask you and she said—"

"I don't know her. What business is it to her."

"Yes, but—"

"What did she say?"

"She said I'd get left. She said that any woman who wore a plush sacque and passed it off for a three-hundred-dollar sealskin would be mean enough to go out nights and shovel her own snow."

"Boy!" whispered the woman as she turned white clear around her neck. "I want you to clean off the snow. When you are through I'll give you a silver dollar, and I want you to go around and tell that woman that any one who buys and wears dollar store jewelry and fourteen-shilling shoes hasn't got sense enough to fall off a box-tailed car."

SAW HIM WRITE IT.

A man came to Little Rock several days ago for the purpose of starting a daily newspaper, but as he lost all his money under such sounds as "card 21," and "ace of spades," he was forced to sell his jewelry. At last he was driven to such an extremity that he offered to sell Bismarck's autograph. He said that he would take ten dollars for the card which bore his signature. He hated to part with it, but he saw no other chance of getting money.

"I don't care for Bismarck's signature," said a gentleman, "for I believe in patronizing home institutions. Now, I'll tell you what I'll do. I am collecting the autographs of well-known Arkansaw men, and I'll give you five dollars for the signature of the secretary of state. He is very peculiar and has often refused me, but by persistence you might get it."

The man said that he would try. He went away, and after an hour had passed, he returned.

"Did you get it?"

"Oh, yes."

"Did you have much trouble?"

"Considerable. He swore at first that I should not have it, but I went to work on him in earnest and at last he yielded. Here it is," handing the gentleman a card.

"Now let me see Bismarck's signature. Ah," he added, when the great German's "fist" was shown him. "His handwriting resembles that of our secretary."

"That's a fact, there is some resemblance."

"Are you sure the signatures are genuine?"

"Oh, I know they are. You may have both of them for fifteen dollars."

"Cheap enough."

"Dirt cheap. What do you say?"

"As I said before, I don't care anything about Bismarck, but if I knew the secretary's autograph to be genuine, I would buy it."

"I'll swear it is genuine. Why, I saw him write it."

"You may be honest, but somehow I suspect you."

"Why so?"

"Because I am the secretary of state."

POLITICAL RENOWN.

Dignified and honestly expressed partisanship is worthy of regard.

Every citizen has the right to think, write and speak of public men and affairs as he pleases, provided, his pen or tongue is not charged with the venom of slander, or with disobedience to the mandates of enacted law.

To vindicate such freedom has always been the open and boldly avowed purpose of the Democratic party, from the liberty hailing era of Federalism down to the present day.

The Democratic party has fought valiantly for universal freedom of speech and of the press and for the unrestricted right of conscience. During such long and hotly contested warfare, opposition parties, of every name and character, have at times hurled bitter anathemas against Democracy because of its liberty loving principles and determination to maintain them.

Democracy has won the victory.

A glorious change appears.

The day of narrow minded bigotry, of political proscription and religious intolerance, is fast fading away, never, as we believe, to return, but should the hydra headed monster again strive for ascendency, it will be only to meet the well directed and fatal fire of Democratic hostility.

The fact is now recognized and upheld by intelligent public sentiment throughout our whole country—

That every person shall enjoy the privilege of peaceably worshipping God according to the dictates of his or her own individual conscience, unmolested by any civil or ecclesiastical authority;

That every citizen shall possess and exercise the unrestricted right of politically thinking, speaking and publishing whatever he deems proper, provided, he does not thereby do violence to common decency and the sovereignty of established law;

That each and every voter may deposit such a ballot as his own individual judgment approves, unquestioned and unhindered by any species of partisan influence or opposition.

We disavow the least intention of claiming for the Democratic party a single iota of credit not justly its due, but confidently assert, that its lengthened history, coeval with the Constitution, and extending from the Presidency of Jefferson to Cleveland, fully confirms every word we utter on behalf of the honorably won fame of DEMOCRACY.

A Newark doctor who has kept watch over some dogs bitten by the same rabid creature that snapped the children who were sent to Paris to be treated by Pasteur, is prepared to swear that the cur was not mad at all. His bitten dogs have all grown fat, and have thus far showd no signs of rabies.

Orders have been issued by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company reminding conductors that they must enforce the regulations which require brakemen on passenger trains to stand during the entire trip. Officers of the company believe that when a brakeman is allowed to occupy a seat he is liable to be less attentive to his duties than when on his feet.

Congressman Buchanan, of New Jersey, has introduced a bill for the establishment of a lighthouse at Squan Inlet, and Congressman Green, also of this State, has proposed a measure looking to the pensioning of the widows and minor children of the members of the Coast Life-Saving Service who lose or have lost their lives in the discharge of their duty. Congressman Green's bill for the erection of a United States Post Office and Government building at Elizabeth, N. J., limits the cost of the structure to $100,000.

The U. S. Senate on Monday last rejected the nominations of Chase, for Collector of Internal Revenue for Maine, and Pillsbury, Collector for the Third District of Massachusetts. These nominations were made by the President some time ago. The Republican Senators charged that Messrs. Chase and Pillsbury were implicated in the celebrated Garcelon election frauds of Maine. Senators Beck, McPherson and Vance made eloquent speeches in behalf of their confirmation, which were replied to by Senators Hale and Frye.

COURT OF ERRORS.

The Court of Errors and Appeals on Tuesday last entered on the March term, the lawyers of the State being present as usual in large numbers. The cases of Alexander Dunn against Keziah Dunn, and Keziah Dunn against Alexander Dunn were announced as off for the term. The New Brunswick Police case will be submitted on briefs. Nothing was done in the railroad taxation cases, because the railroads are not yet ready to proceed. The list of cases was read through, and cases were fixed for various dates. Arguments were then begun.

HE IS THE PRESIDENT.

President Cleveland on Monday sent to the Senate a lengthy message, explaining his views regarding his duty in the matter of suspensions from office and to the demands of that body for papers and documents relating thereto, in a plain and straightforward manner. The President fully declares his willingness to forward to the Senate all papers that are undoubtedly official, trusting in its good faith to make a legitimate use of them, but as to the large body of papers communicated voluntarily by private citizens beyond the control of the Government and intended to aid the President in the discharge of the function of suspension, which is his own exclusively and must be performed on his sole responsibility, he does not feel at liberty to send them. He denies that the Senate has a right to them. The President claims the right of suspension during recess without review by the Senate, and he accepts unreservedly the responsibility for his exercise of that right, which he declares is to the people and not to the Senate. He invites the Senate to the closest scrutiny of nominations, and concludes: "Neither the discontent of party friends nor the allurements constantly offered of confirmation of appointees conditioned upon the avowal that suspensions have been made on party grounds alone, nor the threat proposed in the resolutions now before the Senate that no confirmation will be made unless the demands of that body be complied with, is sufficient to discourage or deter me from following in the way which I am convinced leads to better government for the people."

OUR JACKSONIAN PRESIDENT.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—Judge Green, of the New York legal firm of Vanderpoel, Green & Cumming, arrived here last night, and the Graphic representative understands that he comes by request of the President, carrying with him a document which may play a very important role in the existing difference of opinion between the Executive and the Republican majority in the Senate. The document is said to be the commission issued by President Andrew Jackson to Judge Green's grandfather after the Senate had refused to confirm his nomination. This historic paper, I am informed, runs to the effect that the Senate having failed to confirm and the public service being thereby seriously impaired, Mr. Green was summarily commissioned to retain his office and discharge its functions until notified otherwise. Obviously a precedent of such a character will be of signal importance at the present juncture.

Speaking to-day of the Graphic's recent interview, in which President Cleveland's position was sharply and clearly defined, a veteran publicist said to your correspondent: "The Graphic hit the nail on the head when it spoke of the present tenant of the White House as 'a Jacksonian President.' Look back to Jackson's message to Congress of July 10, 1832, and see what he says."

Searching up that message your correspondent finds this suggestive passage in it:

"The Congress, the Executive and the (Supreme) Court must each for itself be guided by its own opinion of the Constitution. Each public officer who takes an oath to support the Constitution, swears that he will support it as he understands it and not as it is understood by others. It is as much the duty of the House of Representatives, of the Senate and of the President to decide upon the constitutionality of any bill or resolution which may be presented to them for passage or approval as it is of the Supreme Judges when it may be brought before them for judicial decision. The opinion of the Judges has no more authority over Congress than the opinion of Congress has over the Judges, and on that point the President is independent of both."—New York Graphic.

"Your power is to confirm or reject," says President Cleveland to the Senate. "My power is to remove and appoint. I will not interfere with you, and you shall not interfere with me."

The Mucci Telephone Company has been incorporated at Elizabeth, with the following officers: President, Seth B. Ryder; Vice President, John E. Voorhees; Secretary and Treasurer, James E. English; Managing Director, Dr. S. R. Beckwith.

On the 1st of the month an order went into effect on the Pennsylvania Railroad prohibiting the employment of men over 45 years of age. This does not refer to men now in the employ of the company, but no new ones above that age will be given situations.

The Postmaster-General on Tuesday appointed the following fourth-class postmasters for New Jersey: At Berans, John A. Westbrook; at Fairview, P. D. Wragg; at Glenwood, Geo. Baxter; at Middleville, Simon Vettis; at Vernon, Aaron S. Blanchard; at Walpack Centre, Emmett Bell.

About forty Democratic members of the House met in caucus Tuesday night to arrange for the selection of a Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee. A resolution was adopted instructing the State delegations to select one of their number from each State to constitute the campaign committee. The committee so selected is charged to meet within a week and choose five of their number to act with a similar number chosen by the Democratic Senators to act as joint Senate Executive Committee.

The greatest gale for many years was that which has swept over the country since last Friday. In New York at 11 o'clock the wind blew at the rate of 48 miles an hour. Toward noon its velocity increased until 1 o'clock it recorded 53 miles an hour, blowing unsteadily and at times attaining the high speed of 70 and 80 miles. The blow was not confined to any particular locality. From all points intelligence comes of serious and fatal accidents caused by the strong wind. Two or three persons were blown from the platforms of railroad trains, several were hurt by falling chimneys and house roofs, and general destruction seems to have been wrought.

An opinion was filed at Trenton on Tuesday last by Chancellor Runyon, refusing the motion of Franklin B Gowen to reopen the Vail case. In accordance with the opinion, a decree will be filed, restoring the New Jersey Central Railroad to the stockholders, and declaring the lease of it by the Reading Company null and void.

The Trenton True American says that there is every indication that the Pennsylvania Railroad lobby is seriously contemplating a change of base. The plan is to abandon the Chase bill and to have the facile Railroad Committee of the House, report another measure, which will be pushed through with all possible speed. This action is taken to avoid the crushing force of the hundreds of petitions showered upon the Legislature from all sorts of men in all parts of the State. This trick will not avail. No member need fancy that he will avoid public indignation by opposing the Chase bill and voting for another just as bad. The Pennsylvania Railroad has but one object, and that is to defeat the entrance of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad into this State. The people want it to come here. Any bill drawn and pushed by the Pennsylvania Railroad, must have its object in view, and must oppose the desire of the people. No member can vote for any scheme which places in the way of the Baltimore and Ohio any restrictions in addition to the present requirements of the General Railroad law without disregarding the demand of the petitions presented to the House. Let no member fool himself into the belief that he can fool the people on this subject. They are too fully awake, and too fully realize the importance of competing lines to be thrust aside by such an attempt to carry water on both shoulders. Since the above was in type, such a substitute has been presented to the Legislature. The vote of members of the House on it will be found in another column.

THE LEGISLATURE.

The members of the State Legislature have returned from their junketing trip to Washington and settled down to business. The committee appointed to investigate affairs in the State prison held a secret session Monday evening, but with what result has not been announced. Keeper Laverty has, however, written a letter to the Chairman demanding a trial at the bar of the Senate. It is the only method of vindication he sees open to him. The sessions of the two houses Monday evening were unimportant. The only bill passed of any account was that imposing a penalty for the sale of liquor to youth's under twenty-one years of age. In the House some bills were introduced, but none of special interest. The Governor announced by his private secretary that he had signed S. 29, authorizing the issue of bonds to improve villages and rebuild public buildings in counties of the third class; S. 82, allowing sinking fund commissioners to loan two-thirds of purchase money on property bought from State; S. 74, preventing land owners fencing land up to bridges across streams; S. 76, allowing the investment of school funds in the school districts at five per cent. H. 13, exempting wages etc., within $100 from attachment by a non-resident creditor of a non-resident debtor. H. 93, imposing a fine of fifteen dollars for every deer, etc., offered for sale after being snared. H. 119, authorizing Jersey City to raise $500 to make up a deficiency in the poor appropriation. H. 155, requiring that the signatures of Freeholders for inn and tavern licenses shall be given within thirty days, preceding the date of the application. H. 103, authorizing cities to cause the erection of fire escapes on tenement houses. H. 197, enabling cities to create fire departments by a majority vote. H. 225, providing for the re-issuing of bonds in anticipation of taxes. Mr. McDonald introduced a bill which repeals the act enabling cities to create paid fire departments, which act was approved Monday. Assembly bill No. 103, which fixes a penalty of from $50 to $250 fine or from thirty days to one year's imprisonment where parents or guardians allow children under sixteen to go out peddling, etc., on the streets, or to be let out to any person for that purpose, was warmly advocated by Mr. Condit and passed—44 to 0.

Jersey City Bridge and Tunnel bills occupied the attention of the House on Tuesday morning. A motion to lay the Tunnel bill on the table was lost, and the bill went to a third reading. The Bridge bill was then taken up and after a lengthy discussion, a motion to take it from the table was carried, 30 to 29, and it was ordered to a third reading. The following Senate bills were adversely reported and the reports concurred in: An act relative to fines under the disorderly act; an act relative to the appointment of Sergeant-at-Arms by Courts of Common Pleas, Quarter Sessions, etc.; an act providing for the payment of $1 50 a day to each person detained as a prisoner to testify in criminal cases; an act exempting firemen after seven years' service from jury duty. A bill providing for elevated railroads in Hudson county, by Mr. Besson, was ordered to a third reading. The following bills were introduced: By Mr. Minton a supplement to the act concerning taxes, making the collector as well as constable in townships liable for the non-performance of duty. Mr. Minton also introduced a bill extending the provisions of the general school law to school districts now subject to special or local laws. Another bill introduced by Mr. Minton prevents the removal of buildings, etc., from mortgaged premises, and changes the Crimes act so as to make it a crime, whether foreclosure proceedings have been begun or not. A bill introduced by Mr. Drake, prevents the transportation of giant powder, dynamite or nitro-glycerine on trains or cars carrying passengers, and fixes the fine for each offence at $100. Mr. Hutchinson is responsible for a bill giving Justices of the Peace concurrent jurisdiction with District Courts in landlord and tenant cases. A bill by Mr. Pintard empowers incorporate towns not exceeding 4,000 inhabitants to grant liquor licenses and have control over all retail places, etc. Messrs. Dasenberg, Taylor, Jewitt and Pfeiffer presented petitions against the Chase bill, while Mr. Vanderburg presented one in its behalf.

The following bills passed the House: An act authorizing Jersey City to pay the City Treasurer's clerk a salary of $1,500 a year; an act authorizing townships to acquire title in turnpike or toll roads; an act making it the duty of boards for assessing property in any city or township to assess all the real estate without regard to the division of any farm or tract of land; an act appropriating $1,500 annually for the improvement of the State Library; an act enabling the lunacy committees of Boards of Freeholders to employ physicians and nurses who reside outside the State; an act requiring ballot-boxes to be carried to the City Clerk's office immediately after election; H. 280, giving district courts power to issue warrants for the collection of personal taxes; giving towns and boroughs power to levy taxes on dogs and collect the same; regulating assessments in townships; authorizing school districts to borrow money in advance of receipts from State School fund. There was considerable talk over a bill making it unnecessary to prove that the owner of a dog knew of the animal's malicious propensities previously to its biting any one, when an action for damages is instituted. The bill was finally lost, 26 to 21. These also were lost: Fixing the compensation of Township Committeemen at $3 a day, and relative to the cancellation of the taxes in cities when there is proof adduced that no lien exists. Mr. Seymour's bill requiring the inspectors of election immediately after the count to carry the ballot-box to the City Clerk's office was passed. The Senate on Tuesday passed the following bills: Senate 120, giving the Governor authority to appoint two Inspectors-General of Rifle Practice, with the rank of colonel; Senate 77, conferring title to oyster-beds, not cultivated, to such persons as take possession and cultivate them; Senate 131, preventing non-residents from taking oysters from beds in this State; Senate 125, prohibiting the catching of black bass less than seven inches in length; Senate 136, providing for the correction of errors in articles of incorporation to form firemen's relief associations; H. 191, repealing the Inn and Tavern act of April 17, 1846; H. 117, allowing an increase of capital by street railway companies; H. 204, altering the method of procedure in actions on contracts brought in District Courts; H. 204, making it unlawful to sell fruit trees or fruit briers under a misrepresentation of their name or nature; H. 85, amending the act for the incorporation of trustees of religious societies; H. 212, making it lawful for cities to use unexpended balances between the beginning and ending of the fiscal year; H. 46, authorizing cities to adjust special sewer taxes; H. 8, amending the Justice Court act regarding the different styles of action.

Mr. Alcott, Chairman of the House Committee on Railroads and Canals, introduced in the House on Wednesday a substitute for the bill passed by the Senate some days ago, known as the Chase bill, the object of which is to prevent the Baltimore and Ohio Road from entering New York by way of a bridge across Staten Island Sound. It has been claimed that the Chase bill is a repealer of the general railroad law. The substitute of the Railroad Committee is practically the same in effect, but on its face it amends the Bridge bill of 1846. Mr. Wolverton, of Hunterdon, moved that the bill be reported back to the committee, in order that a large delegation of workingmen who are in favor of the Baltimore & Ohio coming in might be heard by the committee. He claimed that the substitute had been sprung on the House unceremoniously. Messrs. Parker, of Essex, Besson, of Hudson, Gourley, of Passaic, and several other members made spirited speeches against the recommittal of the substitute. The motion to recommit was lost by a vote of 29 to 26, and the substitute was ordered to take its place upon the calendar by the following vote:

YEAS—Messrs. Arrowine, Baird, Beckwith, Budd, Chamberlain, Corbin, Doremus, Drake, Gourley, Harrigan, Hildreth, Hudspeth, Hughes, Kinney, Lesser, Low, McDonald, Ossenberg, Peal, Pfeiffer, Snule, Shrubsher, Tenbroeck, VanBussum, Vetterlein, Winston, Wolverton—27.

NAYS—Messrs. Alcott, Armstrong, Banks, Besson, Condit, Dayton, Gangewer, Heyer, Hutchinson, Jewett, Lawrence, Lennon, A. F. R. Martin, John Martin, Noonan, Norwood, Parker, Pearson, Pelouset, Pintard, Roe, Seymour, Smith, Taylor, Throckmorton, Titus, Tumulty, Underhill, Vanderbergh, Whitaker, Wills—31.

ABSENT—Messrs. Bolton and Patten.

At 5 o'clock on Wednesday Mr. Besson, Chairman of the special committee to investigate the management of the State Prison, handed in the committee's reports, of which there were three. The main report, which was signed by all the members of the committee, stated that the committee had sufficient grounds upon which to favor the impeachment of Mr. Laverty. Articles of impeachment were submitted with the report, charging that Keeper Patrick H. Laverty had been guilty of high crimes and misdemeanors. There were three specifications, one charging him with having committed adultery with one Minnie Shaffer, a pardoned convict; one charging him with having relations of the same nature within the prison walls with one Annie Leonhardt, a discharged convict, and one charging him with having had in his private employ as servants female convicts who came in contact with men, which is contrary to the prison regulations. As soon as the reports had been read Mr. Corbin sent a resolution that Laverty be impeached of high crimes and misdemeanors in office to the clerk's desk. There was a long debate over the split of the committee in the matter of continuing the investigation, and finally Mr. Corbin withdrew his resolution pending the disposition of the reports, and moved the adoption of the report recommending the impeachment of Laverty. This was agreed to by a large majority of the members.

THE PROFESSORS MUST BE CAREFUL.

Professors of institutions of learning should be very careful lest they be imposed upon by sharp manufacturers and used to assist in selling impure articles of food. It is quite easy for an unscrupulous manufacturer to fix up a sample of his goods and place it where a chemist can buy it, and the chemist analyzing it may certify to its purity; at the same time the goods of the same brand that are upon the market and sold to consumers may be highly adulterated or poisonous.

An explanation of this kind may reconcile some curious and contradictory statements that have recently been published upon the quality of baking powders. It is difficult otherwise to tell why our learned local professors should differ so greatly from the most eminent professors of chemistry elsewhere. C. F. Chandler, of the School of Mines, Columbia College, N. Y., who stands undoubtedly at the head of his profession in this country, and whose analyses and opinions are so unerring that we presume our local professors would accept them rather than their own in case of a dispute, finds the brand of baking powder to advertise which they have loaned their names, to be composed of the following ingredients:

Potassium Bitartrate (cream of tartar);
Sodium Bicarbonate (soda);
Potassium Sodium Tartrate (Rochelle salts—21 per cent. of the whole);
Calcium Bitartrate (lime—5.49 per cent. of the whole);
Alumina (of which alum is the metallic base);
Starch, and water.

It was also found that this baking powder, instead of being of high strength, was so compounded that it lost a large part of its leavening power if not used when freshly mixed.

As to the real qualities of the different baking powders, this question has been pretty well settled by the official chemists for the U. S. Government. Their tests have shown the Royal to be the highest in leavening power and purest in quality. Prof. Mott reported that the Royal was undoubtedly the purest and most reliable baking powder made. Prof. Love's report showed it of the highest strength, while Prof. McMurtrie, chemist in chief of the U. S. Agricultural Department, at Washington, D. C., found the Royal the only powder in the country free from both lime and alum and absolutely pure.

In view of these facts, prudence would seem to dictate a little more care on the part of our local professors when called upon to endorse for advertising purposes any of the cheap and untried articles of food. Intelligent people know so well that the scientific opinion of the world is unanimously against the use of lime, alum and Rochelle salts in baking powder that the professors, if they are not cautious, may make a laughing stock of themselves.—New Brunswick Fredonian.

LOTTA, the actress, has filed plans and specifications in the Clerk's office for her $12,000 house at Lake Hopatcong. County Clerk Condit, of Morris county, says more deeds have been presented for recording in his office since December than for the same length of time during his term of office.

NEW moon to-night.

MARCH came in like a lion—how will it go out?

THE fire bell is now rung daily at twelve and six p. m.

A FRONT street butcher displays a 575 pound porker.

NEXT Wednesday is "Ash Wednesday" and the beginning of Lent.

THE Mayor and Council of the Borough of North Plainfield, meet to-night.

THE Zephyr H. & L. Co., has its benefit ball at the Casino rink, this (Thursday) evening.

REGULAR monthly meeting of the Board of Managers of the Fire Department, next Tuesday evening.

A BREAK in the steam pipes furnishing heat to the post-office building, caused some inconvenience to the employees on Saturday last.

THERE will be an organ recital at the rooms of Anchor Lodge, next Monday evening, beginning at eight o'clock. Admission, one dollar.

FOR the first time in a good many years, the Council was unanimously Democratic, Monday evening, after "turning the rascals out."

THERE has been quite a revival among the colored Baptists during the past few weeks. A large number of converts have been taken into the folds of the Mt. Olive church.

THE questions of water and sewerage are not just now "in a state of agitation." The frost in the ground, maybe, drives away all thought of city improvements that will require pipe laying.

MR. HARRY SQUIRES of the Plainfield Bicycle Club, was the victim of an accident recently that cut his face somewhat, but, fortunately, did not damage his machine. One will heal but the other will not.

THE water-sheds built under the railroad bridges, leak as badly, almost, as the bridges themselves. They'll have to be lined with tin, or made water tight in some other way. They'll never do as they are.

A NEW post-office has been established at Bloomington, which is known as that portion of Bound Brook lying across the Raritan river from the latter village. Mr. Theo. B Hodges has been appointed Postmaster of the new office.

THE Literary Fund of the Plainfield High School is enriched $20 as a result of the recent allegorical entertainment given by the pupils of the school in Music Hall, that amount being the school's portion of the net sum realized.

COUNSELLOR McCLURE has recently sold his hotel property on Tupper Lake amid the Adirondacks, intending to devote his time in the future to the demands of the legal profession he has just entered and already honors.

A PIECE of property on Park avenue that was purchased by the present owner, for about $3,000, is now held at $16,000, with a standing offer, it is said, of but a few hundreds less. And it isn't over about twenty-five feet front, either.

A PROBABILITY of better street lighting, and the expression of the desire of the Council to attain such benefit, is apparent by the publication of an advertisement requesting bids for the lighting of certain streets by gas or electricity.

THE Plainfield Electric Light Company has swung out a light from the front of French Brosemills, that illuminates the street in all directions and shows what a grand result would be accomplished by the adoption of such means throughout the city.

THE Plainfield Bicycle Club has purchased a lot on Sycamore street between Fourth and Fifth, and will erect thereon a handsome and convenient house for its occupancy. Mr. A. L. C. Marsh is the architect of the building proposed, which is to cost altogether about $2,500.

A LIGHT house greeted Mr. Gus Williams in his play of "Oh, What a Night!" Monday evening last in Music Hall. It was a "one man" play throughout, in which the star amused the audience with his dialect humor and the other characters merely filled in the time the former was off the stage.

THERE will be given to-morrow evening, at the Park House, a parlor entertainment in aid of the Grace church building fund, that promises to be of great pleasure to all who attend. The tickets are placed at the low price of fifty cents, which is considered the value to be received for the money.

DURING the high winds of Friday afternoon last, the temporary front of heavy boards that had been constructed as a cover to the new store just erected on North avenue, opposite Force's Hotel, fell across the sidewalk but fortunately as no one was passing, although the Mayor of North Plainfield had gone by a moment previously.

ONE of the employees of the Central Co. Oil Cloth Works, was off on a little spree, Thursday evening of last week, and falling around rather promiscuously cut his head and spilt his blood on the door step of a residence on East Front street. The New York papers made a sensation of it and the timid among our citizens were almost afraid to go out after dark.

THURSDAY evening of last week, a fire started by reason of a defective flue between the floor beams in the residence of Daniel Dull, Esq., of Netherwood. As soon as the alarm was sent by telephone, Chief Jennings hurried to the scene and the fire was extinguished before the arrival of Alert and such other companies of the Department as responded to the call.

THE Woodbury Democrat, speaking of the matter of street lighting says a committee of the Council of that place opened correspondence with other places in the State, with a view of comparing expenses. From the correspondence, the following is gathered: The town of Newton pays $1,7[illegible] 25 for twenty-seven lamps, which burn on moonless nights until eleven o'clock. Bridgeton pays $2,842 for one hundred and twenty lamps, which burn until 11.30 p. m., moonless nights. Morristown pays $4,868 for one hundred and nineteen lamps, which burn on moonless nights. Plainfield pays $6,984 for one hundred and thirty lamps, which burn on moonless nights until two o'clock. Burlington pays $6,322 for one hundred and ten lamps, which burn until one o'clock, and thirty lamps on moonless nights all night. Lambertville pays $18 80 for each of its sixty-seven lamps, which burn until one o'clock on moonless nights. Salem pays $3,143 for its ninety-four lamps. Millville pays $16.[illegible] for each of its forty-four gas and one hundred naptha burners, which burn until midnight. Flemington pays $12 each per year for thirty-three gas lamps, which burn until eleven o'clock on moonless nights.

THE condition of Dr. Burlingham is not so favorable, again, as it was.

WILLIE, son of Dr. Charles R. Thrift, is lying dangerously ill of typhoid fever.

GRACE church services were held last Sunday in the Seventh Day Baptist church.

THERE seems to be some probability that the Grace church choir will secure Mr. B. T. Barnes as a member.

AT 2.30 o'clock of Thursday of next week, the Casino rink and appurtenances will be sold by the receiver by order of the court.

ASSESSOR Isaac Brokaw, of North Plainfield has, within the past two days, disposed of $28,000 worth of property for customers.

A BACHELOR brother of John Becker, Sr., of North Plainfield, dropped dead at his nephew's residence in Raritan, one day last week.

THE "turning point" in the case of Mrs. Bedford has been reached and passed unfavorably. There seems now no reason to expect a recovery.

THE Spring styles of stiff Derby hats at F. A. Pope's are higher than ever before, some of them a fraction lower than the silk hat, though their price is much lower.

THE next attraction booked for Music Hall is the "Prisoner for Life" combination, March 15th. But it is probable that something in advance will be secured to be given during next week.

CONGRESSMAN GREEN has sent to the Union county Agricultural Society seeds for distribution among farmers. Those desiring some should apply for their quota to the President of the Society.

THIS (Thursday) evening, Mr. George Riddle, of Harvard College, is giving a programme of readings at Music Hall, the seventh and last of the Y. M. C. A. Course of entertainments for the season just closing.

IT is currently reported that Mr. A. E. Gordon, editor of the New Brunswick Times has been, or will be appointed by the President as United States Marshal, in place of Mr. Deacon. We trust the rumor is true.

MR. IRA RIKER of North Plainfield has purchased the handsome building site adjoining Major Gross' residence on Jackson avenue. Mr. Riker will shortly erect a residence that will contain all the modern improvements.

THE polo match at The Crescent during last Saturday evening, was won by the visiting team from Rutgers College after a long and exciting struggle. The New Brunswick boys were a little too heavy for the Plainfielders.

BY reason of a compromise with the heirs of the Edward Lake estate on Second street, near Washington, which was advertised to be sold by order of the Chancellor, Mr. George R. Pound becomes the possessor of the property.

THE well-known and long established Laing's Hotel Livery Stables on Front street have been leased for a term of years by Mr. Charles L. Pine, an experienced liveryman of Brooklyn, N. Y. He will take possession April 1st.

THE new Manager of the Somerset House in North Plainfield is Mr. Richard A. Boyce, a gentleman specially fitted for success in such position, and one who will make for this popular hotel hosts of friends by his courtesy and agreeable ways.

THE voters of North Plainfield were busy the past week attending primary meetings. A caucus Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings is indeed a strain on the neighbor's complicated system, and its voters have a discriminating public's sympathy.

THE Republicans of North Plainfield, last evening nominated candidates for the offices of Mayor and Councilmen of the Borough. To-night they will meet in the new school house for the purpose of choosing the Township officers to be voted for at the election on Tuesday of next week.

WE are not sufficiently "up" in classical music to judge of its nature ourselves, but one who is informs us that the instrumental encore given last Tuesday evening, was grand because it was "so perplexing." We'll agree to that, but we won't agree that it was music—'cause it ain't built that way.

THE estimates are all in for the construction of a new organ in the Crescent avenue church and in a few days, probably, the order will be placed and its building commenced. It is to be by all odds the finest instrument in the county, and a credit even to the richest and most successful church in the State.

A PRIVATE detective—that is, a detective at work for his own private interest—has sworn out a charge against a saloon keeper of this city who was awaiting the granting of his application for a license, to the effect that he sold to him (the informer) liquor and received pay therefor. Trial of the matter is set down for next Friday.

THE Frazee Marsh homestead property on the corner of Church and Third street, which was sold at auction by order of the Executor last week, was purchased by ex-Councilman Andrew Lowe, Sr., for $2 435. That gentleman contemplates the speedy erection of two cottages on the Church street side of the property he has secured at such a low figure.

A MUTUAL benefit association has been organized by the employees of the Central Railroad of New Jersey. The association will be incorporated under the laws of the State of New Jersey, and will extend along the entire line of the road, embracing 16,000 employees. In the case of sickness a member will receive $5 weekly, and at death the widow will receive $1 from every member of the association.

PETER F. RANDOLPH, the Clerk of Bernards Township, Somerset county, failed to publish the full annual report for the fiscal year of 1884-85 at least twenty days before the annual meeting, as required by law, and was sued by Oliver Dunster to recover the prescribed penalty of $50. Presiding Judge Bartine, in the Somerset county Court of Common Pleas at Somerville, has given judgment for the plaintiff.

AN entertainment will be given on Saturday evening, March 6th, at the Park House, by the Young People's Auxiliary of Grace church, commencing at eight o'clock. Mr. Hopkins has very kindly loaned the parlors of the Park House for the purpose and the programme will consist of music, recitations, etc. Tickets, fifty cents, to be procured at Shaw's and Miller's drug stores, or of any of the ladies of Grace church Guild or Auxiliary.

THE fifth of the six entertainments arranged by the W. C. T. U., of this city was given at Reform Hall, last Monday evening, before a small audience. It consisted of a very able and enjoyable lecture by Mrs. Emily McLaughlin of Boston, on "Barriers to Success." The speaker was one of the most charmingly interesting of all those that have appeared before our public, and they who were not present missed a real treat. The next entertainment is set down for the 24th instant.

WE are in receipt of a copy of the Huntsville (Ala.) Mercury, of late date, which contains a description of the site (Monte Sano) on which a mammoth summer hotel is being erected by Mr. Isaac Melbourne, formerly of this city. The building will cover an area of 308x200 feet, and is to be completed by June 15th. Mr. and Mrs. Melbourne speak highly of the beauty and healthfulness of Alabama, in letters to their friends in Plainfield, but say that "old Jersey" is the garden spot after all.

THE present generation has learned that prohibition does not prohibit, and that investigation does not investigate. The coming weather will now show whether prognostications prognosticate. After the emphatic entrance of March like a lion, we will be enabled to judge if a certain result is its exit like a lamb.

TO fill the places of Fire Commissioners Morris and Brower, whose terms expire next month, Gazelle has nominated Messrs. Fred M. Slater and T. O. Doane; No. 2 nominates Messrs. Slater and F. C. Green; Zephyr nominates Messrs. Slater and E. L. Morris; and No. 3 nominates Messrs. Slater and H. N. Spencer. It is very probable, however, that Mr. Slater will not consent to accept the office under any consideration.

THERE will be no rehearsal of the Plainfield Vocal Society on Monday evening of next week. Work will commence at once thereafter in preparation of Mendelssohn's "Athalia," to be given at the next concert—the last of the series—on the evening of May 13th. This grand composition is to be produced with full orchestral accompaniment, the assistance of three talented professional vocalists, and Mr. Charles Roberts the accomplished reader. A limited number of extra seats for the occasion are now on sale at Shaw's pharmacy at $1 each.

Another G. A. R. Post, Refused.

Thirty-seven honorably discharged soldiers residing in this city, including among the number Messrs. K. C. Mulford, Nelson Runyon, Edward Titsworth, A. Collier, J. H. House and Benj. B[illegible], recently applied to Department Commander Cole for a charter to establish a new G. A. R. Post in Plainfield. Their petition was endorsed by Mayor Rockafellow, ex-Mayor Maxson and other prominent residents, but it was declined with the statement by the Commander:

"That Plainfield is a small place with only about one hundred and fifty men who are eligible to membership in the order, and that, therefore, the formation of a new Post would be detrimental to the one already in existence."

This is not so. The books of the Assessor show the names of two hundred and fifty-three who are eligible for membership in such organizations. We will publish next week a fuller statement of the reasons for the petition, and the justice of the demand that has been refused.

The Crescent Closed for the Present.

After a season of over three months of varied indoor entertainment, The Crescent closed last Saturday evening for the present. It was erected by the owner with faith in the universal expression of the public of its desire for a suitable building wherein to enjoy roller skating, tennis, polo, bicycling, bowling and other sports of the same nature amid comforts and conveniences and surrounded by good order and refinement. The building is a credit and a source of pride, and in many ways, direct and indirect, the city has been benefited by its construction. Yet in spite of a lavish expenditure of money for the enjoyment of the people, and repeated efforts to give all everything that could be thought of or asked for, The Crescent's patronage has been erratic, spasmodic, but mostly unsatisfactory. All rumors, however, that the building has been sold or rented for any purpose whatever, are without foundation. It was built for the uses of the public as stated above, and when a desire is shown by the public to make such uses of it, its re-opening will probably be announced.

Expressing Their Thanks.

We spoke some days ago of a movement to secure subscriptions from among the citizens for the purpose of raising a fund with which to purchase a suitable token of thanks in recognition of the services extended the city during the fire of November 21st last by Rolla engine company No. 2 of Elizabeth. The result of this effort to raise a fund was the subsequent purchase from the factories of Mr. J. W. Johnson of an elegantly engraved silver fire trumpet, lined with gold and inscribed:

PRESENTED
BY THE CITIZENS OF PLAINFIELD, N. J.,
TO
ROLLA ENGINE CO., NO. 2,
OF THE CITY OF ELIZABETH, NEW JERSEY,
FOR PROMPT AND VALUABLE SERVICE
RENDERED ON NOVEMBER 21ST, 1885.

During Monday the trumpet was on exhibition in the windows of this office and attracted the admiration and praise of all, and during Monday evening it was taken to Elizabeth and presented to the boys of Rolla by a delegation from Plainfield composed of President Jones of the Board of Managers of the Fire Department, Chief Andrew Jennings, ex-Chief of the Department T. O. Doane, Judge Nash, treasurer of Gazelle and Fire Commissioner Jos. Cutter. The delegation was cordially received at the parlors of the Elizabeth company and welcomed by Foreman N. G. Smith of Rolla. Chief Jennings then stated the object of the visit of the Plainfield firemen and introduced President Jones. The latter in a neat speech expressed the appreciation of the entire community of Plainfield of the great service and assistance rendered in the hour of need by the Elizabeth firemen, and presented the trumpet as a token of such appreciation. Secretary William Ives accepted the handsome memento on behalf of his company, after which the party adjourned to a neighboring restaurant where a bountiful collation was served.

Union County Finances.

The following is Collector Sheridan's report of the finances of Union county, as presented to the Board of Chosen Freeholders on Tuesday. From the exhibit it appears that the financial affairs of our county are in a creditable condition, thanks to the management of our Board of Freeholders and efficient Collector. Mr. Sheridan has faithfully served the county as Collector for years. May he still continue to do so:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union;

GENTLEMEN:—I herewith respectfully report the amount of taxes due the county at the present time:

From Rahway	$13,065 66
" Elizabeth	8,068 77
" Plainfield	608 29
		$22,442 72

This amount does not include interest. It is my pleasure also to report that the county has had no temporary loans or floating indebtedness since the third of last Nov. I desire also to compare the financial condition of the county at the present time, with the commencement of this fiscal year (May 12, 1885). At that time the temporary loans outstanding, were:

	$[illegible]
Floating Debt	421 00
Bonds Outstanding	382,000 00
Total Liabilities		$401,424 00
OF ASSETS WITHOUT INTEREST.
Due from Rahway	$20,275 12
" Plainfield	[illegible]
Miscellaneous	275 00
Cash	[illegible]	$28,413 [illegible]
Total Debt May 12, 1885		$373,0[illegible]
At present we have no temporary loans or outstanding obligations except
Bonds Outstanding	$372,000 00
Total Liabilities		$372,000 00
OF ASSETS WITHOUT INTEREST.
Due from Rahway	$13,065 66
" Elizabeth	8,068 77
" Plainfield	608 29
Miscellaneous	1,300 00
Cash	2,971 [illegible]	$26,013 [illegible]
Total Debt at this Date		$345,9[illegible]
" " May 12, 1885	$373,0[illegible]
" " at this Date	345,9[illegible]
Reduction from May 12, 1885	$[illegible]

It will be observed that the city of Rahway at the commencement of this year owed the county $20,275 12. On this arrearage they have paid the county (which does not include the interest paid) $18,410.[illegible]

Balance of arrears up to 1885 still due	$1,864 [illegible]
Their levy for 1885	$[illegible]
On this they have paid	$4,000 00
Balance of arrears still due for 1885		[illegible]
Balance due without interest		$13,065 66

The probability is that another year will show the amount nearly if not quite paid.

All of which is respectfully submitted,
P. SHERIDAN, County Collector.

Bal-Masque.

The Plainfield Turn Verein is to have a grand masquerade ball in the Casino rink, Monday evening next, when Voss' full orchestra of Newark will furnish the music and visiting societies will contribute to the programme of entertainment. The affair is under the direction of a committee of arrangements consisting of Messrs. A. C. Wengel, E. H. Meinhart, H. Hourand, H. B. Young, H. Keller, G. Schlereth and F. Parsch. Each lady in costume will be presented with a handsome order of dance of which samples have been on exhibition for some days. The grand march will occur at 10.30, previous to which there will be an exhibition by 101 members of the Plainfield and visiting societies of turners. The admission for gentlemen in costume will be one dollar, for ladies, fifty cents. Admission to spectators twenty-five cents with twenty-five cents extra for reserved seats.

Selecting Candidates For Borough Officers.

Promptly at 7.30 p. m., on Tuesday evening, March 2d, Corporation Counsel John H. Jackson, esq., as chairman of last meeting called the voters to order in the basement of the new school house on Somerset street, who had assembled per call, to select candidates for Mayor and Council of the Borough of North Plainfield, also to name a sufficient sum wherewith to run the Borough and keep the roads in repair. Mr. Jackson was elected chairman and John Becker, jr., secretary. The present Mayor, John H. Van Winkle, esq., who has so ably filled that position the past year and who has given such universal satisfaction, was named unanimously as his own successor while Messrs Ira Riker of Jackson ave., and Samuel St. J. McCutchen of Washington Park, were likewise unanimously chosen as candidates for Councilmen for three years each. Fifteen hundred dollars was named for Borough purposes and a like sum was named for roads. After the transaction of the above business the meeting adjourned at a quarter to eight o'clock. Many voters came after the adjournment and were somewhat surprised at the business of the meeting being so soon expedited, but all had nothing but words of praise for the excellent ticket there nominated. The election takes place next Tuesday in Vosselman's harness shop on Somerset street.

A People's Ticket in North Plainfield Named.

The legal voters of North Plainfield Township met in the basement of the new school house on Wednesday evening last and was called to order by Corporation Counsel Jackson. Messrs. John Bonine and Ira Riker were elected chairman and secretary respectively. The ticket nominated comprises some of North Plainfield's well-known residents, gentlemen who have the best interests of the township at heart, and who undoubtedly, will give a good account of themselves on Tuesday next, at which time Town Meeting is to be held. Voters on the East of Somerset street ballot at Greader's and those on the West at Warren engine house. The following is the ticket nominated: Judge of election, first district, Thos J. Young; second district, William H Ludlow; Inspector of election, first district; Fred. H. Martin; second district, D. S. Campbell; Town Clerk, Lewis R Blackford; District Clerk, second district, Andrew E Kenney; Collector, William H. Shotwell; Assessor, Lewis E Barkalew; Town Committee, David R. Weaver; Chosen Freeholder, William Campbell; Justice of Peace, for five years, James S. Harry; for one year, Moses H. French; Overseer of the Poor, William T. Banks; Commissioners of Highways, John Emmons, Harmon Trust; Commissioners of Appeals, Joseph P. Rumble, Harmon Trust, Lewis Bird; Constable, Ralph Conover; Pound Keepers, James Hurley, Samuel Hudson, Daniel Carty, Augustus Fairing; Fifteen hundred dollars was named for Poor purposes and on motion the chair appointed a committee to confer with the opposition with power to name a specific sum of money for road purposes in the township outside of the Borough. A resolution that the legal voters of the road districts elect the overseers of roads of their several districts was carried, after which meeting adjourned.

Vocal Concert Number Two.

The second subscription concert of the Vocal Society was given in Music Hall last Tuesday evening. Owing to the inclemency of the weather, the audience was somewhat smaller than that of the previous concert. The participators in the programme were Mrs Sarah Barron Anderson, contralto; Mrs. T. W. Davis, soprano; Messrs Barnes and Howland, bass; Mr David Lyon, pianist, and the Vocal Society. The first selection was the "Bridal Chorus," from "The Rose Maiden," by Cowen, which was very bright and pretty, and therefore enjoyable. The "Song of the Clock," by Cooke, was not so much enjoyed by either audience or chorus, the latter of whom sang as if from compulsion and not from pleasure. Joseffy's "Serenade" and Scharwenka's "Marcia in A" were played by Mr. Lyon with his usual taste and skill. His exquisite execution delights even the uneducated, even though he were unable to give a reason. The beautiful "Baby Grand" on which these selections were played and which was loaned expressly for the occasion, added greatly to the charm. Rundegger's "Mariners," a trio by Mrs. Davis, Messrs. McCutchen and Howland, showed the audience how much native talent there is among us; a pleasure that has not been given us in some time. This was followed by the familiar poem "Lord Ullin's Daughter," set to very appropriate and enjoyable music. Hullah's "The Storm," by Mrs Anderson, was listened to by a motionless audience, which is to an artist a criterion of success. They were motionless only until the last note died away, and then insisted upon a repetition. They were then favored with a charming little ballad, charmingly sung. The first part of the programme ended with a fresh one of Caldicott's "Mother Goose Melodies." In this, "The House that Jack Built," there was more chance for effect than in some of the others, and it was consequently more enjoyable. The "Opening Chorus" of part second was Stewart's "Bells of Saint Michael's Tower," which with its whole phrase of utter discord, its enjoyment by the audience, its encore and its repetition in good time and tune, was almost a fac simile of its performance here a few years ago. This time, the blame was laid upon almost all the parts, the altos alone being exempt, before it was finally settled where all blame should be, at the base of all things, even the second bass. Mrs. Anderson gave as her second solo Goetz's "O, Happy Day; O, Blissful Day," followed by "Tit for Tat," Donizetti's "Adieu," rendered by Mrs. Davis and Mr. B. T. Barnes, was heartily applauded and was repeated. Although Mr. Barnes has not been long with us, he has already taken the lead among our amateur bassos. The part song "The Cruiskeen Lawn" arranged from "John Anderson my Jo" by Mr. Fitzhugh, followed by a Polonaise of Chopin by Mr. Lyon, led to the chef d'oeuvre of the evening, Mendelssohn's "Thirteenth Psalm." This finished an entertainment which gave to a part of the audience what they have long desired, a concert composed almost entirely of glees and part songs. The rest were doubtless glad to hear, that the Society will give for its last concert Mendelssohn's "Athalia," which has been so much enjoyed upon former occasions. This oratorio will be accompanied by a full orchestra, and Mr. Chas. Roberts, Jr., has been engaged for the Dramatic Readings which form an important part of the work. He will also read Meredith's "Aux Italiens" accompanied by a string quartette. A limited number of tickets will be sold to subscribers, so that all may have an opportunity to enjoy it.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

MONDAY EVENING, March 1, 1886.

Present—President Beguelin and Messrs Bowers, Cox, Dumont, Dunham, Gallup, Goddard, Marsh, Simpson, Voorhees—10.

Absent—Mr. Cuthbert—1.

Minutes of adjourned meeting of Feb. 15th, approved as read.

PETITIONS.

For hack, peddler and carting licenses by V. Uzinger, F. Uzinger, A. Uzinger, D. O'Brien, M. Sweeny, jr., G. M. Angleman, Jno. Morton, Et. Kline, P. Hoagland, E. Holmes, M. Higgins, G. Belcher, T. Keane, G. Houseman, R. Wortman, P. Keeley, A. Hedden, Mrs. John Brown, W. H. Totten, P. Lynch. Referred to License Committee.

For permission to build a frame club house, by the Plainfield Bicycle Club. To Lamps Committee.

By H. P. Reynolds, for consent to construct a railing around cellar-way on North avenue at corner of Park. To Streets Committee with power.

By M. B. Long, M. D., for permission to make repairs and erect addition to house at 71 Park avenue. To Lamps Committee, with power.

By A. J. Huff, to remove frame building at corner of Fourth street and Park ave. To Lamps Committee, with power.

By T. S. Davis, to erect dwelling at Sixth street and Park avenue. To Lamps Committee.

From Plainfield Electric Light Co., asking the return of its recent proposal for lighting the city. Tabled.

CLAIMS.

The following, referred to proper committees: Police bills; Poor bills; Plainfield Gas Light Co., $214 51; John Johnson, $29 74; G M Anderson, $28; Jos. U[illegible], $73; Times Publishing Co., $11; J. H. Pa[illegible], $25; W. B Iler, $1 75; A [illegible] Runyon, $12.

The monthly statements of City Collector and the City Treasurer were received and read.

The Finance, Lamps, Police, Printing, Salaries, Streets and Alms Committee's reported claims approved. Referred to Auditing Committee.

The Laws Committee reported correct bonds of Constables Moffett and Sutliff. Ordered recorded.

Also returned the protest of Mr. Geiser, with the recommendation that it be placed on file. So ordered.

The License Committee reported its approval of sundry applications for back licenses, etc. All granted.

Mr. Marsh moved that the City Clerk notify the licensed to comply with the provisions of the ordinance, requiring the posting of a card of rates and number in each hack. Carried.

The bond of J. Van Winkle, City Treasurer, was presented and referred to Laws Committee.

The Streets Committee reported it impossible to carry the water on the surface from Front street through Farragut ave. to the brook. Also that to construct a way would cost about $165. Filed.

Mr. Goddard offered a resolution directing the City Clerk to advertise for proposals to light certain of the streets of the city by gas or electricity. Adopted.

Also that the Lamps Committee be requested to draw up the specifications for such purpose. Carried.

By Mr. Dumont, that the City Clerk prepare and present the Board of Education with a bill of its proportion of the salary of the City Assessor for year 1885. Adopted.

Also that the City Treasurer be instructed to pay the balance due with interest of the judgment of Union county against the city. Adopted.

Mr Voorhees called from the table the application of P. Day for a saloon license.

A communication endorsing the applicant, was read, signed by residents and property owners in the vicinity of the proposed saloon.

It was moved by Mr Voorhees, seconded by Mr. Cox, that the application be granted.

So ordered by the following vote:

Ayes—Messrs Beguelin, Bowers, Cox, Dumont, Gallup, Simpson, Voorhees—7.

Nays—Dunham, Goddard, Marsh—3.

The application of William Sullivan was taken up and lost by the following vote:

Nays—Messrs. Bowers, Cox, Dumont, Dunham, Goddard, Marsh—6.

Ayes—Messrs. Beguelin, Gallup, Simpson, Voorhees—4.

The application of Mr. Staats was taken up and granted by the following vote:

Ayes—Messrs. Beguelin, Bowers, Cox, Dumont, Goddard, Simpson, Voorhees—7.

Nays—Messrs. Dunham, Gallup, Marsh—3.

The application of Mr. Blimm was taken up and granted by the following vote:

Ayes—Messrs. Beguelin, Bowers, Cox, Dumont, Goddard, Simpson, Voorhees—7.

Nays—Messrs. Dunham, Gallup, Marsh—3.

Mr. Goddard asked for the unanimous consent of the Council, that the application of Mr. Bock, refused at the last meeting, be reconsidered: Messrs Marsh and Dunham objected.

Mr. Cox moved that the rules that govern the Council be abolished.

The chair ruled the motion in order, and Mr. Marsh's appeal from the decision was tabled.

The motion was carried by the affirmative votes of Messrs. Beguelin, Bowers, Cox, Gallup, Simpson and Voorhees.

Mr. Marsh's appeal from this decision also, was tabled by the affirmative votes of the above.

Mr. Marsh's motion to adjourn was lost.

Mr. Simpson's motion that the rules be reestablished was lost.

Messrs. Dumont, Marsh, Dunham and Goddard left the Council room.

(A single motion was here carried which the Clerk also we failed to get, but the President announced that "the license of Mr. Bock was taken up and granted.")

On motion of Mr. Cox the rules of order were re-adopted.

The Auditing Committee reported correct sundry claims. Warrants ordered drawn therefore.

Mr. Bowers of Lamps Committee, reported back the petitions of the Bicycle Club and Mr. T. S Davis, with the statement that there was no power to grant the same. Ordered referred back to the applicants.

The Council then adjourned.

A Mysterious Assault.

As Mr. Jeremiah Rowe was returning to his home on Steiner place, North Plainfield, one night recently, he was struck with a club in the hands of some unknown person and knocked senseless to the ground. Upon regaining consciousness he was able to reach his residence and Dr. Long was sent for. He found the victim's head badly cut from the crown down the left side. The wound was skillfully sewed up and dressed, since which Mr. Rowe has been able to be about again. He knows of no reason for the attack and has no clue to the assailant.

Organ Concert at Anchor Lodge.

The members of Anchor Lodge F. and A. M., have planned an organ concert for next Monday evening at their rooms in Music Hall block. The organist will be John Hyatt Brewer, of Dr. Cuyler's church who will be assisted by Miss Harriett W. Schroter, soprano, of Clinton Avenue Congregational church, Brooklyn, and the Boylston Glee Club, of Brooklyn, consisting of 12 members. On the evening of the recital an electric light will be placed at the entrance to the rooms on West Front street next to Demarest's store. Tickets may be purchased at the door or of any member of the Lodge.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

Thomas Eustice, of North avenue, was made the happy father of a ten-pound boy on Tuesday morning last.

The Town Committee met at Town Rooms on Thursday evening and finished up the business for the year.

The new Postmaster located on Thursday last, the post-office in Godshalk's ice cream saloon on Broad street for the present.

Mrs. Phoebe McQuoid has sold her residence on Westfield avenue to Mr. James B Carberry, who expects to occupy the same next month.

John S. Irving received on Wednesday last eighteen fine Western horses. He expects to dispose of them among the farmers of our township.

The entertainment of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union held on Monday evening, at their hall on Broad street, was largely attended.

The 8th Wonder or Eagle Clock will be exhibited in our town on the 25th, 26 and 27th inst. Wherever it has been exhibited it has drawn crowded houses.

The regular meeting of the Westfield Fire Department was held on Wednesday evening last. A full representation was present and considerable business of importance was transacted.

The Old Folks Social Club held their last sociable of the season on Tuesday evening at Arcanum Hall. About twenty couple were present. Music was furnished by Meslon. The evening's entertainment was pronounced the [illegible] one of the season.

Both the Empire Engine Co., No. 2 and Bucket and Engine Co., No. 1, held their regular monthly meetings on Tuesday evening last. Considerable interest was taken in the welfare of both companies, a large number of members being present. The H. & L. Co., No. 1 hold their next monthly meeting on next Monday evening.

Mr. James T. Pierson has about perfected arrangements for the erection of three new residences. From the looks of the plans the buildings, when completed, will be an ornament to our town, and are of a kind of which we ought to have a large number built at once, as they will rent or sell readily. Westfield has not enough houses to meet the demands. Every day there are persons in our town looking for houses to rent, and also to buy.

On Wednesday afternoon, Feb. 25, Mamie Curran, aged 14 years, left home to visit a neighbor living a short distance from her residence. She failed to return that evening. Her brothers became alarmed and search was made around our town, but to no avail. It was continued on Thursday. Finally the conclusion was come to that she had gone to visit some friends, which on Monday proved true, as she came home of her own accord, and said she had been to Newark to visit some friends.

John Biers, who has worked for Chauncy B. Ripley, Esq., for a number of years met with a very severe accident on Friday, Feb. 27th. He was driving the working team to a box wagon, and being very cold, put the lines around his body, and was whipping his hands to get them warm. The team ran away, throwing Mr. Biers out and dragging him some distance on the frozen ground, injuring him very severely. He was immediately taken to his residence on Central avenue, and Drs. Kinch's sent for, who dressed his wounds. We understand that he is slowly recovering, he no doubt being injured internally.

On this Friday evening, March 5, at 8 p. m., the Democratic Primary for the nomination of a ticket to be supported at the township election next Tuesday, and on Saturday evening the Republican Primary is to be held at 8 p. m. There is but very little excitement over the Spring election; there is some talk about the amount of the appropriations. A number of those living on the outskirts of our township oppose the amount of money for lighting street lamps. The amount raised last year for the purpose was $500, we understand, and was enough to carry the matter of lighting lamps through the year. I gave a percentage of 7 cents on the $100 valuation, or 70 cents on the $1 000, which seems to be a very small tax for the great improvement in having our streets lighted, which is a great benefit to all the residents both of the town and township.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

It is now legal to catch trout in New Jersey—if you can find them.

A new law of this State makes it illegal to sell game after it has been snared.

English snipe and the spring flight of wild ducks will soon engage the sportsman's attention.

There will be interesting sweepstake pigeon matches on the grounds of the Middlesex Gun Club at Dunellen, on Saturday afternoon. The membership of the Club is steadily increasing.

A bill introduced into the Senate on Tuesday last by Mr Carter, provides for offering a bounty of one dollar for the killing of red or gray fox and fifty cents for minks and the same for weasels, hawks and owls. The dead animal must be brought before a Justice of the Peace and the killer must make affidavit.

A match at glass balls will be shot at Campbell's Club House, Monday, March 15th for $20 a side, 25 glass balls each, between Cyrus P. Wilcox of Westfield and Harry Campbell of Plainfield. Another match at pigeons between Campbell and John Lay, of Jersey City, is on the tapis, the time of shooting which will be announced on the 15th.

The great sale of Lorillard's horses at Rancocas, near Jobstown, took place last Saturday. Dwyer Bros. were the chief buyers. Twenty seven head were sold for $149 050. The Dwyer Bros. bought Pontiac for $17 500, Dew Drop for $2[illegible],000, Winfred for $13 500, Pontico for $[illegible], Daruma for $2500 Cyclops for $10,[illegible] Housatonic for $1,[illegible]00.

Senator Livingston, of this county, introduced two good bills in the Senate last week in the interest of fish and fishing. One an act to prohibit the capture of black bass less than seven inches in length and trout less than six inches in length. The other provides that persons turning pickerel or pike into waters stocked with fish shall be imprisoned for six months, or fined from $200 to $500.

A large number of foreign birds have been imported to this country for the purpose of stocking preserves. The majority of these birds have been secured for this State. Mr. Pierre Lorillard bought several thousand for his Rancocas farm game preserves at Jobstown, Burlington county. Mr. Rutherford stocked his preserve at Allamuchy, Warren county. Mr. Kinney has recently done the same on his farm near Bloomingdale, and scattered over the State both English partridges and pheasants have been put out in small lots. Of course the early attempts to acclimate these birds were regarded as experiments, which would have proved failures had not Mr. Lorillard obstinately determined to give the venture repeated trials. The first two seasons the birds did not survive the winter. Then shelters were built for them and new lots ordered from England and Germany. The birds have now become hardy, especially those that have been hatched here, and there is no longer any doubt that if provided with food and cover they will hold their own against the rigors of the American climate.

One of my children, a girl about nine years old had a very bad discharge from her head and nose of a thick yellow matter, and was growing worse. We had several good physicians prescribe for her, but without benefit. We tried Ely's Cream Balm, and much to our surprise in three days there was a marked improvement. We continued using the Balm and in a short time the discharge was apparently cured.—O. A. Cary, Corning, N. Y.

An Efficient Remedy

In all cases of Bronchial and Pulmonary Affections is AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. As such it is recognized and prescribed by the medical profession, and in many thousands of families, for the past forty years, it has been regarded as an invaluable household remedy. It is a preparation that only requires to be taken in very small quantities, and a few doses of it administered in the early stages of a cold or cough will effect a speedy cure, and may, very possibly, save life. There is no doubt whatever that

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

Has preserved the lives of great numbers of persons, by arresting the development of Laryngitis, Bronchitis, Pneumonia, and Pulmonary Consumption, and by the cure of those dangerous maladies. It should be kept ready for use in every family where there are children, as it is a medicine far superior to all others in the treatment of Croup, the alleviation of Whooping Cough, and the cure of Colds and Influenza, ailments peculiarly incidental to childhood and youth. Promptitude in dealing with all diseases of this class is of the utmost importance. The loss of a single day may, in many cases, entail fatal consequences. Do not waste precious time in experimenting with medicines of doubtful efficacy, while the malady is constantly gaining a deeper hold, but take at once the speediest and most certain to cure,

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

THE BEST THING POSSIBLE.

"Oh, Lisa, do look! there is a butterfly among your flowers!" cried Johnny Dale, raising up on one elbow to feast his eager eyes upon the dainty visitor.

And Lisa dropped her work, and ran to look at it, too.

Yes, there it was, a little black-and-gold creature, fluttering softly among the plants in the window.

"Poor little fellow! his summer is nearly over, Johnny," said Lisa, the faint, golden haze of the outside world reminding her that it was September.

"Like mine," said the invalid, falling back on his cot, with a sigh.

"Now, Johnny, what nonsense!" said his sister, with a great pretense at cheerfulness.

"I know I shall die, Lisa, if I stay shut up in this city much longer. Oh, if we could only go to the country!"

Yes, if they only could, thought the sister, with a great, passionate longing for the freedom, the pure air, and the beauty of wood and field; but how could they, when it took all she could possibly make with her needle to keep them in the bare necessities of life?

All summer the poor, weak, ailing boy had fretted and pined for the country, and she toiled over her sewing-machine day and night, but never could she lay by enough even for a day out in the woods.

She was a pale, slim young creature, not over eighteen, not particularly pretty, but sweet and tender, with soft, dusky, Southern eyes, and waving, dusky hair.

She looked out into the dusty street, and even as she did so, saw the young nephew of old Miss Law drive up with that lady in his buggy.

Miss Law occupied the little yellow house opposite, and taught a day-school. She was a little, withered old maid, but very kind and cheerful, and Lisa's eyes brightened as she saw her returning home.

How brown and strong Mr. Archie Law looked, and how carefully he assisted the old lady out of the buggy, and opened the gate for her before he drove away!

Lisa had heard a great deal about him from his aunt; of his fine farm on the McDonough Road, of his mother, and of his own splendid qualities. She felt that she was really acquainted with him, and watched him drive away, with friendly eyes, before sitting down to her work again.

Half an hour later Miss Law bustled in.

"Well, Lisa, my dear, how does the work get on? Johnny, are you better to-day?" she said, giving Lisa a kiss, and Johnny a pat, before she sat down.

"You have been away," said Lisa, bringing in a glass of fresh water.

"Yes; out to see Archie and his mother. Poor soul! she has sprained her ankle, and the doctor says it may be a month before she can get out again."

"Oh, I am sorry!" exclaimed the sympathetic girl.

"Yes, it is bad, now that they were so busy picking cotton, and extra hands hired, and nobody to see about the house and kitchen but Dinah. I told my sister-in-law she ought to get a girl—a nice, steady white girl—to stay with her until the fall work is over, and she said I might engage one if I could, and send her out to her."

Lisa's heart gave a quick bound, and the blood rushed to her face; she dropped her work.

"Oh, Miss Law, do you think I would suit her? Indeed, I know a great deal about housekeeping, for I kept house for papa before he died."

"You, child? You hire out?" gasped the little spinster, and put up her glasses to look more closely at the girl.

"Why not? I work like a slave here, and Johnny is longing for the country. If we might go for two months, I would take no wages, only our board, and help about the work."

Miss Law looked again at her, noted the eager, wistful expression of her eyes, the paleness of her delicate skin, now that the flush had faded, and then the hollow-eyed invalid on the couch.

"Well, well, I had not thought of such a thing, but probably it would be good for you both. Yes, I really believe it would. I'll see about it right away."

"If you only would!"

"Yes, yes, I will."

And the end of it was that a few days later Mr. Archie Law's buggy stood in the quiet street again, and Mr. Archie himself ran up the stairs and dragged down the small trunk, into which Lisa had packed their scanty wardrobe. And Miss Law kissed the children—for children she called them—and bade them get a good color before they came back, and impressed it on her nephew that he must take good care of Lisa.

"All right, aunt. She shall be my special charge," he said, and looked at the young girl with a wonderfully bright, pleasant smile in his blue eyes, and on his firm mouth.

Ah, what a lovely day it was! with golden sunshine, with a blue haze hanging over the distant hills, and with the first faint tints of autumn on the leaves.

The cotton-fields were white, and every now and then a mellow snatch of song would float up on the air from the throat of a happy-go-lucky picker.

Then the Law farm-house, set in a grove of trees, with the softening touches of time about it, with vines shading the veranda, and ivy clinging to the old rock chimneys.

It was heavenly, thought poor Lisa, who had been homesick for just such a vision of peace and quiet; and when Mrs. Law gave her such a gentle, kindly welcome, a mist of tears blinded her soft, dusky eyes.

Johnny drew a long, contented sigh, and stretched himself on the piazza.

So through the dreamy, golden days they made the most of their precious holiday.

Lisa fell quickly into the ways of the household, and proved herself a quick-footed, deft young helper.

Oh, yes, it was a delicious holiday, with just enough occupation to make it pass all the more swiftly.

Archie did not forget that promise to take care of Lisa, and did not apparently find the task unpleasant, while she gradually drifted into a sweet dream.

But September and October could not last always, and soon November put in an appearance, and the leaves changed their rich hues to dull browns, and began to fall with a dry, rustling sound; and the fields were bare, and the air crisp and chilly.

Lisa's girlish dream was rudely broken one day. Mrs. Law told her that Archie intended to marry.

"I have long wanted him to settle down and take a wife," said the good woman, with a pleased smile.

"Yes," said Lisa, steadily, turning her white face away.

"And only last night he told me that he intended to follow my advice."

And Lisa did not stay to hear any more, but slipped quietly away, and put on her cloak and hood to get out into the open air. She felt stifled, faint, and her cold fingers trembled.

"Say, Lisa, where are you going?" inquired Johnny, busily employed in making a bird-trap.

"To take a little walk."

"Please get me some nuts?"

And hanging a little basket on her arm, she hastened away.

So this was to be the end of her holiday.

"Oh, I did not know that I loved him!" she murmured; and her delicate cheeks grew hot with shamed blushes. "We must go back to the city at once. Oh, my heart! how can I give him up?"

And as all the loneliness and desolation of the future years rushed upon her, she fell on her knees among the brown, rustling leaves, and hid her face in her shaking hands.

She fought her battle, conquered all outward sign of emotion before she rose to her feet again, and went on her way to seek the nuts for Johnny.

It was an overcast day; the air still and crisp, a bluish haze resting upon the distant roads and fields.

It was near sunset when the girl started to return from her ramble. The basket was full of brown nuts, and she stepped swiftly along the pathway, a neat, dainty figure, but with drooped head and colorless face.

"Where are you going, my pretty maid?" questioned a gay, manly voice behind her, and Mr. Archie came up beside her, his gun over his shoulder, and the brown wing of a partridge hanging over the side of his game-bag.

Lisa was quite startled, and it was only by a strong effort she overcame the sense of confusion.

"Why are you so serious, Lisa?" he softly questioned, stooping to look mournfully into her face.

"Oh, I have only been planning what I must do when Johnny and I return to town," she replied, with forced lightness.

"When you return?"

"Yes, and that must be in a few days now."

"Are you not satisfied here, Lisa?"

She drew a deep breath—she could not help it—of pain and regret.

"Oh, yes! but then one cannot always have a holiday. I am really not needed any longer."

They had come to a little stream trickling merrily across the pathway, and Lisa stooped to pick a pale, belated flower, blooming on the bank. When she rose up, she met a pair of very earnest blue eyes.

"Yes, you are needed, Lisa."

"Ah, no! the extra field-hands are all gone, and your mother is quite well again and—"

"I need you, Lisa—I love you, and you must stay and be my wife."

"But I thought your mother told me that you intended to—to marry?" she stammered.

"So I do, if you will consent to be my wife. Don't you think you can like a plain, rough farmer, my little darling?" he whispered, softly.

"But there is Johnny," she said, faintly.

"A country life will be the best thing possible for him. But I do not want you to say 'yes' for Johnny's sake, I want you to love me. Can you?" his arm around her, his brown face close to her warm, flushed cheek.

"Oh!" she sighed, half-sobbingly, and hid her face against his shoulder.

It was a very satisfactory answer; and they were two very happy people, as they walked on through the silent woods to the old farm-house.

"It is just as I thought it would be!" exclaimed Mrs. Law, delightedly, when she heard the news; "and they are going to be happier than many a richer, finer couple, for they've got a healthy, busy, working life before them."

And so the dingy back street and the little sewing-room knew Lisa no more, for she had gone to a longer, brighter partnership, and she was a very proud and happy farmer's wife.

A DIMPLED BABY'S HAND.

Everybody was afraid of the old Governor, because he was so cross and surly. And one morning he was crosser and surlier than ever, because he had been troubled for several days with a matter which he had already decided, but which many people wished to have reversed. A man found guilty of a crime, had been imprisoned, and there were those who, convinced of his penitence and knowing that his family needed his support, earnestly sought his pardon. To all these solicitations the old Governor replied "no;" and, having made up his mind, the old Governor had no patience with those who persisted in their intercessions. So the old Governor was in high dudgeon one morning, and when he came to his office he said to the secretary: "Admit no one to see me; I am weary of these constant and senseless importunities."

Now, the secretary had a discreet regard for the old Governor's feelings, and it was seldom that his presence of mind so far deserted him as to admit of his suffering the old Governor's wishes to be disregarded. He bolted the door and sat himself down at his modest desk and simulated intense enthusiasm in his work. His simulation was more intense than usual, for never before had the secretary seen the old Governor in such a harsh mood.

"Has the mail come—where are the papers and the letters?" demanded the old Governor, in a gruff voice.

"Here they are, sir," said the secretary, as he put the bundle on the old Governor's table. "These are addressed to you privately; the business letters are on my desk. Would you like to see them now?"

"No, not now," growled the old Governor; "I will read the papers and my private correspondence first."

But the old Governor found cause for uneasiness in this employment. The papers discussed the affair of the imprisoned man, and these private letters came from certain of the old Governor's friends, who, strangely enough, exhibited an interest in the self-same prisoner's affair. The old Governor was highly disgusted.

"They should mind their own business," muttered the old Governor. "The papers are very officious, and these other people are simply impertinent. My mind is made up—nothing shall change me."

Then the old Governor turned to his private secretary and bade him bring the business letters, and presently the private secretary could hear the old Governor growling and fumbling over the pile of correspondence. He knew why the old Governor was so excited; many of these letters were petitions from the people touching the affair of the imprisoned man. Oh, how they angered the old Governor!

"Humph!" said the old Governor, at last. "I'm glad I'm done with them. There are no more, I suppose."

When the secretary made no reply the old Governor was surprised. He wheeled in his chair and searchingly regarded the secretary over his spectacles. He saw that the secretary was strangely embarrassed.

"You have not shown me all," said the old Governor, sternly. "What is it you have kept back?"

Then the secretary said: "I had not thought to show it to you. It is nothing but a little child's letter—I thought I should not bother you with it."

The old Governor was interested. A child's letter to him—what could it be about? Such a thing had never happened to him before.

"A child's letter; let me see it," said the old Governor, and, although his voice was harsh, somewhat of a tender light came into his eyes.

"It is nothing but a scrawl," explained the secretary, "and it comes from the prisoner's child—Monckton's little girl—Monckton, the forger, you know. Of course there's nothing to it—a mere scrawl; for the child is only four years old. But the gentleman who sends it says the child brought it to him and asked him to send it to the Governor, and then, perhaps, the Governor would send her papa home."

The old Governor took the letter, and he scanned it curiously. What a wonderful letter it was, and who but a little child could have written it? Such strange hieroglyphics and such crooked lines—oh! it was a wonderful letter, as you can imagine.

But the old Governor saw something more than the strange hieroglyphics and crooked lines and rude pencilings. He could see in and between the lines of the little child's letter a sweetness and a pathos he had never seen before, and on the crumpled sheet he found a love like the love his bereaved heart had vainly yearned for, oh! so many years.

He saw, or seemed to see, a little head bending over the crumpled page, a dimpled hand toiling at its rude labor of love, and an earnest little face smiling at the thought that this labor would not be in vain. And how wearied the little hand grew and how sleepy the little head became, but the loyal little heart throbbed on and on with patient joy, and neither hand nor head rested till the task was done.

Sweet innocence of childhood! Who would molest thee—who bring thee one shadow of sorrow? Who would not rather brave all dangers, endure all fatigues, and bear all burdens to shield thee from the worldly ills thou dream'st not of!

So thought the old Governor, as he looked upon the crumpled page and saw and heard the pleadings of the child's letter; for you must know that from the crumpled page there stole a thousand gentle voices that murmured in his ears so sweetly that his heart seemed full of tears. And the old Governor thought of his own little one—God rest her innocent soul. And it seemed to him as if he could hear her dear baby voice joining with this other's in trustful pleading.

The secretary was amazed when the old Governor said to him: "Give me a blank." But what most amazed the secretary was the tremulous tenderness in the old Governor's voice and the mistiness behind the old Governor's spectacles as he folded the crumpled page reverently and put it carefully in the breast pocket of his great-coat.

"Humph," thought the secretary, "the old Governor has a kinder heart than any of us suspected."

Then, when the prisoner was pardoned and came from his cell, people grasped him by the hand and said: "Our eloquence and perseverance saved you. The old Governor could not withstand the pressure we brought to bear on him!"

But the secretary knew, and the old Governor, too—God bless him for his human heart! They knew that it was the sacred influence of a little child's letter that had done it all—that a dimpled baby hand had opened those prison doors.—Chicago News.

CLEVELAND'S
SUPERIOR TO ROYAL.

Rutgers College (the New Jersey State Scientific College)
New Brunswick, N. J., July 7, 1885.

Analyses and careful examinations of Cleveland's Superior and Royal Baking Powders enable us to bear testimony to the superiority of Cleveland's. It yields more carbonic acid gas than the Royal, and contains no ammonia salts.

Cleveland's Baking Powder is made of pure substances and is absolutely free from any kind of adulteration. We endorse it most cordially as an honest and efficient article, and one that will give entirely satisfactory results.

CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND & PACIFIC RAILWAY

By reason of its central position and close relation to all principal lines East and West, at initial and terminal points, constitutes the most important mid-continental link in that system of through transportation which invites and facilitates travel and traffic between cities of the Atlantic and Pacific Coasts. It is also the favorite and best route to and from points East, Northeast and Southeast, and corresponding points West, Northwest and Southwest.

The Rock Island system includes in its main line and branches, Chicago, Joliet, Ottawa, La Salle, Peoria, Geneseo, Moline and Rock Island, in Illinois; Davenport, Muscatine, Washington, Fairfield, Ottumwa, Oskaloosa, West Liberty, Iowa City, Des Moines, Indianola, Winterset, Atlantic, Knoxville, Audubon, Harlan, Guthrie Center and Council Bluffs, in Iowa; Gallatin, Trenton, Cameron and Kansas City, in Missouri; Leavenworth and Atchison, in Kansas; Albert Lea, Minneapolis and St. Paul, in Minnesota; Watertown in Dakota, and hundreds of intermediate cities, towns, villages and stations.

THE GREAT ROCK ISLAND ROUTE

Guarantees its patrons that sense of personal security afforded by a solid, thoroughly ballasted road-bed; smooth tracks of continuous steel rail; substantially built culverts and bridges; rolling stock as near perfection as human skill can make it; the safety appliances of patent buffers, platforms and air-brakes; and that exacting discipline which governs the practical operation of all its trains. Other specialties of this route are Transfers at all connecting points in Union Depots, and the unsurpassed comforts and luxuries of its Passenger Equipment.

The Fast Express Trains between Chicago and the Missouri River are composed of well ventilated, finely upholstered Day Coaches, Magnificent Pullman Palace Sleepers of the latest design, and sumptuous Dining Cars, in which elaborately cooked meals are leisurely eaten. [illegible]

THE FAMOUS ALBERT LEA ROUTE

Is the direct and favorite line between Chicago and Minneapolis and St. Paul, where connections are made in Union Depots for all points in the Territories and British Provinces. [illegible]

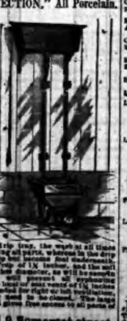
The "PERFECTION," All Porcelain.



WE TAKE pleasure in calling attention of our customers and all interested in sanitary matters to the all porcelain "Perfection," the daily square top Hopper, with trap, made. For perfect cleanliness and simplicity of construction we invite comparison with any Cistern Closet ever manufactured, either home or foreign. It combines, with the utmost simplicity, all the points of a strictly first-class water-closet. The hopper will make itself apparent to all users, in doing away with drip tray, the wash at all times thoroughly scouring all parts, whereas in the drip tray it cannot help but become foul underneath. It has a seal in Trap of 1½ inches, and the soil pipe vent of 2 inches diameter, as will be seen in the above cut, will prevent all syphoning of Trap. The two local or seat vents of 1½ inches diameter are intended for right or left ventilation, the one not being used to be closed. The large handhole in front gives free access to all parts of trap.

Surface Indications

What a miner would very properly term "surface indications" of what is beneath, are the Pimples, Sties, Sore Eyes, Boils, and Cutaneous Eruptions with which people are annoyed in spring and early summer. The effete matter accumulated during the winter months, now makes its presence felt, through Nature's endeavors to expel it from the system. While it remains, it is a poison that festers in the blood and may develop into Scrofula. This condition causes derangement of the digestive and assimilatory organs, with a feeling of enervation, languor, and weariness—often lightly spoken of as "only spring fever." These are evidences that Nature is not able, unaided, to throw off the corrupt atoms which weaken the vital force. To regain health, Nature must be aided by a thorough blood-purifying medicine; and nothing else is so effective as

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

which is sufficiently powerful to expel from the system even the taint of Hereditary Scrofula.

The medical profession indorse AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, and many attestations of the cures effected by it come from all parts of the world. It is, in the language of the Hon. Francis Jewett, ex-State Senator of Massachusetts and ex-Mayor of Lowell, "the only preparation that does real, lasting good."

Sick Headache.

GENTS:—I have been subject to Sick Headache for years, and have tried, in vain, many advertised remedies and several physicians, but all to no purpose. At last I tried your B. B. Bitters—without much faith, I admit—but to-day I can truly say, that after taking the third bottle I have not suffered from it. I recommend it to all my friends; several have been cured by it. My little grandson was permanently cured of Biliousness and Sick Headache, which were so severe as to cause convulsions. They have all ceased since he commenced the use of B.B.B.

THE OLD CANTEEN.

As I marched today the attic
In the farm house old and gray,
Where in years to me so sacred
To the war I marched away;
Hid amid the dust and rubbish
Where the cobwebs intervene,
There I found a relic precious,
My old army tin canteen.

Tho' the cloth was worn to tatters
And the rust was thick o'erspread;
Tho' its strap had long since parted
With the changes it once had wed,
Yet it seemed to me a treasure
Shining bright with glowing sheen
Lighting up the place with glory
Where I found the old canteen.

Back it carried me in fancy
To that day—our first review,
When we marched adown the village
Clad in patriotic hue,
Guns that shone like burnished silver,
Bright against the summer green,
And the box and knapsack polished,
With that army tin canteen.

Where are those that marched that morning,
Elbow touching elbow true?
Many sleep, but few are waiting
For that silent last review;
Gun and knapsack long have vanished
Mid the years that intervene,
This alone of all remaining
My old army tin canteen.

'Mid the march and 'mid the battle,
It was ever near to me;
Sick or weary, tired or wounded,
It was true as friend could be,
And when home at last returning
Two old comrades nestled the scene,
One a soldier maimed and wounded,
One the army tin canteen.

We have older grown together,
Veterans from the soldier days,
And a sight of it hath wakened
Dearest memories to my gaze.
Long will I the treasure cherish,
And when death shall close the scene
May they place us both together,
Me and thee, my old canteen.

MISCELLANEOUS READING

BESSIE'S CHOICE.

It was a pleasant sight, that tall, stalwart young man, standing beside the rustic seat where a young girl sat fashioning some dainty article for her own use, out of a heap of muslins and ribbons in her lap.

His brow was frank and open and there was an honest look in the brown eyes that gave his countenance a very pleasant aspect, while her face was fresh and sweet as a half-open rosebud.

While his eyes were fixed intently upon her face, she did not lift hers from her work, though the shifting color in her cheeks showed that she was not so unconscious of his gaze as she seemed.

Robert Gordon had been talking absently and disconnectedly upon various topics, and which were evidently foreign to the subject which was uppermost in his thoughts.

Then followed a silence of some minutes, when Robert, with a visible effort, broke the silence thus:

"I've been coming to see you for some time, Bessie, and I suppose you know for what purpose?"

Bessie opened her eyes wide with an air of innocent surprise.

"I, Robert? How should I know what you have come for?"

The honest young fellow, quite unused to the contradictory ways of women, was not a little staggered at a reply so different from what he had expected.

"I supposed that you could not help knowing that I came for you."

"Dear me! such a thought never once entered my mind," said the deceitful little minx, shaking her head with demure gravity.

Worse and worse! But that honest, straight-forward heart knew of only one way to the object he had in view, and that the most direct.

"I did, Bessie; and I have come to-day to ask you to marry me?"

Now, in spite of her affected unconsciousness, Bessie was not ignorant of the nature of Robert's feelings for her, and to what they tended.

Many times she had looked forward to this hour, mentally rehearsing the vows and protestations that would be poured into her not unwilling ear, and she grew quite indignant at a realization so little like what her glowing imagination had pictured.

"She would show him that she was not to be so easily won as he thought," was her inward comment.

"Really, I don't know what encouragement I have given you to ask me such questions as that," she said, aloud.

"Nevertheless, I do ask it, Bessie."

Holding up the bow she was fashioning, Bessie surveyed it with a critical eye.

"I like you very well, as a friend, of course; but as to marrying you, why, that is quite another thing."

Robert looked blank enough at these words, but he was not a man to fear the truth, or to shrink from the pain it brought him.

"You don't love me well enough for that?"

Bessie's heart beat a little more quickly at this question. But she was determined to spur her lover into some expression of disappointment, if not of love, more in accordance with what she thought the occasion demanded.

"No; I don't think so."

Robert drew his breath hardly between his shut teeth.

"I'm sorry. I had thought—had hoped! But it is useless to speak of that now."

"Sorry!" repeated Bessie to herself, with scornful emphasis, as she thought how her favorite heroes of romance would have expressed themselves on such an occasion.

Then aloud.

"Oh, you'll easily find some one to console you."

"However that may be, I hope you will be very happy."

He was gone. Bessie watched him as he sprang over the stile, into the road, with a feeling of mingled disappointment and anger.

"Love me, indeed!" she ejaculated, with a scornful toss of her head; "I don't believe he knows the meaning of the word!"

Then, as her thoughts reverted to Dr. Martin's bland and smiling face, she thought how different he would have expressed himself.

These reflections ended in a sigh—a sigh of mingled disappointment and regret; far down below the surface, covered by many foolish imaginings, more than a kindly feeling for the honest heart she had rejected.

She neither meant nor expected that he would have taken her quite so literally, and grew quite angry at the thought that he could give her up so easily.

As she stood thus, she heard a step on the graveled walk, and turning, saw the shapely, well-dressed form of Dr. Martin.

Catching a glimpse of her among the shrubbery, he came eagerly forward.

"Ah, Miss Bessie, he said, with the courtly bow upon which he prided himself. "Looking as charming as ever, I see; the roses in your hair not half so bright as those blooming in your cheeks."

Bessie smiled; the roses alluded to blooming still more redly at the words, and the admiring glance that accompanied them.

"It's a delightful evening for a walk," resumed the doctor, who was not slow to see the effect of his words upon the unsophisticated girl before him. "Can I not prevail upon you to take a walk with me across the meadow down to the wood yonder?"

Glad to escape her uneasy thoughts and charmed with the words and manner of her companion, Bessie assented and together the two walked down the lane in the direction suggested by Dr. Martin.

The doctor had a purpose in this, having the same object in view that urged Robert Gordon on in his fruitless suit. But he had an older and cooler head, and was careful not to frighten the bird he was trying to cage by a too abrupt announcement of his intentions.

He commenced by expatiating on the beauties of nature, then speaking of love in general, and from thence passing in easy transitions to that of his own.

He allowed himself full play, declaring his love in the most glowing terms, and declaring that he could not live if she refused to requiet it.

Bessie had not learned, then, that the man who expresses his love the most easily generally feels it least. Her imaginations, if not her heart, was captivated, by the fervid eloquence of her suitor, and she could not help contrasting him with poor Robert, and greatly to the disadvantage of the latter.

Still she ventured to express some doubt as to the sincerity of his vows, perhaps for the pleasure of hearing him repeat them.

"Ah! exclaimed the gallant doctor, with clasped hands and lifted eyes; "if only some great danger menaced you, that I may prove how easily I could peril my life in your defence! On this turf let me swear!"

Here he was interrupted by a low bellow, and looking up, he saw, to his terror and dismay, a large bull on the brow of a hill opposite, pawing the earth and glaring at them with red and angry eyes.

Receiving as a sort of challenge the flourish of a white cambric which attended the doctor's eloquent appeal, the enraged animal bore rapidly down upon them.

The last that Bessie saw of Dr. Martin was the rear view of his long legs as they disappeared over the nearest wall.

She essayed to follow, but, paralyzed with terror, her limbs sank under their burden.

Just then Robert Gordon sprang over into the field, and with a loud whoop and flourish of his arms, sought to divert the animal from his course.

For a moment the bull paused and then more enraged than before, charged upon his new assailant.

When he got within a few feet of him Robert threw the coat on his arm directly across his horns and then jumped nimbly one side.

Blinded by the garment, and by rage the bull made directly to the spot where he had stood, and passing by him, dove down to the valley beneath.

Robert lost no time in picking up Bessie, who had fallen on the grass, and conveying her to a place of safety over the wall, over which Dr. Martin had made such a hasty exit, placed her beneath a tree.

Then perceiving how pale she was looking, he went to get some water from the brook, just as Dr. Martin came forward, who, now that all danger was over, was profuse in his offers of assistance.

There came a sudden flash of scorn to Bessie's eyes that brought the color to her face.

"Really, Dr. Martin, if this is the way you peril life in my defence, I desire to be excused from any further manifestation of your love and devotion. It is a thousand pities that you should be interrupted in the pretty speech you were making."

"I assure you, Miss Bessie——" stammered the doctor.

Then perceiving that Robert was returning he slunk away without finishing his sentence.

Robert was somewhat surprised to see Bessie standing erect, with her eyes and cheeks so bright, though he might have guessed something of the cause, as he followed his discomfited rival's retreating form.

The brave and modest young fellow was considerably abashed by the thanks with which Bessie overwhelmed him.

"You cannot be more thankful than I am," he said, with some emotion, as he thought of the danger she had escaped. "Fortunately I saw you going into the meadow; and, knowing that the animal was there, came to warn you."

Drawing her arm in his they proceeded homeward.

They walked on in silence until they came to the garden gate; there they both paused.

"Robert," faltered Bessie, "if you should ask me the same question that you asked me a few hours ago, I would not answer you as I did."

"How would you answer me?" said Robert, a sudden light coming into his eyes, as he spoke.

"Ask me again, and I will tell you."

"Will you marry me, Bessie?"

"Yes."

In a transport of joy Robert caught her in his arms. Then a sudden doubt crossed his mind.

"You do not say this from gratitude, Bessie?"

"No, no, you foolish Robert!" said Bessie, smiling through her tears. "I loved you all the time, only——"

Here she made a full confession of her folly.

Robert only replied by drawing her still more closer to him. But certain it is that as lover or husband, he gave her no occasion to make any similar complaint in the future.

LITTLE KATE AND I.

We didn't wait for an income to marry on, little Kate and I. We had no rich relations to leave us legacies or to send pearl necklaces, diamond ornaments or thousand dollar bonds for wedding presents. I was simply a brakeman on the Eastern Michigan Railway, a long and lonely stretch of rails over desolate marshes, steep mountain grades and solitary sweeps of praire land; she was the bright-eyed waitress in one of the restaurants along the line. But when I fell from the platform when the great accident happened, you heard of the great accident, I suppose, when there was such a shocking loss of life—it was Katie's care and nothing else that brought me back into the world I had so nearly quitted for good and all!

"I would have done it for anybody, Mark!" said she, when I tried to thank her.

"Would you?" said I. "But it isn't everybody that would have done it for me, Katie!"

So I asked her to marry me and she said "Yes." And I took a little cottage on the edge of the Swampscott woods, and furnished it as well as I could, with red carpet, cheese-cloth curtains at the windows, and a set of walnut chairs that I made myself, with seats of rushes woven in by old Billy, the Indian, who carried his baskets and mats around the country, and Mrs. Perkins, the parson's wife, made us a wedding cake, and so we got married. Pretty soon I found that Kate was pining a little.

"What is it, sweetheart?" said I. "Remember it was a contract between us that we were to have no secrets from each other! Are you not perfectly happy?"

"Oh, yes, yes!" cried Kate, hiding her face on my shoulder. "But it's my mother Mark. She's getting old, and if I could only go East to see her, just once before the Lord takes her away!"

It was then I felt the sting of my poverty most. If I had only been a rich man to have handed her out a check, and said: "Go at once!" I think I could have been quite happy.

"Never mind, sweetheart," said I, stroking her hair, "we'll lay up a few dollars from month to month, and you shall go out to see her before she dies!"

And with that little Kate was forced to be content. But there was a hungry, homesick look upon her face which went to my heart to see.

One stormy Autumn night we were belated on the road, for the wind was terrible, shaking the century old pines and oaks, as if they were nothing more than tall swamp grasses, and driving through the ravines with a shriek and a howl like a pack of hungry wolves. And the heavy rains had raised the streams so that we were compelled to go carefully and slowly over the bridges and keep a long look ahead for fear of accidents.

I was standing at my post in front of the second passenger car, stamping my feet on the platform to keep them warm, and hoping little Kate would not be perturbed at my long absence, when the news agent came chuckling out.

"We're to stop at Stumpville station," said he.

"Nonsense," said I. "I know better. This train never stops short of Waukesha city, least of all when we are running to make up for lost time, as we are to-night."

"Oh, but this is an exceptional occasion," said Johnny Mills (which was the news agent's name). "We're going to put an old woman off. She has lost her ticket, she says. More likely she never had one. Goes on as though she had her pockets picked."

"Which is the one?" said said I, turning to look at the end window of the car which was at the rear.

"Don't you see? The old party at the back of the two fat women in the red shawls. She is haranguing Jones now."

"I see," said I. It was a little old woman in a black silk poke bonnet, a respectable cloth cloak, bordered with ancient fur, and a long green veil, who was earnestly talking and gesticulating with the conductor. But he shook his head passed on, and she sank back in a helpless little heap behind the green veil, and I could see her take a small handkerchief from a small basket and put it piteously to her eyes.

"It's too bad," said I. "Jones might remember that he once had—if he hasn't now—a mother of his own."

"And lose his place on the road," said Mills. "No, no old fellow, all that sort of thing does very well to talk about, but don't work in real life."

So he went into the next car, and the signal to slack up came presently. I turned to Mr. Jones, the conductor, who just then stepped out on the platform:

"Is it for that old lady?" He answered "yes." Said I, "How far does she want to go?" "To Stumpville," said he.

"You needn't stop, Mr. Jones," said I, "I'll pay her fare."

"You!" he echoed.

"Yes, I," said I. "I'll take her to my own house until she can telegraph to her friends, or something. My wife will be glad to see her, I know, for the sake of her own old mother out East!"

"Just as you please," said Jones.

We did not stop at Stumpville station after all, but put on more steam and ran as fast as it was safe to drive our engine and when, a little past midnight we reached Swampscott—where we were due at 7 30, Pierre Rene, the Frenchman, came on board to relieve me, and I helped my old lady off the train, flat basket, traveling bag and all.

"Am I to be put off, after all?" said she, with a scared look round her.

"Cheer up, ma'am," said I, "You are all right. Now, then—look out for the step! Here we are."

"And you are the kind man who paid my fare?" said she. "But my daughter and husband will repay you when——"

"All right, ma'am," said I. "And now, if you'll take my arm, we'll be home in a quarter of an hour."

"But," said she, "why can't I go directly to my destination?"

"It's middling late, ma'am," said I, "and the houses don't stand shoulder to shoulder in Swampscott. My nearest neighbor is a mile and a half away. But never fear ma'am, I've a wife that will be glad to bid you welcome for the sake of her mother."

She murmured a few words of thanks, but she was old and weary, and the path was rough and uneven, in the very teeth of a keen November blast—and walking wasn't an easy task. Presently we came to the little cottage on the edge of Swampscott woods, where the light glowed warmly through the Turkey red curtains.

"Oh, Mark, dearest, how late you are!" cried Kate, making haste to open the door. "Come in quick, out of the wind. Supper is all ready, and—but who is that with you?"

In a hurried whisper I told her all.

"Did I do right, Kate?" I asked.

"Right? Of course you did. Ask her to come in at once, and I'll put another cup and saucer on the table."

Tenderly I assisted the chilled and wearied old lady across the threshold.

"Here's my wife," said I. "And here's a cup of smoking hot coffee and some of Kate's own biscuits and chicken pie! You'll be all right when the cold is out of your joints a bit."

"You are very, very welcome," said Kate, brightly, as she advanced to untie our visitor's veil and loosen the folds of her cloak. But all of a sudden, I heard a cry, "Mother, oh, mother!"

"Hold on, Kate!" said I, with the coffee pot still in my hand, as I had been lifting it from the fire. "This is never—"

"But it is Mark!" cried out Kate breathlessly. "It's mother; my own mother! Oh, help me, dearest, quickly, she has fainted away!"

But she was all right again, presently, sitting by the fire with her feet on one of the warm cushions, which Kate had knit with wooden needles, and drinking hot coffee.

It was all true. The unfortunate passenger whose pocket had been picked on the train, and to whose rescue I had come, was no other than my wife's own mother who had determined to risk the perils of a journey to the far West to see her child once again.

NOT OF ONE OPINION.

"My dear," remarked Mrs. De Wiggs at the breakfast table this morning, "Dio Lewis says that hot water will cure all diseases."

"He does, does he?" said Mr. De Wiggs.

"Yes, and persons who use the treatment ought never to be sick at all."

"Well, I don't believe it."

"Why?"

"You know how sick I am all the time."

"But you have never tried the hot water cure."

"What! never tried it!" ejaculated De Wiggs, as he sided toward the door. "Why I've been in hot water ever since I married you."

He got outside just in time to miss a teacup fired at him as a parting salute.

TEACHING THE GIRLS.

Give your girls a thorough education. Teach them to wash, to iron and darn stockings, to sew on buttons, to make their own dresses. Teach them to make bread, and that a good kitchen lessens the doctor's account. Teach them that he only lays up money whose expenses are less than his income, and that all grow poor who have to spend more money than they receive. Teach them that a calico dress paid for fits better than a silken one unpaid for. Teach them that a full healthy face displays a greater lustre than fifty cosmetic beauties. Teach them to purchase, and to see that the account corresponds with the purchase. Teach them that an honest mechanic in his work dress is a better object of esteem than a dozen haughty finely-dressed idlers. Teach them that the happiness of matrimony depends neither on external appearances nor on wealth, but on the man's character. Teach them good common sense, self help and industry.

HE SUCCEEDED TOO WELL.

"Now," said the bride, "Henry, I want you to understand distinctly that I do not wish to be taken for a bride. I am going to behave exactly as if I were an old married woman. So, dearest, do you think me cold and unloving if I treat you very practically when there is anybody by."

"I don't believe I can pass for an old married man. I am so fond of you that I am bound to show it. I am sure to give the snap away."

"No, you mustn't. It's easy enough. And I insist that you behave just like old married men do. Do you hear?"

"Well, darling, I'll try; but I know I will not succeed."

The first evening of their arrival the bride retired to her chamber and the groom fell in with a poker party, with whom he sat playing cards, until four o'clock in the morning. His wife spent the weary hours weeping. At last he turned up and met his grief-striken bride with the hilarious question: "Well, ain't I done the old married man act like a daisy?" She never referred to the subject again, and everybody knew after that they had just been married.

HE HADN'T BEEN AT GETTYSBURG.

"No, I didn't lose that leg in the war," replied a stranger yesterday, as he leaned up against the cold wall of the postoffice. "I used to claim that my leg was shot off at the battle of Antietam, but one day something happened to cure me of lying. I was stumping along in highway in Ohio, and stopped at a farm house to beg for dinner."

"Where did you lose that leg?" asked the woman.

"At Gettysburg."

"Sit down till I call my husband."

"He came in from the barn, and I was asked where my regiment was stationed in the battle."

"In the cemetery," I replied.

"Oh! Well, my son Bill was in the cemetery, too. I'll call him in."

"Bill soon came in, and he wanted to know what particular gravestone I took shelter behind. I said it was a Scotch granite monument."

"Oh!" grunted Bill. "My brother Bob was behind just such a stone, and I'll call him in."

"Bob came in, and he swore a mighty oath that he was there alone. He sort o' pre-empted that monument, and remembered the inscription to a word. However, to give me the benefit of a doubt, I was asked to name my company and regiment."

"Company B, Fifth Ohio," I promptly answered.

"Oh! Brother Jim was in that company. I'll call him in."

"Jim came in, took a square look at me, and remarked:"

"Stranger, our regiment wasn't within two hundred miles of Gettysburg during the war!"

"I said Twenty-fifth! Of course the Fifth wasn't there."

"Oh! I'll call in my brother Aaron. He was in the Twenty-fifth."

"Aaron came in, called me a wooden-legged liar, and I was pitched over the fence into the road. They've got this war business down so fine that you can't go around playing roots on the country no more, and the best way is to own right up that you got drunk and got in the way of a locomotive."

A taking title—Pick-pocket.

A Louisville preacher, who has no late night work away from home, calls for a tax of $100 on pistols. A better scheme would be to raise the price of whiskey to $100 a drink.

Elizabeth Cady Stanton declares that the Christian religion hasn't benefited women to any considerable extent. It has given her a place in which to display her millinery, however.

THE VALUE OF KNOWING HOW.

While Judge Tracy was on the circuit, going from court, his trace broke. The Judge spent over a half hour trying to fix it, but to no purpose. His patience was exhausted, and he expressed his vexation in words. A negro came along, and the Judge told him of his trouble. The negro let out the trace, cut a hole in it, and the job was done.

"Why," said the Judge, "could I not have thought of that?"

"Well, marster," said the negro, "don't you know that some folks is just naturally smarter than t'others?"

"That's so," said the Judge. "What shall I pay you for fixing my trace?"

"Well, marster, fifty cents will do," said the negro.

"Fifty cents!" said the Judge. "You were not five minutes at it."

"I do not charge you fifty cents for doing it," said the negro. "I charge you twenty-five cents for doing it, and twenty-five cents for knowing how to do it."

TOO PRACTICAL.

There is a touch of pathos in the following amusing incident, taken from a Chicago paper:

They were traveling on a railroad train when a collision occurred. The old lady was hurt quite seriously and could not speak for some time, although conscious of what was taking place around her. Some of the passengers thought she was dead. John feared so too, but instead of giving way to unavailing grief, he flew around doing all he could for his wife's recovery. When she was pronounced out of danger, she said, reproachfully:

"John!"

"Well, Samanthy?"

"You didn't beller a bit there when they all thought I was dead."

"Well, Samanthy," said John in some confusion, "you see I was flying around trying to bring you to. I didn't have no time to beller."

"Yes, John," said the old lady, feelingly, with a suggestion of tears in her voice, "but couldn't ye beller a little bit now, John, jist for the looks of things?"

"Why, Samanthy! If I was to beller now, folks would say I was doin' it 'cause yer was goin' to git well."

"I never thought o' that," said the old lady sadly. "I wish to goodness, John, you'd have bellered some at the right time then! 'Twould have been real comfortin' to me."

REMARKABLE RECUPERATION.

D. M. Ferry & Co., the well-known Seedsmen, of Detroit, Mich., announce that they are on their feet again, and ready and anxious to receive orders for seeds from every one of their old customers, and from as many new ones as feel kindly disposed toward them. They are in condition to fill promptly every order with new seeds of the best quality. On January 1st, their immense warehouse was destroyed by fire. It was filled with probably the largest stock of assorted seeds ever gathered under one roof. Their books and papers were all saved, and every person who had ordered seeds from them will be supplied with his usual stock. They had large quantities of seeds in their warehouses on their seed farms, in the hands of their growers and not yet delivered, and on the way to Europe, which together with their fully stocked branch seed store in Windsor, Ontario, close at hand, and the free and vigorous use of the telegraph and cable enabled them to secure a new stock in a remarkably short time. Before the fire was subdued they had secured new quarters and were devoting all their energies to their customers' interest. In thirty days from the fire they were in perfect working order again. When we consider the magnitude of their business, the appalling destruction of property at the most unfortunate season of the year, we doubt if the annals of history furnish a case of such rapid recuperation. Such energy deserves success.

ABOUT HOPATCONG.

The Fish Commissioners met in Trenton last week and President George W. Campbell, of the Bertrand Island Club, at Lake Hopatcong, received the appointment of Warden of Morris county, with the condition that his services were not to cost the State anything as there are already two wardens in the county. Mr. Campbell is one of a number of wealthy gentlemen who are interested in the welfare of Lake Hopatcong, and he and other members of the Bertrand Island Club desired to have some one authorized to see that the fishing laws were properly observed at the charming resort. They are willing to spend time and money to capture and punish violators of the law, but lacked the authority to act.

The contract for the erection of the new "Hotel Brisbin" at Lake Hopatcong has been awarded to John J. Miller, of Newark, who it is said will be assisted by a Trenton firm. The building is to be 100 feet wide by 260 feet long and the contract calls for its completion by June 1st. It is said that the contract price is about $70,000. It is also reported that the Central Railroad Company is talking of putting in a new switch through the ravine, from near Minnisink station to the Mt. Arlington property, for the purpose of carrying the materials for this building and freight to this part of the lake in the future. Ice for the use of the big hotel is also being gathered and is stacked on the shore until an ice house can be erected.—Era.

A Dominion statesman once characterized the just completed Canadian Pacific Railroad as a line "running from hell to nowhere through a swamp."

A Swartzwood correspondent of the Sussex Register says: "George A. Blakely, of New Brunswick, one of the corps of State Surveyors, has been making a survey the past week of the little Swartzwood Lake, having been sent there by State Surveyor Geo. H. Cook. We understand the Survey was made by the State, with the intention of leasing the lake to some rich gentleman of New Brunswick, who will stock it with German carp. It being already stocked with bass, and build a beautiful club house on its shores.

Until fifty years ago deer were quite plentiful in Morris county and other parts of Northern New Jersey but the famous deep snow of the winter of 1835-6 almost exterminated them. Great numbers of them died in their haunts in the woods, and many of them sought food and shelter in the barnyards of the farmers, some of whom put ear marks on them so they would know them. After that winter most of the survivors emigrated and some of them with these peculiar marks were afterward killed in New York and Pennsylvania. After that winter deer hunting ceased to be a pastime in this part of New Jersey.

The Constitutionalist.

W. L. FORCE & A. L. FORCE,
EDITORS AND PROPRIETORS.

MUGWUMP.

Mugwump is a politically invented term of modern times. It was ushered into use about eighteen months ago by the adherents of Mr. Blaine as a disparaging epithet against those many Republicans who openly supported Mr. Cleveland for the Presidency, because, in their sincere judgment, he was, although a Democrat, by far the better candidate of the two.

What the word really means we know not. Possibly some distinguished partisan historian may in course of time enlighten the world upon that point.

It was no doubt intended to be an engine of terrible political destruction, but, like some other overloaded guns, it did more damage at the breech than at the muzzle.

The Whigs once sought to demolish Democrats by calling them Loco Focos.

That gun kicked over the gunners and never a Democrat did it harm.

So with the Independent Republicans, not a man of them is in the least degree injured or disturbed by the slurring cry of Mugwump.

The word is certainly devoid of poetical beauty, yet, we are inclined to do it honor.

Why?

Because, politically rendered, it signifies a numerous class of intelligent, discriminating, self thinking and freedom loving voters, who valued and still value patriotism above party, honesty dearer than pelf, and who, without a selfish motive or particle of disguise, cast their ballots for Grover Cleveland in preference to James G. Blaine.

And furthermore we honor the name of Mugwump.

For the reason, events have conclusively shown that those gentlemen, upon whom the title was cast as a designed reproach, aided in gloriously advancing the country's good.

They are perfectly and properly satisfied.

At a banquet in Boston, March 4, given in honor of the first anniversary of President Cleveland's inauguration, they made the welking ring by singing the following

MUGWUMP SONG.
AIR—"Sparkling and Bright."

That gay old bird whose song you have heard
In election's gloomy weather,
The bold Mugwump, still pipes from the stump,
And moults not a single feather.

CHORUS.

Then the strain prolong, of the Mugwump's song,
As merrily chirpeth he,
"Tra, lilly lol lol," from the rise of Sol
Till he sinks in the western sea.

"Fly away from me," said the G. O. P.,
"You're a bold and shameless traitor";
But the Mugwump smiled, "Very well, my child,
You will surely need me later."
Cho.—Then the strain prolong, etc.

The unhappier cried, "You must stay outside,
We are pressed for room for the party";
Said the bird, with a wink, "In the fall, I think,
I will be on hand, my hearty."
Cho.—Then the strain prolong, etc.

So the cards may be played and the tricks be laid
For the politicians' ones;
But the old Mugwump holds the winning trump
That takes all the knaves and the deuces.
Cho.—Then the strain prolong, etc.

His voice, unbought, will be warmly sought
In time by the folks that need him,
But he'll perch on the crest of whoe'er strikes best,
For reform, for truth, and freedom.
Cho.—Then the strain prolong, etc.

CENTENNIAL.

Senator Gorman, of Maryland, has introduced into the National Senate a bill providing for the joint celebration by all the Republics on the American continent of the one hundredth anniversary of the going into governing effect of the United States Constitution—March 4, 1889.

We like that proposed concurrent action and hope it will receive the unanimous approval of Congress.

The event Senator Gorman seeks to nationalize as a Centennial is in every particular deserving of enthusiastic honor.

What can equal in renown the Constitution of the United States, that matchless instrument, that result of wise statesmanship, by virtue of which now exists the best system of government upon earth.

The Constitution, the bulwark of civil and religious liberty, which has stood the test of peace and of war for nearly a century, and which is to-day stronger than it was at the beginning.

The idea of calling together representatives from sister Republics and pointing them to our steadfast form of Constitutional government, a century old, is not only pleasant in theory, but would be practically advantageous in augmenting patriotic love.

Let us have a grand Centennial in 1889!

THE CHASE BILL.

The following is the full text of the Chase bill just passed in the House of Assembly. The words printed in italics show the changes proposed to the law as it now stands upon the statute books of the State:

A supplement to the act entitled "A supplement to an act entitled 'An act respecting bridges'" [Revision], approved April tenth, one thousand eight hundred and forty-six; which supplement was approved April fifth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-eight.

WHEREAS, The State reserves to itself the right to determine in each case whether the navigable boundary waters of this State shall be crossed or occupied by bridges, viaducts or other fixed structures, and, if so, when, where and in what manner; and

WHEREAS, Doubts have been expressed as to the construction and effect of the act passed for that purpose, approved April fifth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-eight, to which this act is a supplement; therefore, to remove all such doubts,

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the first and second sections of said act, to which this act is a supplement, entitled "A supplement to an act entitled 'An act respecting bridges'" [Revision] approved April tenth, one thousand eight hundred and forty-six, which act was approved April fifth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-eight, be so amended that they shall, respectively, read as follows:

(1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That no bridge, viaduct or fixed structure shall be erected by any person or corporation over or in any part of the navigable waters separating this State from other States, where the tide ebbs and flows, without express permission of the Legislature of this State, given by statute for that purpose; provided that nothing herein shall be construed to forbid the erection of docks or wharves.

2. And be it enacted, That no law heretofore passed, or action or organization under it, shall be construed so as to authorize any such bridge, viaduct or fixed structure not now erected.)

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Seton Hall College, at South Orange, N. J., was damaged by fire on Tuesday last to the amount of $25,000.

Next Monday is the time fixed for the opening of the Delaware and Raritan Canal, if the weather continues favorable.

Ex-Senator Chaffee died on Tuesday last at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. U. S. Grant, Jr., at Salem Centre, Westchester county, N. Y.

The President's closing reception at the White House, on Tuesday evening last, was a brilliant affair, and a very handsome close to the season's series.

The Philadelphia and Reading Railroad have paid $144,827.27, on account of the taxes assessed against its leased lines in this State. This tax is said to be much larger on some of the companies than those of last year.

Among the many candidates for the office of Public Printer, we hear the name of Mr. Hugh Dalton, of the New York Daily News, prominently advocated. He has always been a hard working Democrat and deserves the support of the New York and New Jersey delegations.

A negro named "Mingo Jack" outraged a white girl named Angie Herbert, near Eatontown, Monmouth Co., last Friday. He was arrested, and lodged in a lock-up. During Friday night a party of unknown men and boys took the prisoner from his cell and hung him to the door of the lock-up.

It has been decided by the Courts that no boundary fence can be made of barbed wire, without the consent of the owner of the adjoining property. The owner of a barbed wire fence along a highway is also liable for any damage to persons or stock that may be passing along said highway. The murderous contrivance ought to be abolished altogether.

The President made two good appointments in this State last week, that of Mr. A. E. Gordon, editor of the New Brunswick Times, for United States Marshal, and ex-Congressman Fiedler, as Postmaster of Newark. Mr. Gordon had the support of Hon. Robert S. Green. There was a strong pressure brought to bear upon the President by influential politicians, to appoint another man as Marshal, but Mr. Green's candidate carried the day. Mr. Gordon has done life-long service for the Democratic party, and, being well qualified for the position assigned him, is at last awarded just recognition of his labors.

A new political party is threatened. The action of the Knights of Labor of Illinois in forming such a party is attracting much attention in that section. They declare in their platform: "We have formed a new national political party, to be known as the United Labor Party of America, for the purpose of organizing and directing the great political power of the industrial masses as a political organization; and we will cast our ballots for no one who will not pledge himself to stand firmly by our principles." They call upon all voters to unite in the effort to emancipate the wage-workers of the country from "the iron hand of the capitalist." They declare that the alarming development and aggressiveness of great capitalists and corporations, unless checked, will invariably lead to the pauperization and hopeless degradation of the toiling masses.

United States Senator John F. Miller died at his home in Washington on Monday last. Senator Miller was born in Indiana, in 1831, his parents being Virginians. He received an academical education at South Bend, and was fitted for college at Chicago, but did not enter; commenced the study of law in 1849, and was graduated at the New York State Law School in 1852. He commenced practice at South Bend, but soon went to California, where he practiced law for three years, when he returned to Indiana, and resumed practice there. In 1860 he was a member of the State Senate, but resigned to enter the army, and was soon placed in command of a brigade, serving under Sherman, Buell, Rosecrans and Thomas, and receiving severe wounds in the battle of Stone River and Liberty Gap. He was a Republican candidate for Presidential elector in 1872, in 1876 and 1880. He was a member of the California State Constitutional Convention in 1879; was elected to the United States Senate as a Republican, to succeed Newton Booth, and took his seat March 4, 1881.

The change in California, and the expected change in Indiana, where Senator Harrison, it is thought, will be succeeded by a Democrat, brings the Republican majority in the next Senate to four, with the likelihood that it will be still further reduced. The Republican Senators whose terms expire in 1887 exceed the number of Democratic Senators who go out next year, and many of them are from doubtful States. The Republican majority in the next Senate, if any, will be very small.

BILLS AFFECTING PLAINFIELD.

Senator Livingston, on Tuesday last, introduced a bill to the Senate, No. 177, which "provides to give incorporated fire departments power to increase the annual sums to be raised, whenever the public necessities may require, not exceeding 25 per cent. of the total value of all the property of the department." This bill is meant for the relief of the Plainfield Fire Department.

On Wednesday Assemblyman Corbin introduced a bill to the House, No. 380, "providing for the appointment of a Board of Fire Commissioners to consist of three persons by the Common Council in each city of the State, which shall accept this act by a majority vote." This bill provides for the abolishment of the present system of our mode of electing Fire Commissioners and the raising of revenue for fire purposes. Under its provisions three Commissioners are appointed by the Mayor, with consent of the Council, and a revenue derived for fire purposes by a tax upon the assessed valuation of property, not to exceed one quarter of one per cent. of the total amount assessed. The Commissioners are to serve for three years, one being appointed each year.

REPRESENTATIVE GREEN'S VIEWS.

Congressman R. S. Green has written the following letter to the editor of the Irish World, expressing his views on the great question now agitating the country regarding Ireland's welfare. It places Mr. Green among the many friends of America to the Irish cause:

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, U. S.,
WASHINGTON, D. C.

MR. PATRICK FORD, Editor Irish World.

DEAR SIR:—The controlling position of the Irish patriots in Parliament gladdens the heart of every one who admires the restless energy, the irrepressible determination, and the undying love of country which are the characteristics of the Irish people. It gives promise of the fulfilment of O'Connell's hope and the realization of Meagher's dream. I sincerely trust that the end for which your countrymen have so long and so bravely contended is on the eve of attainment.

Yours truly,
ROBERT S. GREEN.

CONFIRMATIONS BY THE SENATE.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—The Senate, in executive session on March 1, confirmed the following nominations:

Postmasters: S. E. Lippincott, Burlington, N. J.; W. J. Poulson, Flemington, N. J.; W. L. Force, Plainfield, N. J.; Darius Dreher, Stroudsburg, Pa.; J. M. Judd, Emporium, Pa.; A. K. Lindermann, Troy, Pa.; W. S. Braden, New Brighton, Pa.; J. A. McBeth, Connellsville, Pa.; M. W. Allen, Titusville, Pa.; W. C. Loor, Greensburg, Pa.; Wm. Heltzel, Hanover, Pa.; T. P. Naughtin, Neenah, Wis.; J. T. Carwile, Buffalo, Wy.; J. W. Renfroe, Atlanta, Ga.; Stephen Belding, Washington, Ind.; G. E. Finney, Columbus, Ind.; Adolph Engleman, Estiville, Ill.; B. Bennet, Worthington, Minn.; J. H. Evans, Wabasha, Minn.; J. H. Koop.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Gov. Abbett sent to the Senate Monday night his veto of Senator Griggs' bill providing for the trial of bastardy cases in secret. He says in his message that he has grave doubts of the constitutionality of the bill, and that, even if constitutional, it ought not to become a law, as the administration of justice should be public, and people would not long tolerate a secret tribunal for the trial of cases. The Governor the same night approved the bill empowering Common Councils to levy a tax of 1 mill for the founding of public libraries. The following bills were lost in the Senate the same night: H. 702, Mr. Baird's Pharmacy bill, similar to the one passed the same night by the Senate; H. 92, requiring druggists to use a scarlet wrapper for all morphine preparations; H. 209, giving Board controlling construction of school buildings and power to borrow money, not exceeding $31,000. There was excitement in the House Monday night over the Washington street Bridge bill. It began with the resolution of Mr. Low for the appointment of a committee of five to investigate the charge made by one Jackson, at a meeting in Jersey City last week, that he could certify that the members from the counties of Sussex, Warren, Burlington, Cape May, Cumberland, Gloucester, and Hunterdon were all strikers. Several members made violent speeches against the remarks of Jackson, and Mr. Lennon moved that Messrs. Jackson, Quinby, Haines, and E. T. McLaughlin, members of the Citizens' Committee of One Hundred, be excluded from the floor during the present session. The motion was adopted. Mr. Scheele, of Passaic, then made a motion to indefinitely postpone the bridge bill, and Mr. Hudspeth, the father of the bill, moved to indefinitely postpone Mr. Peloubet's Tunnel bill. After much debate both motions were withdrawn and the bills were allowed to resume their places on the calendar. At ten o'clock the substitute for the famous Chase bill, after having passed its second reading without amendment, came up on final passage. Mr. Gourley, of Passaic, took the floor against the bill, and it soon became apparent that he would talk all the rest of the night. He was filibustering for time, and soon launched forth into his own peculiar version of the history of the late civil war. Notwithstanding the fact that Speaker Armstrong ordered the Sergeant-at-Arms to allow no members to leave the chamber, fully one-half of them soon disappeared. Every few moments, having exhausted his special theme, Mr. Gourley paused, and the Chair was compelled to request him to proceed. The following bills were passed in the Senate Monday night: S. 107, the Pharmacy bill, provides for a State Board of Pharmacy, to be appointed by the Governor; S. 84, provides for a fine of $50, instead of $10, for selling liquor without a license; S. 152, provides for the building of farm buildings on lands of a minor when chancellor gives his consent; S. 172, providing for cultivating and draining of swamps and marsh lands; H. 122, supplement to the East Orange drainage act regulating procedure, making and filing of assessments; H. 226, providing that incorrect newspaper advertisements shall not invalidate sale of lands.

In the Senate on Tuesday, Mr. Livingston presented bill No. 177, which gives incorporated fire departments power to increase the annual sums to be raised, whenever the public necessities may require, not exceeding 25 per cent. of the total value of all the property of the department. This bill applies to the Plainfield Fire Department. The Governor sent to the Senate the name of Laurence T. Fell, to be Inspector of Child Labor. S. 23, which Gov. Abbett vetoed, came up under the rules, and after a speech by Mr. Nichols in favor of the bill passing over the veto it was so done by a vote of 11 to 8. This is the bill providing for the trial of bastardy cases in private. The following Republicans voted with the Governor, Fish, Haines and Youngblood, the rest of the Republicans voting for the bill. Mr. McBride was the only Democrat voting against the bill. Mr. Gourley talked in opposition to the Railroad bill for five hours, until nearly 6.30 o'clock in the morning. Mr. Wolverton wearily asked permission of the Pennsylvania Railroad to adjourn. The bill was finally passed by the following vote:

YEAS—Messrs. Alcott, Armstrong, Banks, Beckwith, [illegible]—41.

NAYS—Messrs. Armitage, Baird, Bolton, Chamberlain, [illegible]

ABSENT—Messrs. [illegible]

The bill is a substitute for the Senate's bill. It needs to go back to the Senate for concurrence in its new shape. It is anticipated that Gov. Abbett will veto it. [The full text of the bill will be found in another column.]

The managers of the Laverty impeachment trial were appointed in the House on Wednesday as follows:—Messrs. Parker, Gangewer, Hutchinson, Baxter and Throckmorton.

Mr. Corbin introduced a bill on Wednesday "Providing for a Board of Fire Commissioners in Plainfield."

The House substitute for the Chase bill came up before the Senate on Wednesday. It was laid over for action until Thursday.

Township Elections.

Tuesday last was an unexceptionally fine day for the holding of Township elections. In North Plainfield the contest was more than usually exciting, the election being for Borough officers and Township officers. The People's ticket for Borough officers, with John H. Van Winkle, Democrat, for Mayor, and Ira F. Riker, Democrat, and S. St. John McCutchen, Republican, for Councilmen, was elected by a handsome majority over the straight Republican ticket.

Mr. McCutchen affiliated with the Democratic party in the late Presidential election and is consequently termed a Mugwump by his former Republican friends. The fact that Mr. VanWinkle had no opposition on the other ticket is sufficient evidence of his popularity and the appreciation of his past service as Mayor of the Borough. The two Councilmen elected are well qualified for their positions and will make good and capable officials.

The principal contest for Township officers centered on the candidates for Collector and Assessor. The primary which placed in the field the "People's Ticket" was held first, and nominated the present efficient Republican Collector, Wm. H. Shotwell, who has so faithfully served the people of North Plainfield the past three years. From protestations of party friends, it was expected that Mr. Shotwell would also be nominated on the Republican ticket, but the managers of that party's primary willed it otherwise and threw him overboard, placing in nomination in his stead, Mr. J. N. Spencer, a strong candidate by reason of his long party service and residence, and also his well-known adherence to the Reform Club. Although Mr. Shotwell's friends were sanguine of success, the efforts of his party who were determined to punish him for accepting the nomination on the "People's Ticket" aided by numerous Democrats, who openly bolted that ticket, he was defeated by the small majority of eleven. While regretting the defeat of such a worthy candidate, the people of the Township are congratulating themselves on securing such an able and worthy man as Mr. Spencer to take his place. Mr. Shotwell's defeat is one of those political fortunes of war incomprehensible and unseen until after the smoke of battle has cleared away.

As will be seen below the Republican ticket was elected entire with large majorities for its candidates. Dire fate followed all those Republicans who allowed their names to be placed on the "People's Ticket." Mr. David R. Weaver, who has made a very efficient Town Committeeman, was defeated with the rest, while Mr. Isaac Brokaw for Assessor is re-elected by a larger majority than ever. Mr. Jones, for Freeholder, is also re-elected by a large majority. Below is the vote in full on both tickets:

BOROUGH.

Mayor.
J. H. VanWinkle, 467

Councilmen.
S. St. J. McCutchen, P. 271
Ira Riker, P. 263
Dr. J. H. Cooley, R. 221
G. P. Brown, R. 209

Also, $1,000 for Borough purposes and $1,500 for Borough road tax.

Also, $1,000 for repairs of roads outside of Borough, $1,000 for support of Poor, and $20 for each Committeeman.

The first four persons, receiving the highest number of votes, were elected.

In Fanwood Township the Democrats made a gain of Assessor, re-elected their Freeholder, and lost their Town Committeeman and Town Clerk. The Republicans nominated no one in opposition to Mr. Martine as Freeholder. The majority for the Democratic ticket was 9, the Democrats casting 123 votes to the Republicans 114. The following is the ticket elected:

For Chosen Freeholder—C. W. L. Martine.

For Town Clerk—Norman Dunn, (Rep.)

For Assessor—Charles H. French, (8 maj.)

For Collector—Daniel Terry, (Rep.)

For Town Committee—Wm. Terry, (Rep.)

For Justice of the Peace—John Watterson (5 years), Geo. Kyte, (2 years.)

For Commissioners of Appeal—Thos. R. Mead, James B. Lambert, Thomas M. Paff, Sr.

For Surveyors of Highways—Thomas Lee, Philip R. Radin.

For Overseer of Poor—Levi Darby.

For Constable—Alfonso Laine, (3 yrs.) H. Hand, (Rep. 2 years.)

For Pound Keepers—L. R. Coles, J. R. Roulstone, W. E. Terry, Anthony Farley.

For Judge of Election—John L. Darby.

For Inspector of Election—James Ritchie.

Repairing roads, $1,000; support of poor, $300; incidental expenses, $300; the poor to be provided for at the discretion of the Overseer.

In Warren Township the Democrats elected their ticket with the exception of the Freeholder, Charles Schaffer, the present Republican incumbent, being re-elected.

In Camden City, Jesse W. Pratt, Rep., is elected Mayor by 1,000 majority, also seven out of the eight Republican councilmen voted for.

Essex county goes Republican. In Orange Mayor Hartford, Dem., is re-elected Mayor.

The returns from Union county show that the following named Freeholders have been re-elected:

Fanwood—Director C. W. L. Martine (Dem.)
Union—Geo. W. Doty, (Dem.)
Clark—John Halliday (Dem.)
Cranford—John Isemann, (Dem.)
New Providence—S. P. Dobbie (Dem.)
Summit—W. M. Chapman (Dem.)
Westfield—James T. Pierson (Rep.)
Springfield—Benjamin Roll (Rep.)
Linden—Wm. T. West, (Rep.)

In Somerset county, William S. Potter, Democrat, of Bridgewater Township, who has held the office of Assessor for several years, with credit to the party and people, was defeated by Joseph R. Smith, Republican, by 54 majority. The Republicans of Bridgewater have also elected Freeholder, Town Committeeman, one Justice, etc.

EDSALL'S! EDSALL'S!

WESTFIELD.

At the annual Township election held on Tuesday last, the contest was between the candidates for member of the Town Committee for three years. Mr. Cory, the present incumbent, being on the Republican ticket, and Mr. Kilbourne Tompkins on the Democratic ticket. The friends of both candidates worked hard and earnest for the one of their choice. The result ended in the election of Mr. Tompkins, Democrat, by 38 majority, although the Republican ticket had 90 majority. The whole number of votes cast was 440; Republican ticket, 265, Democratic, 175.

Town Clerk—Charles R. Clark, Dem., 189 votes; Luther M. Whitaker, 251 votes; Whitaker's maj. 62.

For Chosen Freeholders—James T. Pierson, Rep., 269 votes; Ira Lambert, Dem., 164 votes; Pierson's maj., 105.

For Assessor—John M. C. Marsh, Dem., 284 votes; William Schoonover, Rep., 158 votes; Marsh's maj., 126.

For Collector—Isaac L. Scudder, Dem., 145 votes; David T. Pierson, Rep., 293 votes; Pierson's maj., 148.

For Town Committee—Kilbourne Tompkins, Dem., 239 votes; Levi Cory, 201 votes; Tompkin's maj., 38.

The rest of the Republican ticket for the minor offices received an average maj. of 90, except that of the Constable.

For Constable—Clark Prine, Rep., 205 votes; Gus H. Koester, Dem., 223 votes; Koester's maj., 18.

The day passed off very quietly. No angry feelings were manifested all day, although earnest work was done by both parties to get the voters to cast their ballots for their respective candidates.

The Board of Freeholders of Union Co., which will organize in May next, remains Democratic as follows:

Elizabeth—Wm. M. Oliver, John E. Astfalk, Robert Dardis and John M. Pitcairn.
Plainfield—J. Franz Hubbard and A. Vanderbeek.
Rahway—J. D. Belmer and William Howard.
Fanwood—C. W. L. Martine.
New Providence—S. P. Debbie.
Cranford—John Isemann.
Summit—Wilmot M. Chapman.
Union—George W. Doty.
Westfield—J. T. Pierson.
Springfield—J. Martin Roll.
Clark—John A. Halliday.
Linden—Wm. T. West.

The Somerset County Board of Freeholders for next year is as follows:

Bedminster—Geo. W. Ballentine, D.
Bernards—J. R. Heidebrant, D.
Branchburg—W. E. Haver, R.
Bridgewater—Wm. Hardgrove, R.*
Franklin—H. B. Stillman, D.*
Hillsborough—Aug. Bodmer, R.
Montgomery—J. W. Vreeland, R.
North Plainfield—W. E. Jones, R.*
Warren—C. J. Shaffer, R.*
*Reelected.

In Middlesex county the Democrats made large gains. The Board of Freeholders will be Democratic.

The Democrats have gained in many of the counties of the State.

CONSIGNED BY PROMINENT BREEDERS.

The horses will arrive at the American Institute Building, 3d Avenue, between 63d and 64th Sts., New York, and be ready for inspection Friday, March 19, 1886, and thereafter until the sale begins. Buyers are particularly requested TO EXAMINE THE HORSES BEFORE THE DAYS OF SALE. During the hours of sale it is necessary to close the stable against visitors, and there is no opportunity to examine while the horses are under the hammer. A track (1-8 mile) is provided for showing horses in harness within the building. Persons who will take the trouble to examine before-hand can buy horses suited to any useful purpose, also speed stock and breeding stock, as safely as by private purchase. All the horses are pledged by their owners to absolute sale without limit. For catalogue address PETER C. KELLOGG & CO. (Auction Managers of the American Horse Exchange, Limited), Office, 107 John St., New York.

LENT has begun.

MRS. ROOME has recently sold the residence she has just erected on Sycamore avenue, North Plainfield.

ANOTHER harbinger of Spring is the mountain fires that were so beautiful to look at, last Sunday night.

THE regular monthly meeting of the Union Club will be held at its headquarters, next Monday evening.

PORTIONS of Park avenue, North avenue and Front street need a sprinkling of fine crushed stone over their surface.

LESSONS in round dances will be given to pupils at their residences. See advertisement of "S. J. S." in another column.

THE young folk of the Seminary are arranging for a fair in aid of the Fresh Air Fund, to take place at No. 3 First place, Wednesday, April 21st.

A GREAT many new residences have been erected and rented in the vicinity of Tenth street, Broadway and Putnam avenue, during the past few months.

THE Sunday school of the Congregational church will hold a children's service in the interest of home missions, next Sunday evening at seven o'clock.

MR. & MRS. EDWARD S. HOOLEY gave a reception, Saturday evening of last week, upon which occasion they were welcomed back from their honeymoon by a large gathering of friends.

THE supply of electricity for the lights furnished by the Thomas-Houston Co., has been cut off for a few nights owing to a patching of the boiler at Frusch's mills that furnishes the power.

THE Gleaner, is the title of a new Plainfield paper, published once a month in the interest of the Temperance cause, by Mrs. C. Albert Whiting and Miss Minnie A. Baright, editors and publishers.

MR. C. E. JOHNSON the builder, has permanently located his office on Second street, first door east of the City Hotel, where he may be found ready to estimate on every description of carpenter work.

THE quantities of loose, sharp edged, flinty stones on the surface of Park ave., near Second street, roll under the horses feet and cut their hoofs. It wouldn't cost much to remove them, so we call the attention of the Street Committee to the evil.

SPRING has surely come, as the English sparrows are nipping the buds of the maple trees so that they bleed their sap all over the sidewalks. By the way, what good are these birds anyway? They wont touch the worms and do more damage, ten to one, than the latter.

DUNELLEN doesn't take warning from our sister, North Plainfield, but wants to be a Borough all by itself. Such a movement has been progressing for some weeks past, and probably in but a short time a vote of the people in the township will be taken on the question.

Now that the season has so far advanced that the usual extensive supply of benefit entertainments, and "courses," and church concerts and lectures, is almost exhausted, the people regret that the Crescent is not open once in a while. Expressions to such effect are heard every day.

SOMEBODY'S dog or dogs made a raid on the chicken coops of Messrs. Laing, Munger, Berry and Leland of North Plainfield, last Friday night and killed about 75 valuable fowl. They were maliciously bitten through the back but not eaten. No "clue to the perpetrators" is at hand.

NO quorum as usual was present in the city court room, Tuesday evening, the regular meeting night of the Board of Commissioners of the Fire Department. President Jones and Treasurer Cutter came in late, but no other member showed up. A meeting will be called as soon as can be discovered what night will suit all hands.

MR. FRANK C. GREEN will continue to dispose of his present stock of furniture at cost price, preparatory to removal to his new store corner of Park avenue and Second street, where he expects to open on March 20th. There are many bargains now awaiting those desiring good furniture at low prices, at Mr. Green's warerooms on Front street.

THERE are many interested in the Crescent avenue church that think a great mistake will be made if, in the purchase of the new organ, one of only two manuals instead of three be ordered. The cost will be but little more for the latter, and besides being more in keeping with the progressiveness of the church, so many additional effects will be possible.

MR. GEO. F. BROWN having purchased a house and lot on Grove street, North Plainfield next to the residence of Mr. A. R. Darby, has engaged Mr. J. N. Jenkins to move the building of his new purchase to a lot on the corner off Grove street and Linden avenue, and will at once commence the erection of a handsome dwelling house on the site, wherein he will reside when it is completed.

BUSINESS is on its way across the railroad, and soon a number of stores on Park avenue, between Third and Fifth streets, will be seen. The erection of a large brick business building at the corner of Park avenue and Fourth street, is to begin at once. It will be 42x70 feet and will contain three stores, and four flats above. One of the stores is already rented. Mr. Charles E. Jaques, of North Plainfield, is the architect.

LON RANDOLPH of East Third street, the son of an ex-policeman, is credited with the fastest time on record—two blocks in three seconds. Returning from the Mount Olive Baptist church, recently, he saw a black ghost near the Beef Company's office. Those who saw him go testify that the time was a trifle faster than we have recorded, but the above is on the authority of one of the Central Co. (the owners of the oil-cloth works,) who cannot tell a lie.

THE audience gathered in Music Hall, Thursday evening of last week, upon the occasion of the closing entertainment of the Y. M. C. A. Course of this season, were more or less pleased with Geo. Riddle as a reader. His appearance was refined, his manners excellent, his intelligence and culture unquestionable, and his selections of good taste and judgment—yet he was a disappointment in some way. Possibly he was handicapped with too much praise in advance.

THE gasoline lamps under the railroad bridges have been erected on independent posts of their own, and better results may now be expected because the running trains above cannot effect the lamps by the vibration of the structure to which they were formerly attached. By direction of the Mayor the posts were placed just under the edge of the bridges and so out of the way of malicious persons passing on the trains, who might be tempted to throw coal at the glass.

NEXT Wednesday is St. Patrick's Day.

JOHN W. MURRAY, Esq., will sail for Europe on the 31st inst.

PERSONS in need of "mourning goods" will be interested in Edsall's advertisement in this issue.

THE weather for the past few days has been considerably warmer than the same dates of last year.

SOMEONE should offer a reward of five cents a dozen for the return of the missing Fire Commissioners.

ST. PAUL'S Episcopal church at Bound Brook was destroyed by fire early on Wednesday morning last. Cause, incendiarism.

ATTENTION is directed to the auction sale advertised in another column of horses, cattle, farming utensils and 300,000 bricks and materials of a brick yard.

NO ONE seems willing to run for the vacancy that will arise in the Board of Commissioners of the Fire Department. All nominated have declined, so far, to serve.

MR. D. W. LITTELL will shortly commence the erection of a double two-story brick dwelling house on a lot recently purchased by him on Sycamore street, near Fourth.

ATTENTION is directed to the advertisement of valuable real estate at Bound Brook, which will be found in another column. The property is a valuable one and will be sold positively.

TO-DAY at two o'clock will begin the trial of Charles Bock for selling liquor without a license. The trial will take place before a jury in the city court room, and great interest is manifested in the result.

THE project of a branch of the Knights of Labor in this city, is being agitated. Nothing has yet been done, but the scheme is gaining support, and its organization seems possible in the near future.

IN another column Pope Bros. call the attention of the public to their new stock of carpets, rugs and mattings. With an experience of twenty years in the carpet business, the public can safely trust any orders to them.

EVERYTHING in the line of staple and fancy groceries is placed within the reach of the residents of the West End, by the establishment on Liberty street of a first class store under the management of Messrs. Wilson & Warnock.

MRS. SAMUEL H. STEVENSON, formerly residing in this city on West Front Street, died at her late home in Minnesota during last week. The body was brought to Somerville, the birth place of the deceas*ed, where the funeral services will be held* to-day.

MR. T. J. CAREY has secured the store next to his present establishment on Front street, and with more room, and an elegant new truck, and increased facilities after April first, will be able to extend his business of buying and selling second-hand furniture.

AT the receiver's sale of the Casino rink, yesterday, the building was purchased by Mr. John Cameron for $650, as well as 400 pair of skates at 6 cents, and 37 dozen chairs at $1.80. This sale, however, is subject to confirmation by the Court, which reserves the right to refuse the price.

THE Reform Club will be addressed next Sunday evening, by M. M. Pomeroy, Esq., a well-known newspaper editor and a solid Democrat. The prohibition party have repudiated the Republicans in general, and are now listening to words of wisdom and advice from those who can be trusted.

IT will require 50,000 square feet of tin to roof, and 50,000 square feet of corrugated wire to sheath the sides of the immense new coal sheds now in course of erection by Messrs. Cook Bros., on the site of their burned district. Mr. D. W. Littell has the contract for doing that portion of the work.

SENATOR Livingston has introduced a bill for the protection of short bass. If a fish is particularly short it must be let go. That's all well enough, but there shouldn't be one law for fish and another for men. A bill ought now be passed of the same nature to protect the country editor from the visits of the sheriff.

THE Methodist scholars had a big entertainment, during Monday evening, and all of them took part in a programme of interest and enjoyment. There was a large attendance of members of the church and friends of the school, who applauded the music and other portions of the evening's diversions, heartily.

AT Bound Brook on Monday night last, while preparing to retire in her room Mrs. Mary Eder, the aged mother of Phillip Eder, let fall a lighted lamp, which exploded and set fire to her clothing. Before assistance arrived the flames had burned her face and body horribly. She died at six o'clock the next morning.

ONE of a team of horses in front of a heavy truck tripped and fell on Park ave, Wednesday afternoon, coming out of Cook Bros. lumber yards. A bystander in the crowd that gathered around the prostrate animal, fell in a fit while looking on, and was rubbed into consciousness with salt from Rockfellow's grocery. The horse recovered also.

ONE of the symptoms of the disease of which Dr. Burlingham is dying, is the alternate rallying and sinking of the patient. Some days those watching and caring for him notice a seeming improvement, but since last week there has been no hope of his recovery. An operation was performed Wednesday night, however, and should he rally from its effect, hope will exist.

THE carpenters of Plainfield had a meeting, last Monday evening, for the purpose of taking steps towards the formation of a Union for their mutual welfare and protection. Such associations are of the greatest benefit to members if conducted in a spirit of justice to employee and fairness to employer. The carpenters of this city are all composed of the right sort of stuff for just this result.

A COAL train of empty cars going West, parted in the middle, Thursday morning, near Church street. The engineer noticed the accident and backed up to take hold again. Supposing the flagman signalling from the caboose was at the broken end, he miscalculated the distance and running back under good speed smashed things up pretty generally. The South track was not used for some hours after, but the wreck was cleared away before noon.

THE Ninth Annual Report of the Plain*field Children's Home Association for the* year 1886, has just been issued. It gives a list of the members, officers, beneficiaries and managers of the association, reports of the President, Treasurer and Building Fund, donations, contributions and subscriptions, and the Constitution and By-Laws. Besides the existence of one cent too much in the hands of the Treasurer, the report shows a favorable condition of affairs.

Terms Unsatisfactory.

Some time ago Mr. John Cameron, of this city, offered the Plainfield Saengerbund a fine building site on Richmond street near Front, under certain requirements that provided the association should erect thereon a three story building for its own use, which building, however, must revert with the land back to the donor if at any time the Saengerbund should dissolve. At a meeting of the association, held Thursday evening of last week, it was resolved to decline the offer under such conditions; the members thinking that in case they should disband at any future date after the completion of the building, they ought to have an opportunity of recovering from its sale the money they had subscribed for the purpose.

The New Plainfield Directory.

R. S. Dillon & Co., of Albany, N. Y., who for fifteen years have given us such a satisfactory directory, are making arrangements for a forthcoming work on 1886 to be canvassed for after moving day.

The Lenten Season.

Lent began on the 10th, Ash Wednesday. From that day out, for 40 days, devout Christians give up their gayeties, the balls, the theatres, the parties, and devote themselves to prayer and penitential exercises. The forty days are observed as carefully by Protestant Episcopalians as by Roman Catholics. Formal directions for the observance of lent are sent out every year by the prelates of the Roman Catholic diocese. The form of the observance is, to a certain extent, left to the discretion of the bishop or archbishop of the diocese.

Effect of the Wind on Ice.

Old residents about Lake Hopatcong have the opinion entertained everywhere else that the recent gale was the severest they have ever known. Mr. Brady, who is harvesting ice on the lake had opened a hole by taking out ice, and upon this exposed water the wind played with such fury as to break the thick ice about it. As the expanse of water became greater the ice broke faster, until on Wednesday the greater part of the lake was broken up, making it apparent that Mr. Brady would fall far short of securing the amount of ice he hoped to get.

The Bicycle Club's Prosperity.

The Plainfield Bicycle Club at a regular meeting held in its rooms Tuesday evening, elected the following officers for the coming year:—President, Dr. J. H. Cooley; Vice-President and Captain, D. J. Runyon; Secretary and Treasurer, Bert Stover; Lieutenant, A. L. C. Marsh; Color Bearer, R. Pound; Bugler, W. Serrell; Historian, F. A. Dalton. Twelve new members were added to the roll, making a total of forty. All the money necessary to insure the erection of the Club's House is subscribed, and the establishment of its continuous prosperity thereby assured.

Zephyr's Ball.

The First Annual Ball for the benefit of Zephyr Hook & Ladder Co. No. 1 of this city, took place at the Casino rink, Thursday evening of last week. There was fine music by Prof. Kelly of New Brunswick, and a very enjoyable time. There were thirty pleasing dances on the programme, and a grand march in which all took part. The officers of the occasion were: Floor Manager, Jos. Cooney; Ass't Floor Managers, Andrew Love, Jr., George Ball; Reception Committee, Foreman B. A. Mumford, W. W. Coriell, John H. Jackson; Committee of Arrangements, S. J. Robinson, A. Wallace, Wm. Claassen, J. Armstrong, F. Matthews.

Bailey—Pierson.

At the residence of the bride, 40 Duer *street, North Plainfield, Thursday even*ing of last week, Miss Lizzie Pierson and Mr. Frank W. Bailey were married by the Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes of the First Baptist church of this city. The ceremony was private, and only a few intimate friends and relatives were present. Among these were the bride's brother, the Rev. J. Judson Pierson of Woodbury and wife, who stood up with the couple, her uncle, Congressman James Buchanan of the Second N. J. District, Mrs. Buchanan and Mrs. Dr. Yerkes. Many valuable and useful presents testified the admiration of a large circle of friends. After the ceremony a bountiful collation was served, and Mr. and Mrs. Bailey left on the 8.17 p. m. train for a wedding trip. They will permanently reside at Beverly, N. J., after April 1st.

How Some "Young Ideas" Shoot.

In spite of daily practice, the members of the Young Men's Schutzenfest of Franklyn Square are not becoming particularly expert with their Flobert rifles. They are all young lads, the prides of many of our most influential citizens, well-armed with guns and ammunition, and very persevering; so it seems as if some of their number will soon be able to shoot a man. One shot Mr. Darling's cow through the back recently, and the animal laid down in the field helpless. This success immediately fired the ambition of another member to excel the deed, so he shot ex-Councilman Stover's son through the arm. So, unless their parents should be so sensible as to interfere, or dealers should refuse to sell them ball cartridges, they may yet kill somebody and rejoice in the glory of having their names in the papers in capital letters.

Application for Relief.

The following document made out on one of the city's blank affidavits was discovered recently by a member of the Fire Department, but the signature of the person taking the application was unfortunately torn from the bottom. The words in Italic are those inserted, the balance being the printed form:

STATE OF NEW JERSEY, UNION COUNTY, } ss.
CITY OF PLAINFIELD, }

To the Overseer of the Poor of the City of Plainfield:

WHEREAS, application has been made to me, the City Judge of the City of Plainfield, by the Board of Commissioners of the Plainfield Fire Department setting forth that it is a poor person belonging to the City of Plainfield, and is in such indigent and necessitous circumstances as to require relief from the said City of Plainfield, and I having duly inquired into the state and circumstances of the said Board and it appearing to me that it has existed in the City of Plainfield continuously for at least one year last past, I therefore hereby certify that in my opinion said applicant is entitled to relief; and I further certify that in my opinion it is unable to work.

"A Prisoner for Life."

The above romantic drama in five acts by Anicet Burgois, the greatest of French dramatists, will be produced at Music Hall, Monday evening, March 15th, by Shook & Collier's company. The Cincinnati Commercial Gazette says:—"'A Prisoner for Life' is so full of charming detail that it is difficult to pick out the brighter beads which make the dramatic necklace. The plot is simple: A young girl, back in the time of Louis the XIV., learns that her father is a prisoner for a political offence. She is about to be sent to a convent by her adopted mother, when she makes her escape from the house in boy's clothes, and finds her way to the castle; assists her father to escape, and is thus, by her own heroic act, restored to him and to her mother as well. The story is told with great correctness by Shook & Collier's excellent star company, some of the actors being of national repute and some local favorites." Seats now on sale.

U. C. W. C. T. U.

The first convention of the Union County Women's Christian Temperance Union, will be held at Temperance Hall, Westfield, N. J., to-day. The programme is a very extensive and interesting one, divided into morning, afternoon and evening sessions. Miss C. R. Yates of this city is Asst. Vice President, and Miss Carrie Lowrie is Recording Secretary of the Union. The following Plainfield women are the Superintendents of the various Departments: Mrs. Wm. Honeyman, Sunday Schools; Mrs. A. M. Powell, Literature; Mrs. George Opdyke, Relation of Capital and Labor to Temperance; Mrs. Chauncey Schaffer, Bible Readings; Mrs. J. W. Yates, Parlor Meetings; Mrs. S. R. Struthers, Periodicals, and Miss Georgie Wilson, Colored People.

At the afternoon session, to-day, there will be an address of welcome, to which Miss May Tomlinson will respond; and the several Superintendents will make their reports.

Sad Death.

The serious illness of Mrs. Florence Taylor Bedford, which we spoke of in a previous issue, resulted in her death from blood poisoning, during Thursday of last week. The deceased was a niece of the Rev. Robert Lowry, D. D., of this city. The funeral services took place at the residence of her mother, wife of the late James Taylor, Esq., on Park avenue, Sunday afternoon, and were largely attended.

Edwards—Cox.

The interior of Major Rowland Cox's handsome residence on West Seventh street, was profusely and elegantly decorated with flowers, and crowded with a brilliant assemblage of magnificently attired ladies and their full-dressed escorts, Tuesday evening, upon the occasion of the five-o'clock wedding of the host's sister, Miss Anne John Cox and Mr. George Wharton Edwards of New York city. Dean Erskine M. Rodman of Grace church, performed the ceremony.

The Turner's Masquerade.

The Turn Verein of this city and North Plainfield is composed of some of our most enterprising and admired young men, which is the great secret of the association's success upon the occasion of the recent masquerade given in the Casino Rink, last Monday evening. There were about two hundred present dressed in elegant costumes, including both ladies and gentlemen. The music was about the best that has been heard in this city, and was under the direction of Prof. Voss. During the evening there was an exhibition by the National Turn Verein of Newark, taught by Mr. J. Metger, on the horizontal bar and in pyramids. There was also fencing and long*wart exercises by the Turn Verein Vor*wartz of Elizabeth, taught by O. Greubel. The Plainfield Turn Verein members gave an exhibition of comic turning which was especially good, and Mr. H. Nida of Elizabeth did some very fine club swinging. The Grand March was led by Prinz Carnival, A. C. Wenzel, magnificently attired. He was followed by the following committee men in elegant costumes: Floor Manager, H. B. Young; Assistant, E. H. Meinhardt; and Floor Committee, H. Haurand, G. Schlereth, H. Keller, F. Pasch and C. Meyer. The affair was so successful, the members contemplate joining with the Saengerbund in a big excursion to be given during the early summer.

Personalia.

The many friends of Fire Commissioner Wm. H. Brower are pleased to learn of his improvement in health, after a ten days siege of biliousness.

Freight agent Jos. R. Haines has been compelled to resort to the use of crutches, and later, a cane, in consequence of injuries to the muscles of one of his legs, received while ascending a flight of stairs.

At the residence of Walter Scott, Esq., owner of the Scott Printing Machinery Works of this city, his brother and his wife's sister were united in marriage by the Rev. T. Logan Murphy, during Tuesday afternoon. The contracting parties were Miss Christina Boyd and Mr. John R. Scott. A large number of guests were present from out of town, and the occasion was a most auspicious one.

At about two o'clock on Tuesday morning last, Miss Ellen Holmes, formerly a teacher in the public school, quietly passed away at the residence of her father, Capt. A. D. Holmes of East Fifth street. The deceased had been in delicate health for some time, but was only taken seriously ill, last Friday. Besides her immediate family who can never forget her unselfishness, her purity of mind and kindness of heart, she is mourned by a large circle of young friends who loved her for her christian character, and revered her for her possession of every virtue. The funeral services were held at her late home on Thursday, and the remains will be interred to-day at Newburyport, Mass. beside a brother and two sisters.

The Swell Lodge, its Swell Organ, and a Swell Recital.

No concert in this city, whether vocal or instrumental in particular, or vocal and instrumental in combination, ever excelled in merit and satisfaction that of Monday evening in the elegant and spacious rooms of Anchor Lodge 149, F. & A. M. of Plainfield. Tickets of admission were eagerly sought, and Worshipful Master F. O. Herring, assisted by a reception committee in full dress consisting of Councilmen Bowers and Goddard and Messrs. Tweedy, Nason, Cock, Freeman and others, were kept busy seating the swells of society that gathered.

The artists secured for the occasion included Miss Harriet W. Schroter, soprano; Mr. John Hyatt Brewer, organist; and the Boylston Glee Club, all of Brook*lyn. The programme was extensive,* varied and pleasing. Mr. Brewer, who officiated upon the new organ just erected for the Lodge by Reuben Midmer, displayed the capabilities of the instrument and himself in a very gratifying manner; and especially upon a recall that followed his second appearance, was the intense sweetness of the instrument's tone and the soloist's power of expression shown in the rendition of a composition of Raff's. Miss Schroter has a most fascinating voice, full and clear, the perfection of method, and a charming manner. Her encores were sincerely and heartily given and affably acceded to. The Boylston Club of twelve voices was well trained and harmonious. No work that could be called difficult in its construction or beyond compare in its interpretation, was given—in fact such selections as might be termed trivial by nature, pleased the best—but the Club was undoubtedly an addition to the whole that no one would have spared.

Grace Church Parlor Entertainment.

"Standing room only" was obtainable at eight o'clock of last Saturday evening, upon the occasion of a parlor entertainment arranged by the ladies of Grace church Auxiliary and Guild. The Park House had been secured for the purpose, and after filling the spacious parlors through the doors and windows, those of us who came later stood in the hall or sat on the stairway and listened to such occasional strains of music or disconnected sentences as were wafted over the evening bonnets of those more favorably situated. We couldn't see the artists, and had only a programme to guide us which was rather unsatisfactorily arranged. The first "recitation" was a piano solo by Miss Alice Smith, who also played again where the programme announced "vocal music." This disorder was unavoidably caused by the failure of one of the evening stars to shine as expected. To fill in such break Miss Smith kindly volunteered, and proved herself one of the most talented of all that appeared. Her execution and expression were beyond complaint. Miss Maude Agnes Bowers read "Como," Buchanan's "Stormy Night Dream," and "The Heathen Chinee" as an encore—all with remarkable ability, good taste, judgment and the universal and emphatic approval of the audience. In June of last year we had reason to speak of Miss Clark's talents as a poet and a violinist. In the latter accomplishment she showed marked improvement, Saturday evening, and the sincerity of the applause that followed her effort (or, rather, success) was certainly deserved. The evening's diversions closed with a farce entitled "A Pretty Piece of Business," rendered with less of an amateur flavor than might justly be expected, by the following cast: Charlotte Shee, Miss Marie Depew; Fanny Grantly, Mrs. Ivans; Dobson, Miss Sadie Drayton; Dr. Shee, Mr. Kirchoff; Captain Merriweather, Mr. Kleinecke. The entertainment throughout may be summed up as an unqualified success, and worthy of repetition.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

The members of the Boy's Work Committee of the Ladies' Auxiliary, have prepared an interesting programme for the Junior meeting (Friday) afternoon.

During the absence of Rev. R. S. Holmes of the C. L. S. C., the Thursday afternoon Bible class for the study of the Sunday school lessons, will be conducted by Dr. J. L. Hurlbut.

Dr. E. W. Hodges gave a talk before the Senior Society Boys' Branch on Tuesday evening last. Next Tuesday the members will participate in a debate, the subject, as follows, will be of interest to all. "Resolved that the members of this Society would rather go fishing than swimming."

Attention is called to the second entertainment of the course (for men only) to be held in the rooms next Monday even*ing, March 15th,* commencing at 8 o'clock. A. M. Powell, Esq., of this city, will deliver his lecture on "Glimpses of Europe," and we assure the members of the association and all others who are fortunate enough to possess tickets for the course, that opportunities like this are few, and all would do well to improve it.

C. L. S. C. Celebration of Longfellow.

A union meeting of the three local circles of the C. L. S. C. was held in Chautauqua Hall, at Park and North avenues, last Saturday evening. The object of the gathering was to celebrate the birthday and discuss the life and works of the poet Longfellow. The Rev. J. L. Hurlbut, President of two of the circles, occupied the chair. After opening the meeting in the usual manner, there was a brief discussion of the heroes and heroines of Longfellow's poems. Short descriptions of different characters in rhyme had been distributed among those present, and as each read aloud the couplet that fell to his or her lot, the name of the character was expected to be given. The rhymes themselves were decidedly creditable to the modest lady member that composed them, and the ready manner in which they were interpreted showed that all were close students of the beloved poet. The remainder of the programme was arranged as follows:

An original essay on Longfellow's early life by Mr. Stevens, followed by appropriate readings by Mr. C. C. Tyler.

His college life by Mr. N. H. Gillette; readings by Mrs. Gillette.

His life in Italy, S. H. Osborne; readings, Mrs. C. M. Goddard.

The history of the Old Craigie House, Miss Goddard; readings, Mrs. E. B. Ryder.

His love for children, Mrs. K. G. Emerson; readings, Miss K. Haff.

A comparison of Longfellow and Whittier by Mr. J. R. Joy; and The Prose of Longfellow by the Rev. Mr. Hurlbut.

The absence of any musical instrument was not felt, as the programme was interspersed with singing by the Misses A. Holmes, J. Ketcham, J. Demarest, E. Demarest and C. Dunn. The selections given by these ladies were Sullivan's "The Long Day Closes," Agnes Zimmerman's "Fairy Song," and, upon recall, Zollner's "Miller's Song." After the mind had been fed, refreshment for the body was served, and the meeting adjourned.

Kind Words.

On Monday, March 1st, the Senate at Washington, confirmed the nomination by the President of W. L. Force for Postmaster of Plainfield. Under the rules all confirmations lie over one week before they are made known to the public. As soon as the bonds of the new appointee are forwarded to Washington, a commission will be made out to him. It is not probable that he will take possess*ion of the office until April 1st.* We copy with expressions of pleasure and thanks a few of the many complimentary notices extended the new official by contemporaries:

Despite civil service nonsense THE CONSTITUTIONALIST has Force-d itself into a postoffice.—Elizabeth Herald.

We have no doubt that Mr. Force will equal any of his predecessors in the management of the business.—Central New Jersey Times.

We congratulate brother Wm. L. Force of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST, upon his appointment as Postmaster of Plainfield. "Stake," Billy.—Rahway Democrat.

We congratulate the Plainfield people, and especially the Democracy there, on the appointment of Mr. Wm. L. Force, one of the editors of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST, as Postmaster.—Clinton Democrat.

Wm. L. Force, of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST, has been appointed postmaster at Plainfield. Bro. Force is a hard worker and deserves the just award from his party.—Perth Amboy Republican.

Editors of Democratic newspapers seem to be in good favor with the Administration. The latest to get a postoffice appointment is Bro. Wm. L. Force of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST office at Plainfield.—Dover Index.

We congratulate brother William L. Force of the Plainfield CONSTITUTIONALIST, upon his new position, and trust the "stamp act" may become as familiar to him as THE CONSTITUTIONALIST is popular with the people.—Summit Record.

Wm. L. Force, one of the editors of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST, has been appointed postmaster of Plainfield. William will please accept our hearty congratulations. He will be the right man in the right place.—Woodbridge Independent Hour.

The appointment of brother Wm. L. Force, of the Plainfield CONSTITUTIONALIST, as postmaster of the city of Plainfield, is a deserved recognition of his services, as well as a good appointment viewed from a purely business point of view.—Morristown Banner.

Bro. W. L. Force, of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST, Plainfield, N. J., has been appointed postmaster of that place. If he conducts the office as well as he has his paper, the business of the office will be conducted on correct principles. We wish him success.—Madison Eagle.

The selection of our editorial brother, Mr. Wm. L. Force, of the Plainfield CONSTITUTIONALIST, as postmaster of the city of Plainfield, is a wise recognition of his services in behalf of Democracy. Mr. Force is well calculated to make a popular official.—Hunterdon County Democrat.

At Plainfield William L. Force, one of the editors of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST, has been made Postmaster in place of Elias Pope. Mr. Force, who is quite a sportsman, has many warm friends in Bound Brook who will congratulate him on his good fortune.—Bound Brook Chronicle.

We congratulate Brother William L. Force, of the Plainfield CONSTITUTIONALIST, upon his appointment as postmaster of Plainfield. "Shake," Billy.—Rahway National Democrat.

We join in the congratulation. If every office in the country could be filled by journeyman printers and intelligent editors the public service would be much improved. The Force of this logic our contemporary can comprehend.—Elizabeth Herald.

NORTH PLAINFIELD BOROUGH COUNCIL.

The regular meeting of the Council of the Borough of North Plainfield, was held last Friday evening.

Present—Mayor Van Winkle and Councilmen Slater, Thickstun and Ludlow.

Absent—Councilmen Arnold, Weaver and Branson.

The minutes of the previous meeting were approved as read.

Councilman Thickstun presented a petition for a sidewalk on both sides of Duer street from Craig place to Greenbrook road. Ref'd to Streets Com.

Councilman Slater presented the petition of Mr. George F. Brown for permission to remove a frame dwelling through Grove street to the corner of Linden avenue. Granted.

The following claims were presented and referred to the proper committees:—Isaac Coithar, lumber and work on lockup, $1.61; L. A. Rheaume & Co., coal and wood, $1.45; W. E. Mattison, salary as Borough Clerk, $50; P. V. Weaver, salary as Marshal, $50.

The Clerk's monthly report for February, showing a balance on hand of $42.92, was read and ordered filed.

Councilman Thickstun of the Auditing Committee, reported as correct the claims of Messrs. Mattison, Weaver and Rheaume, for which warrants were ordered drawn in payment.

Councilman Slater offered a resolution, and asked the unanimous consent of the Council to its reference to the Committee on Streets and Public Health. He stated that he had been impelled to introduce it upon his attention having been called to the condition of certain streets by the merchants of the Borough who found it impossible for heavily laden teams to make any progress through them. The resolution in effect authorized and directed the Committee to cause the roadways at the head of Grove and Duer, and West of Somerset street, put in passable condition, at an expense not to exceed the means at command of the Council. Seconded by Councilman Thickstun, and referred.

Councilman Slater also offered an ordinance to regulate the mode of construct*ing and maintaining telephone, telegraph* and other electric wires within the Borough limits. Read by its title, by sections, and laid over to take the usual course.

Councilman Slater moved that a warrant be drawn for $25 and placed in the hands of Corporation Counsel, in favor of J. B. Miller, to be paid over to him upon the receipt of a full release of all obligation of the Borough in the matter of the Casino rink license. Carried.

Councilman Thickstun stated that he understood an incorporated cemetery association was intending to locate in the Borough, and asked whether it would not be wise to draw up an ordinance to control and regulate such. Councilman Slater then moved that the Corporation Counsel be requested, in connection with the Committee on Streets and Public Health, to consider the necessity and propriety of some controlling regulation of the sort, and if advisable to prepare an ordinance providing for the purposes required. Carried.

Also that the Streets Committee examine into the extent of the obligation of the Borough in the Brook avenue matter. Carried.

The Council then adjourned.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

Last Saturday afternoon a large crowd assembled on the grounds of the Middlesex Gun Club near Dunellen to participate in the shooting of the day, and a fox chase. Mr. Borden liberated a lively grey fox on the grounds during the afternoon, and after a ten minutes start, several dogs were let loose on its trail, Mr. David Hand, followed on horseback with his keen-scented hound, and soon distanced all competitors. After an hour's run, Reynard was caught by Mr. Hand's dog near Samptown and killed.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

The chairman of Town Committee, Mr. James L. Miller, has gone South for a few weeks' recreation.

Dr. F. A. Kinch has purchased of Mr. Irving one of his horses which he brought on from the West to match one he already has.

There were numerous candidates for Pound Keepers at the last election. A number of our prominent citizens received a very large vote.

The State Convention of the Women's Christian Temperance Union is being held this (Friday) at the Temperance Hall. Very able speakers are in attendance. Services are to be held in the Presbyterian church this evening.

On Wednesday evening at about 7.30 o'clock Albert Cansiel, who resides on Cumberland street near Union avenue, was chopping wood, the axe slipped and made quite a serious wound on his left wrist, cutting some of the small veins and fracturing the bone near the hand joint. The Drs. Kinch's were immediately summoned and dressed the wound. It will be some time before Mr. Cansiel can again resume work. He has been working for the past year at Bloodgood's factory, Clark Township.

A number of our road overseers have failed to advertise the annual election for overseer of road in their respective districts. There can be no excuse for this, as they were all given the proper blanks to post up. Some of them evidently have failed to comply with the law, not through ignorance of it, but thinking, no doubt, they would stand a better chance of being appointed overseer by the Town Committee than if the voters of the district were called together for an election. There no doubt is a penalty attached for failure to comply with the law, and we understand that some of our residents intend to have it enforced. If it was made the duty of the Town Clerk to call the road district election, it then would be done and every district would be done and every district would have a chance to vote for an overseer, and also to raise such extra sums of money as they deem expedient.

On Friday night or early on Saturday morning our town was visited by burglars. They effected an entrance in the dwelling house of Mr. Henry F. Alpers, on Clark street by boring the window sash and shoving the catch over the window off the sash. The thieves were no doubt frightened away, as nothing was stolen. It was discovered next morning that the silver ware had been placed on the table in the dining room, no doubt ready to be packed. The same night Mr. L. V. Clark's was also entered through the dining room window. Mr. Clark, whose bedroom was immediately over the dining room heard the window raised; he listened for a moment and then got up and went to the door leading into the hall. Just at this time the thief opened the door leading into the lower hall. Mr. Clark stepped quietly to the head of the stairs and saw the midnight robber with a dark lantern looking around the hall and when he started to come up stairs Mr. Clark made an alarm, and of course the thief left suddenly.

Hope Succeeds.

After carefully considering many worthy applications, the Board of Education has at last settled upon Stevenson R. Hope for Janitor of the new school building, Sixth street, near Richmond. Mr. Hope is well qualified for the position.

FIRE started in a little store room on the top floor of the residence of Mr. E. P. Williams, No. 39 Madison avenue, yesterday afternoon. The Truck boys with their buckets soon put out the flames, after a quantity of old books, some furniture, etc., had been consumed.

Take Ayer's Sarsaparilla in the Spring of the year to purify the blood, invigorate the system, excite the liver to action, and restore the healthy tone and vigor of the whole physical mechanism.

One of my children, a girl about nine years old had a very bad discharge from her head and nose of a thick, yellowish matter, and was growing worse. We had two different physicians prescribe for her, but without benefit. We tried Ely's Cream Balm, and much to our surprise in three days there was a marked improvement. We continued using the Balm and in a short time the discharge was apparently cured.—O. A. Cary, Corning, N. Y.

SCOTT'S EMULSION OF PURE COD LIVER OIL, WITH HYPOPHOSPHITES, ESPECIALLY desirable for Children. A lady physician at the Child's Hospital, at Albany, N. Y., says: "We have been using Scott's Emulsion with great success, nearly all of our patients are suffering from bone diseases and our physicians find it very beneficial."

When baby was sick, we gave her Castoria. When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria. When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria. When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

PYÆMIA

Is the most virulent form of blood-poisoning. Less speedily fatal, but not less certainly so, is the vitiation of the blood of which the first symptoms are Pimples, Sties, Boils, and Cutaneous Eruptions. When the taint of Scrofula gives warning of its presence by such indications, no time should be lost in using AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, the only perfect and reliable medicine for the purification of the blood.

SCROFULA

Is a foul corruption in the blood that rots out all the machinery of life. Nothing will eradicate it from the system and prevent its transmission to offspring but AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. This preparation is also the only one that will cleanse the blood of Mercurial poison and the taint of Contagious Diseases. Impoverished blood is productive of

ANÆMIA,

A wretched condition indicated by Pallid Skin, Flaccid Muscles, Shattered Nerves, and Melancholy. Its first symptoms are Weakness, Languor, Loss of Nerve Force, and Mental Dejection. Its course, unchecked, leads inevitably to insanity or death. Women frequently suffer from it. The only medicine that, while purifying the blood, enriches it with new vitality, and invigorates the whole system, is Poetry.

THE EMPTY CRIB.

BY HELEN N. PACKARD.

I sit in the lonely chamber—
And the clock ticks steadily on,
Telling the measured moments—
While a track of days now gone.

Hushed is the voice of nature,
And still the noisy whir
Of daylight's active measure,
And noontide's busy stir.

No sound breaks through the stillness,
Save the fall of the dying leaf,
And the west wind softly sighing,
Like the sob of a child in grief.

From the empty crib in the corner
Comes no sound that I can hear—
No soft and tranquil breathing
Falls like music on my ear.

The pillow all unwrinkled,
Once pressed by a sunny head;
And the voice of sweetest music
Is hushed with the early dead.

No worn and tattered playthings
My longing vision meet—
No half-worn shoe betraying
The trace of restless feet.

No lisping, childish accent
Makes sunshine in every part—
Nothing remains but memory
To the desolate mother heart.

But the fold of God now shelters
The little one, safe from harm;
And the tender Shepherd claims
My lamb with His loving arm.

Sometimes, when my soul is weary
With countless tears and sighs,
And the tired lids are folded
Down over the sightless eyes,

The pearly gates shall open,
Beyond the swelling tide,
And my beautiful, ransomed darling
Shall stand by my waiting side.

THE FORGED CHECK.

I hated him from the first to the last; I hated him with an intensity that has only lately died.

Perhaps he was to blame, though, after all, perhaps not.

I am an old man now, and much of the past is faded into oblivion, but that portion of my life which relates to him is as fresh in my mind to-night as it was fifty years ago, when we were clerks together—Ted March and I—in the great shipping house of Halton & War.

Ted was very handsome, and I hated him for that, for I was plain and insignificant in appearance, and the comparison drawn by every stranger who entered the counting-house made me ill-natured and cross-grained.

Before Ted ever really did me wrong I hated him instinctively, hated him against my better inclinations, as if already within me there was something conscious of the part he was to play in my life's dream.

I can close my eyes now and live over again those dim old days.

I saw Ted perched on a high stool at the batted and ink-besmeared old desk, with the spring sunshine streaming in through the dingy windows and glinting in his light hair, as he sat with his blue eyes fastened on the masts and rigging of the vessels anchored along the wharf, with one girlish hand twisted among his glistening curls, and the other toying idly with his pen on the desk.

Yes, I hated him; I hated him for his elegant manners and complaisant ways.

I hated him for his merry laugh, his melodious voice, hated him for his fine, slender figure, his graceful walk; but I hated him, more than all, for his great influence over Mary Halton.

Mary was the only child of the head of our firm, and a girl whom I had learned to love with all the strength of my mind, my heart, my soul, and yet I never told her, and she loved me, too.

I know she did before Ted March showed his handsome face in Marley.

Mary was not beautiful.

I was conscious of that.

Many scarcely thought her a pretty miss, but to me, from the first to the last, she was the fairest, sweetest and most lovely of women.

Ted fell in love with Mary and Mary fell in love with Ted before they had been acquainted through a single spring day.

After four every evening he would stroll across the street to Mr. Halton's and chat with and make love to the girl my heart was breaking for.

How I hated him as he hung at the gate wishing her good-night.

I thought that I could see the little white hand tremble as it waved an adieu to him as he strode away into the thickening twilight.

Should I dog his steps, and when he got to a lonely place, dart suddenly upon him and do him deadly harm?

Heaven only knows how often I asked myself that question.

For months I watched him, and oh, the bitter, bitter pain, the anguish and despair I suffered human tongue can never tell!

I played the spy on March's every movement.

I knew the make-up of his life better than he did himself.

At night when he and Mary were passing the hours with music and song, I lay in the shadow of the hedge waiting his leave, blaspheming and cursing him under my breath.

After the good-night had been said, for the hundredth time repeated, I would follow him whithersoever he went, and often this would be to a certain gambling den.

Nightly he played for large sums—larger than I knew March came by honestly; but I never said a word—only watched and waited, and nursed the terrible vengeance in my heart.

Eventually, Ted became more restless and fidgety, and I guessed what was working on his mind.

Then he became suddenly unusually industrious; all day long he would bend over his desk, intently engaged with his pen, and I was extremely anxious to know what he was doing, for I knew the business required no such steady work.

Perhaps he was writing love letters—love letters to Mary.

Of course I was determined to fathom the secret, and one afternoon, finding him wholly absorbed, I stole up behind him and looked over his shoulder.

He was writing over and over again across a sheet of foolscap the firm's signature.

What a hideous fiendish joy shot into my heart as I comprehended what this meant.

For the past few nights March had lost heavily at the disreputable establishment—lost more than he received for a year's salary, and a blockhead would have seen why he was practicing the signature of Halton & War.

The very next afternoon I saw him draw up a check, for what amount I could not see, but I did see it was a check on the bank where the firm dealt.

As he left the office I followed, well behind, but not out of sight, down to where the firm banked.

In a short time he came forth again, and after glancing furtively about, he pulled his hat over his eyes and disappeared around the first corner.

Entering the bank, I accosted cashier.

"Good afternoon, Mr. Wills."

"Mr. Rolls."

"One of our clerks presented a check here a few moments ago?"

"Yes, sir."

"May I look at it, please?"

"Certainly; here it is, sir."

"Ah! just as I thought. There, Mr. Wills, look at the curl of the stem of this H, and the way the 't' is crossed, and the general flowing hand. Does it strike you as old Halton's peculiar chirography? Very like it, a first-rate imitation, but not quite the thing."

"What, forgery? March—impossible! and for five thousand dollars?"

"That is just what it is, Mr. Wills, and as you have always been a warm friend of March's, will you help me save him?"

"Save him—how can we do it?"

"Cancel the check and replace the money."

"But who will furnish the money? I cannot afford——"

"Ah, don't trouble yourself on that score; I believe my balance is ten thousand; turn that over; I am strong and young, and I love poor Ted."

"But——"

"Oh! don't let us talk of it, Mr. Wills; think of your own son, he's about Ted's age, and give me the slip of paper and cancel the check."

"Rolls," catching my trembling hand and shaking it heartily, "you are a noble fellow; there is not another man who would have done what you have done—a friend in need is a friend indeed."

I laughed aloud as I received the forged check in exchange for my own, although it robbed me of the accumulation of years—made me a very pauper.

But what cared I?

Had I not lost all that made life dear? What were ten thousand dollars compared with my revenge?

Years rolled away, and March, for I watched night after night, never again visited the gambling house after the day of the forgery.

He had squared his debts, undoubtedly, and started anew in life, with good resolutions and noble aspirations, secure in the secrecy of his crime.

"March has settled down at last," said one of the junior clerks to me one day, "and old Hal says he's the best business man. Just look at the business they trust to him, Rolls."

I said nothing, oh heaven! I thought with demoniacal joy how swiftly my time was coming on.

Rapidly was my enemy climbing the ladder of fame.

Let him, let him—let him mount it—up, up, up, until he reaches the highest round, and then—and then——

The crisis came at last.

March was made third partner in the great shipping house and, shortly after, his wedding-day was fixed.

He had mounted the highest round of the ladder.

Wealthy, beloved, honored; about to wed the fairest of God's creatures, so thought I, and I worshipped her, too.

What more could fortune bestow upon him?

For what should I wait?

The wedding-day dawned.

All the clerks were invited to be present at the nuptials, and each of us had agreed to give Ted some gift as a token of the esteem and love we felt for our old confrere of the counting house.

"What are you going to give Rolls?" I was asked the day before the wedding.

"Wait and see," I laughingly replied, as I pictured to myself the scene that would ensue when, after the ceremony, I handed March the forged check.

The grand rooms were crowded to suffocation, but I managed to reach the happy pair among the first to offer congratulations after the two had been made one.

A moment I stood before them, and the better feelings in my heart struggled hard for the mastery.

I knew that I was there to stab those generous, innocent, happy hearts, but I could not resist the demon of jealousy and revenge rankling in my bosom, and bowing low, I handed him the fatal slip.

The last I ever saw of March, he was lying there in the brilliant light of the gas, prostrate on the carpet, with the crimson life-blood oozing from his mouth and nostrils, while she—Mary—was kneeling over him, calling piteously his name.

For forty years they have been sleeping in the grave, he having died with quick consumption—a hemorrhage of the lungs, brought on by mental excitement, they said; and she—well, it's pretty well known that she died from excessive grief shortly thereafter.

PENSIONS TRANSFERRED TO EX-REBELS.

Within a short time past several Federal soldiers who are on the pension rolls have deliberately arranged to transfer the money they receive to indigent and disabled survivors of the lost cause. Gen. Stith Bolling, of Petersburg, Va., a prominent ex-Confederate officer, gives the following history of the matter: "Some time in December last it came to my knowledge that a gallant and patriotic ex-Union officer, living at Watertown, N. Y., desired that the pension which had just been granted him should be bestowed upon some ex-Confederate whose wounds made it impossible for him to undergo the hardships and labor of a well man. I suggested W. G. McLaughlin, of Lunenberg county, as a person who met the requirements, and the pension of the Union veteran is now being paid to the shattered and bullet-rent ex-Confederate. I wish I might give the name of the gallant soldier and thoughtful and sympathetic gentleman who has done this, for publication, but with that true modesty which would not be praised by the world for so kindly an act to his fellow-man, he desires that it shall not be published." The matter did not stop here. Some of his comrades learned what had been done. Five of them draw pensions for wounds received in action. They are beyond the need of personal aid, and have written Gen. Bolling requesting that he furnish five additional names of wounded soldiers of the Army of Northern Virginia, to whom they wish to transfer their pensions.—Washington Dispatch to the St. Louis Republican.

Paterson is once more entering upon good times. The long idle Rogers works have 58 locomotives to build in three months, the Cooke works have 25 on their list, the Grant works will shortly start up with a full force, the iron works and the rolling mill are running day and night, and all the silk mills are as busy as they can be. After an unusually long dull spell things are promising a season of unusual prosperity.

THE AMBULANCE.

This is a modern invention of French origin. In ancient times the wounded were left to die on the battlefield, but war now has the ameliorating influence of surgery. There are now two kinds in use. The heavy ambulance is left with the baggage, while the light one moves over the battlefield in order to convey the wounded to rear. Each ambulance is attended by seven surgeons, and the largest are drawn by four horses. A surgeon on horseback guides the others to some place where a field hospital is established. A yellow flag is then displayed, which protects the spot from the fire of the enemy. Baron Larrey who reached distinction in surgery during Napoleon's war, organized the ambulance system with a great perfection, and it is now in use all over the civilized world.

HE WAS A JUDGE.

Up in one of the northern counties in Missouri, a prominent gentleman was elected to a judgeship, and very naturally was proud of the honors which had been conferred upon him. When he carried the news of his election to his home he appeared before his wife in a very dignified manner and said:

"My dear, I was elected judge to-day, and there is something which I wish to say to you. In the future I wish you to cease talking so much with the servants and assume the dignity becoming the wife of a high public official. Do you understand?"

"Yes, Tom. I'm so glad that you have been made a judge. Just think, Mrs. Brown and all the Smiths will be calling to see me," and her eyes fairly blazed with delight. After revolving the matter in her mind and cackling with pride, as only a woman can, she suddenly exclaimed: "Oh, Tom, if you are a judge, I guess I'll be a judgess, won't I?"

The stalwart husband looked pityingly at her and said: "No, Mandy, you'll be the same darned old fool you have always been," and then he stalked out of the house and left her bathed in indignant tears.

Mr. Hazen, the third assistant postmaster-general, makes the following suggestions to the public: Write or print your name and address, and the contents of a package, upon the upper left hand corner of all mail matter. This will insure its immediate return to you for correction, if improperly addressed or insufficiently paid; and if it is not called for at destination it can be returned to you without going to the dead letter office. If the patrons of the mails would avail themselves of this privilege it would enable the department to restore at least ninety per cent. of all the undelivered matter. Letters would be returned free and parcels upon the return postage.

CLEVELAND'S
SUPERIOR TO ROYAL.

Rutgers College (the New Jersey State Scientific College) New Brunswick, N. J., July 7, 1885.

Analyses and careful examinations of Cleveland's Superior and Royal Baking Powders enable us to bear testimony to the superiority of Cleveland's. It yields more carbonic acid gas than the Royal, and contains no ammonia salts.

Cleveland's Baking Powder is made of pure substances and is absolutely free from any kind of adulteration. We endorse it most cordially as an honest and efficient article, and one that will give entirely satisfactory results.

For perfect cleanliness and simplicity of construction we invite comparison with any Cistern Closet ever manufactured, either home or foreign. It combines, with the utmost simplicity, all the points of a strictly first-class water-closet. The square top will make itself apparent to all users, in doing away with drip tray, the wash at all times thoroughly scouring all parts, whereas in the drip tray it cannot help but become foul underneath. It has a seal in Trap of 1½ inches, and the soil pipe vent of 2 inches diameter, as will be seen in the above cut, will prevent all syphoning of Trap. The two inlet of seat vents of 1½ inches diameter are intended for right or left ventilation, the end not being used to be closed. The large handle in front gives free access to all parts of trap.

SPECIFICS.
Sold by Druggists, or sent postpaid on receipt of price.—HUMPHREYS' MEDICINE CO. 109 Fulton St. N.Y.

LAKE MAHOPAC, N. Y.
MY DAUGHTER WAS VERY BAD OFF ON ACCOUNT OF A COLD AND PAIN ON HER LUNGS. DR. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL CURED HER IN 24 HOURS. ONE OF THE BOYS WAS CURED OF A SORE THROAT. THE MEDICINE HAS WORKED WONDERS IN OUR FAMILY.
ALVAH PINCKNEY.
"ITS SPECIALTIES."
DR. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL FOR COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, DIPHTHERIA, SORE THROAT, CATARRH, AND BRONCHIAL TROUBLES GIVES IMMEDIATE RELIEF.
THE MOST VIOLENT ATTACK OF NEURALGIA WILL RECEIVE IMMEDIATE AND PERMANENT RELIEF; IN FACT, AS A CURE FOR NEURALGIA IT HAS NEVER FAILED.

COSTIVENESS
affects seriously all the digestive and assimilative organs, including the Kidneys. When these organs are so affected, they fail to extract from the blood the uric acid, which, carried through the circulation, causes Rheumatism and Neuralgia.
The functions of the Liver are also affected by costiveness, causing Billious Disorders.
Among the warning symptoms of Biliousness are Nausea, Dizziness, Headache, Weakness, Fever, Dimness of Vision, Yellowness of Skin, Pains in the Side, Back and Shoulders, Foul Mouth, Furred Tongue, Irregularity in the action of the Bowels, Vomiting, etc.
The Stomach suffers when the bowels are constipated, and Indigestion or Dyspepsia,
follows. Fetid Breath, Gastric Pains, Headache, Acidity of the Stomach, Waterbrash, Nervousness, and Depression, are all evidences of the presence of this distressing malady. A Sure Relief for irregularities of the Stomach and all consequent diseases, will be found in the use of
AYER'S PILLS.
They stimulate the stomach, free the bowels, healthfully invigorate the torpid liver and kidneys, and by their cleansing, healing and tonic properties, strengthen and purify the whole system, and restore it to a salutary and normal condition.

Poetry.

HOW IT TASTED.

She was a maid of many charms,
As lovely as the rose;
She held her poodle in her arms
And fondly kissed his nose.

Her lover lying at her feet,
Was envious as could be,
And said, "Oh, give me a kiss as sweet,
As that, my love, to me."

She stooped and kissed him on the lips,
Then sprang he to his feet;
She, blushing to her finger tips,
Inquired, "Well, was it sweet?"

He wiped his mouth, picked up his cane,
And then prepared to jog,
Remarking, "Sweet? well, to be plain,
It kind o' tastes of dog."

MEMORIES.

SILVER GREY.

'Tis thus, that I, in time gone by
Can now recall a joy or praise,
May cause perchance a heaving sigh
To live my boyhood o'er again.

Doth fondly to my mind recall
The follies of my school-boy days;
How young love did my heart enthrall
For her who had such winsome ways.

I thought perfection reigned supreme,
She was so lovely, was so fair—
She was my all, she was my theme,
I guarded her with jealous care.

As time wore on and years rolled by,
Our young love hearts had ceased to burn,
We'd meet and part without a sigh,
And grasp the hand in friendly turn.

Our ways diverged in after life,
Now many years hath passed us by;
She became a loving wife
Of one who knew her not as I.

SAM MULTIPLE'S SCHEME.

For a London town house, the Multiples were content with a modest flat in the neighborhood of Victoria street. Sam had purchased a fine place in the country, but he and his wife liked to come up to town occasionally for a little mild dissipation and relaxation from the straits of country society. Mrs. Multiple had once been a well-known and popular actress, but Sam himself had an undercurrent of the Bohemian in his nature; so that they were both delighted to escape periodically from the imposing grandeur of their country seat. In a suite of six or eight rooms, with half that number of servants to wait upon them, they were able to enjoy, to their hearts' content the pleasure and attractions of the metropolis, freed from domestic cares and worries. Mrs. Multiple revisited the scenes of her former triumphs, and renewed acquaintance with old friends, while Sam made mysterious excursions into the city, from which he invariably returned looking more radiant and prosperous than ever.

One morning Mrs. Multiple, who had gone out alone to do some shopping before lunch, came in looking so pale and agitated that her husband immediately inquired what had happened.

"I have been followed again by that horrible man who had the impudence to speak to me yesterday," she said, with a nervous laugh.

"You don't say so!" said Sam, indignantly, as he started to his feet.

"He followed me all the way down the street, almost to the door," Mrs. Multiple said. "Don't do anything rash, Sam," she cried, as her husband rushed to the window.

"Is that the man? Look, Loo, quick," exclaimed Sam Multiple, excitedly.

"Yes. There, he saw you, Sam, and is jumping into a cab," said Mrs. Multiple, peeping through the lace curtains.

"I know him," growled Sam, as he watched the cab drive off. "You are highly honored, my love. That is the Hon. Martin Choke, brother of Lord Jugular, and related to half the swells in the peerage."

"Then he ought to be all the more ashamed of himself," said Mrs. Multiple, untying her bonnet-strings with an angry jerk. "I am not a nervous person, but he frightened me."

"He is one of those depraved and vicious old men—for he must be getting on to sixty though he is excellently made up—who are a disgrace to civilization," said Sam, who was evidently more annoyed and indignant than he cared to confess. "He goes about insulting helpless ladies and girls with his odious attentions, and renders the streets of London absolutely unsafe in broad daylight."

"Somebody ought really to give him in charge," remarked Mrs. Multiple. "I felt strongly tempted to do so myself."

"Why didn't you?" inquired Sam.

"Oh, well! I didn't like to make a fuss, and, besides, think of the scandal and unpleasantness," replied Mrs. Multiple.

"Yes, I know! The scoundrel guesses all that. Besides, no great harm would happen to him even if he were given in charge. The influence of his titled friends and relatives would be brought to bear upon the magistrate, the proceedings would be treated as a joke, a garbled report—if any—would appear in the papers, and the only person who would suffer would be his unfortunate victim, by having her name brought before the public in connection with an unpleasant affair. No, it doesn't pay to prosecute in these cases," added Sam, shaking his head.

"I wonder he has never been thrashed," exclaimed little Mrs. Multiple, full of virtuous indignation.

"So he has; but you see, he is getting an old man. A sexagenarian is tolerably safe from personal violence," said Sam, moodily.

"Then it seems he can pursue his disgraceful course with impunity," exclaimed Mrs. Multiple.

"So he has found, I suppose! But this time, Loo, I fancy he has caught a Tartar. If we don't contrive to give him a lesson between us, I will eat my hat," said Sam, brightening up.

"Is it worth while, Sam? I am quite capable of taking care of myself," said Mrs. Multiple, suddenly mistrusting her husband's intentions.

"Yes, it is worth while," replied Sam, looking unusually grave. "It is a duty which every man and woman owes to society, or rather to the community, to help to stamp out these cowardly pests. Now, Loo, I've an idea, and you mustn't refuse me your assistance. We shall both of us have to do a little bit of acting, but that will remind you of old times."

Sam Multiple proceeded to unfold the plan which he had concocted for the Hon. Martin Choke's edification. Mrs. Multiple was startled at first, but her husband soon overcame her objections, and imbued her with his enterprising spirit.

The next day Mrs. Multiple repeated her shopping expedition, and returned home followed by her elderly admirer. The Hon. Martin Choke might well have been suspicious of the lady's sudden graciousness. Instead of shunning him as heretofore, she had permitted him to speak to her, and had even invited him to lunch in her husband's absence. But, when a man is strongly convinced of his powers of fascination, he does not easily divine that he is being trifled with. It did not enter Mr. Choke's head that Mrs. Multiple was acting a part and he followed her with a self-satisfied and complacent mien.

Mrs. Multiple led the way into the snug apartments where she and Sam had conspired together the day before, and invited her guest to be seated. Her manner was so perfectly easy and natural that Mr. Choke was more than ever impressed that he had made a conquest; but, almost before he had time to open a conversation, a thundering knock was heard at the street door.

"My husband!" exclaimed Mrs. Multiple, starting up, with an excellent appearance of horror and amazement.

"I thought you said he was out," said Mr. Choke, uneasily.

"But he has returned. It is his knock. Gracious heavens, what shall I do," cried Mrs. Multiple, wringing her hands.

"My dear lady, there is no cause for alarm," said Mr. Choke, recovering his presence of mind. "You have only to introduce me as a friend whom you knew before your marriage."

"This is dreadful! horrible!" cried Mrs. Multiple, too frightened, apparently, to listen to reason. "He will not be deceived. He has evidently watched me. He saw you from the window yesterday, and told me who you were."

"Pray calm yourself, madam; You will betray yourself and me too if you go on in this fashion," said Mr. Choke, getting alarmed at the state of affairs; while the sound of the knocker reverberated a second time through the house.

"There, the servant is opening the street-door," cried Mrs. Multiple. "He is coming in. Here! You must hide instantly;" she added, suddenly throwing open the door of a small boudoir adjoining, as though by an after-thought.

"I assure, you, dear madame, there is no occasion," protested Mr. Choke.

"There is! My reputation is at stake," cried Mrs. Multiple, vehemently.

"But the servant who opens the door?"

"He will hold his tongue. If my husband does not see you, his suspicions will be allayed," said Mrs. Multiple. "I will lock you in and give the key to the butler. You shall be released as soon as you can safely leave."

There was no time for further parley, and Mr. Choke yielded to the lady's urgent entreaties and stepped into the boudoir. The door had no sooner closed upon him than Sam Multiple burst into the room and confronted his wife with a terrible aspect. The scene that ensued had been carefully rehearsed, and was calculated to deceive the anxious listener. Sam declared that he had seen a man enter the house, and in spite of his wife's eager denial, he continued to upbraid her fiercely. His rage and jealousy were so great that he swore he would strangle the intruder; and he certainly succeeded in impressing Mr. Choke with a wholesome dread of meeting him in his present mood. Fortunately Mrs. Multiple's indignant protestations of innocence seemed to disarm him, and he gradually grew calmer, though it was evident that he was still angrily suspicious. With considerable ingenuity his wife at length prevailed upon him to accompany her to an adjoining apartment, and poor Mr. Choke felt unspeakably grateful to her for his escape.

"Well, Loo, how did I do it?" inquired Sam, with a grin, as soon as they were out of ear-shot of his prisoner.

"Very well, indeed, Sam. I believe you would make a good actor, my dear," said his wife, sinking into a chair with sheer exhaustion.

"By Jove, Loo, you were first-rate," said Sam, admiringly, mopping his forehead. "I shouldn't care, though, to play the jealous husband every day in the week. It's fatiguing."

"What is to happen next?" inquired Mrs. Multiple.

"I think we can proceed," said Sam.

"Hi! Simmonds," he roared in a voice of thunder, that was heard all over the premises.

"You will frighten poor Mr. Choke out of his wits, Sam," said Mrs. Multiple, putting her hands to her ears.

"Serve him right," said Sam.

"Simmonds! bring me my revolver," he shouted, with increased vigor.

The butler made his appearance, bearing no weapon, but carrying over his arm a suit of livery. The twinkle in his eye showed that he appreciated the seriocomic drama that was being enacted.

"Now, Simmonds do you recollect what you have to do?" inquired Sam.

"Yes, sir," answered the butler, promptly; "I'm to say that you've locked the street-door and put the key in your pocket."

"Exactly. I'm still raging with jealousy, remember, and I wouldn't hesitate to kill any one I found on my premises," said Sam, impressively. "You must look agitated and frightened yourself, you know."

"Bear in mind, Simmonds, that you are risking your place in order to assist him to escape," interposed Mrs. Multiple.

"Yes, and the only plan you can think of is to pass him off for a friend of yours, who has stepped in to have a chant," added Sam.

"Don't overdo that part," said Mrs. Multiple, earnestly.

"No, and you must be realistic; a five-pound note wouldn't be too much to ask for the service you are rendering him," said Sam, with a wink.

"I'll make a point of that, sir," returned the butler.

"He surely won't consent to disguise himself in a livery," said Mrs. Multiple, incredulously, when the butler had departed on his errand.

"He will, if Simmonds carries out my instructions," answered Sam, with confidence. "It will be explained to him that otherwise he will have to remain where he is all night, with the risk of detection."

"And you propose to turn him out into the street dressed like a lackey," exclaimed Mrs. Multiple.

"Not only so, but I shall take care that his wife sees him," said Sam.

"His wife! Is he a married man?" cried Mrs. Multiple, in amazement.

"Very much so; and from all accounts Mrs. Choke holds a rod of iron over him," answered Sam.

Before Mrs. Multiple had time to express her astonishment at this information, the butler entered the room, crimson with suppressed laughter.

"He's putting of 'em on," he exclaimed, with a spasmodic burst, which he smothered with his hand.

"Hush! you idiot," whispered Sam, with a threatening gesture. "Have you frightened him?"

"He was trembling like a leaf when I went in," said the butler, composing his countenance with difficulty. "He had just heard you call for a revolver. He wouldn't hear of putting on the livery coat at first, though he swore he would do anything rather than remain in the house. I persuaded him by saying I would bring his own clothes to him if he would wait at the nearest public house where he could change."

"Quite right," said Sam, nodding approvingly. "Now go and hurry him up. Don't give him time for reflection."

The butler disappeared again, and Sam began to arrange his somewhat disordered attire preparatory to starting off on his expedition. Mr. Choke had evidently lost no time in disguising himself, for a moment later stealthy footsteps were audible in the passage. In an instant Sam had bounded out and come face to face with Mr. Choke, who started back as if he had been stung.

"Hullo! what does this mean?" exclaimed Sam, fiercely.

"Please, sir, it's a friend of mine," said the butler, with promptitude. "I was going to ask for the key to let him out."

"What do you mean, sir, by having friends at this time of day?" cried Sam, as though glad of an excuse to vent his ill humor. "Why, the fellow must have been here two hours and more. Where does your master live?" he inquired, addressing Mr. Choke abruptly.

The latter was evidently quite unprepared for this question, but Sam's manner was so peremptory that he had no opportunity of considering his reply. He mentioned the name of the street in dangerous proximity to the one in which he resided, apparently because it came first to his mind.

"I will speak to you afterwards, Simmonds," said Sam, taking his hat from the stand with an imperative movement; "and as for you, sir, I shall accompany you home and complain to your master. I don't choose to have other people's servants lurking for hours about my house, and I've no doubt your master will be gratified to hear how you waste your time."

Sam did not wait to observe the effect upon Mr. Choke of this startling announcement. The fact was, he hardly dared trust himself to look at him, for, after a single glance at her admirer, Mrs. Multiple had retired with precipitation into the background, and Sam feared every moment that her mirth would prove infectious. He therefore hastened to unlock the door, and Mr. Choke followed him into the street, apparently in a dazed frame of mind. But all of a sudden the unfortunate man seemed to realize his position. He started, glanced nervously around him, and then put up his hand to hail a cab.

"Hi! what are you about?" cried Sam. "I don't want a cab. It is a short distance and I prefer to walk. You lead the way, and I will follow."

Mr. Choke looked painfully undecided for a moment, and glanced at Sam as though he meditated making an appeal to him. He checked himself, however, and started off with an air of desperation down the street at a rapid pace. Sam followed more leisurely at a little distance, keeping him well in sight, and evidently enjoying the episode.

What Mr. Choke's feelings were, it was not difficult to conjecture. He shambled along, with his eyes upon the pavement, overwhelmed with confusion, and keenly conscious of his ridiculous appearance. The clothes he wore were many sizes too small for him, and though the livery was of the quietest description, the brass buttons and the striped waistcoat were unpleasantly conspicuous. Possibly he may have consoled himself with the idea that he was not likely to be recognized in such a garb, but if so, he was cruelly mistaken. Sam had arranged that half-a-dozen irreverent young members of the club to which Mr. Choke belonged should be on the alert, and the consequence was that the poor wretch met more of his acquaintances in a short distance than he had ever done before in his life. But at Sam's particular request none of them gave any outward sign of recognition, so that the victim was spared the anticipation of the endless chaff and the ridicule which awaited him.

Sam had guessed, from the resolute manner in which Mr. Choke hurried along, that he had resolved to adopt the wisest course under the circumstances, and make the best of his way home, without wasting time in futile attempts to elude or shake off his persecutor. He was, therefore, not surprised when Mr. Choke passed without stopping along the street which he had given as his address, and turned his steps desperately toward his own residence. On reaching his destination, he paused on the doorstep and turned round to Sam.

"This is the house," he murmured, as the latter came up.
